U.S. Trio to Orbit Moon By Yule if Test Successful

By EDWARD K. DELONG
UPI Space Writer

SPACE CENTRE, Houston (UPI) — Three Apollo spacemen may spend Christmas Day circling the moon, it was learned today.

Sources said within the past six weeks the space agency planners have created new blueprints to orbit the three-man crew around the moon at an altitude of some 70 miles. The astronauts would spend a full day in lunar orbit, possibly Christmas Day itself.

Plans call for astronauts Frank Borman, James Lovell and William Anders — the second Apollo crew — to circle the moon 10 times, reliable sources said. A landing attempt on this flight would be impossible because the Apollo moon landing craft will not fly with the crew.

●

A prime objective of the mission, sources said, is to photograph in black-and-white and in color the five sites for Apollo landings on the moon.

The earliest opportunity for U.S. spacemen actually to land at one of these sites is believed to be the fall of 1969.

Sources pointed out adoption of the December lunar orbit plan depends on the success of America's first manned Apollo, scheduled to fly next month..

If major problems develop on this maiden flight with men, called Apollo 7, it would force a switch to less ambitious plans for the second flight, sources said. Apollo 7 is scheduled to circle the earth up to 11 days, starting around Oct. 11.

●

The space agency's official position on the second manned Apollo, called Apollo 8, is that it will be a low earth orbit mission. Officially, the only difference between the first and second flights is that the second will be launched by a Saturn 5 moon rocket instead of the smaller Saturn 1.

It will be the first manned flight on Saturn 5.

The space agency announced its official version of Apollo 8, inserting it into the moonflight timetable as an extra flight. It said time-consuming problems with the moon lander had forced the change, placing the moon lander aboard the third flight instead of the second.

At the time he made this announcement, Apollo chief Lt.-Gen. Samuel Phillips said the Apollo 8 mission might be expanded if all goes well with Apollo 7.

He opened the door to a lunar orbit mission, calling it "a technically and operationally feasible possibility." But he said he was "in no position to speculate on the possibility itself or the probability."

●

Sources close to the space agency said flight planners have worked in high gear to create the lunar orbit plan, the prime flight plan unless something bad happens on Apollo 7.

They said, however, it still must be approved by space agency administrator James E. Webb. The most likely launch dates would run from Dec. 20-25.

The astronauts would ride into space from Cape Kennedy atop the 7.5-million-pound-thrust Saturn 5. Their trip out would last two and one-half days. If all went well, they would drop into orbit around the moon for 20-26 hours.

●

The lowest they might safely come, sources said, would be about eight miles from the moon in an egg-shaped orbit.

Sources said the astronauts' path around the moon would carry them over the five sites across the centre of the moon's face where Apollo spacemen plan to land.

Rhodesia Asks Talks With U.K.

SALISBURY (CP) — Rhodesian Premier Ian Smith said today he is prepared to resume talks with Britain on any "constructive and sincere" basis, but he is not very optimistic about reaching a settlement of the Anglo-Rhodesian constitutional deadlock.

But Britain must make the first moves to get the talks started again, Smith told a press conference the day after his government finally won full legal recognition from the highest court in Rhodesia.

"The ball is in their court," he said.

He was asked whether he would be ready to resume negotiations with Britain on the terms of the abortive talks of December, 1966. He replied: "I would be prepared to go to talks on any basis which I thought was constructive and sincere."

From London, The Associated Press reported the Commonwealth office commented in a statement that Britain also is "prepared for a constructive and sincere dialogue," but that Smith's statement "on the face of it . . . contains nothing new or different from what we have know to be his position . . ."

Smith and British Prime Minister Wilson reached a tentative settlement aboard the British naval cruiser Tiger in 1966, but it was turned down by Smith's government colleagues in Salisbury.

Rhodesia's top Court of Appeal Friday ruled that British courts had no legal authority over Rhodesia and that the constitution under which the colony declared its independence in 1965 was valid.

The white-minority regime of Smith declared independence from Britain rather than give majority rule to four million black Africans.

IMPOSED SANCTIONS

Subsequently first the Commonwealth and then the United Nations declared sanctions against Rhodesia in an attempt to force Smith to change.

Smith told a press conference if there was no settlement he does not doubt Rhodesia's ability to survive.

"The only question is how long the haul would have to be," he said.

"But we will not accept anything which is not in the interests of Rhodesia, and that is why we have no settlement so far."

Smith said he did not think the British government will be willing to negotiate on the basis of the first stage of the two-stage constitution approved at last weekend's ruling Rhodesian Front party congress.

Under the proposed constitution for the next five years blacks would have representation in newly-created provincial parliaments and the National Assembly. But after five years restrictions will make it difficult for most blacks to reach the National Assembly.

Bomb Proves Dud

ISTANBUL (AP)—A manhunt was underway for a mysterious foreigner who delivered a package "believed to contain a bomb" to the Soviet consulate in Istanbul Friday, police reported today. The device did not go off.

New Ban Placed On Czech Press

PRAGUE (CP)—New censorship regulations that include a ban on reports of casualties from the Soviet bloc invasion were disclosed today.

But a top Czechoslovak Communist beat the new curbs.

Zdenek Mlynar, a party secretary and member of the ruling Communist presidium, told a nationwide television audience Friday night that "more than 70" Czechoslovaks died "under tragic circumstances" following the Aug. 20 Soviet-led invasion. Not a victim had "raised a weapon," he said.

Circulation of the new rules coincided with the Czechoslovak National Assembly's approval of a new press law Friday. Copies were received at editorial offices before Mlynar's television appearance, but it was understood they were not to take effect until today.

It was believed to have been the first time any party leader has publicly discussed the number of Czechoslovak casualties suffered during the invasion.

CLAIMS MISTAKES MADE

Mlynar also told the nation that Alexander Dubcek's reformist regime was guilty of political mistakes and naivete which probably led to the invasion.

"It should have never happened that somebody should have been given enough room to spit at everything we have done over the years," he declared.

He referred to anti-Soviet and anti-Communist criticism permited after Dubcek, Communist party chief, started Czechoslovakia's liberalization drive last January.

"We didn't win their confidence and they acted according to their evaluation of the situation" in ordering the invasion Aug. 20, Mlynar said, although he added that he disagreed with the decision to invade.

Mlynar is coming to be regarded as critical of Dubcek within the privacy of the party.

But it was not clear whether his speech was aimed at placating the Russians in an effort to get them to withdraw the occupation troops, or amounted to an argument that Dubcek doesn't understand Moscow's thinking and is on another collision course with the Russians.

TIMING SIGNIFICANT

It was considered significant that Mlynar's television speech came 24 hours after cancellation of a hard-hitting pre-taped TV speech by Dubcek. The Dubcek speech, toned down and broadcast several hours later than scheduled, deleted the party leader's statements that the return of press censorship was a backwad step and that anti-Communist forces were at work in other Communist countries besides Czechoslovakia.

Meanwhile, the National Assembly—defiant in the early days of the occupation—formally approved without debate legislation curbing press freedom and banning the establishment of new political parties, both actions demanded by Moscow.

Generals, Admiral Purged by Chinese

HONG KONG (AP) — The anti-Communist Hong Kong Times today named 45 Chinese army generals, an admiral and four political commissars which it said have been purged in the last year by Communist party Chairman Mao Tse-tung and Defence Minister Lin Piao.

Heading the list were Marshal Ho Lung and Senior Gen. Lo Jui Ching, two top-ranking men in China's military hierarchy before Mao's Cultural Revolution began.

Both had been previously reported purged by other sources.

Ho Lung was deputy chairman of the national military commission, China's highest military leadership body. Lo Jui Ching was secretary-general of the commission and also chief of the army general staff.

Also listed was Lt.-Gen. Hsiao Yu Yung, chief administrative officer of the commission who, according to previous reports reaching Hong Kong, had been accused of being one of the masterminds behind all an alleged plot to overthrow Mao.

Others on The Times list either held — or, if the report is not true, still may hold—important national or regional military posts.

The Chinese language Times said it had compiled the list from information gathered by its own sources inside China.

There was no way to confirm the report in Hong Kong, but if true it would mean that a sizeable segment of China's old-line military leadership had been wiped out.

U.S. SPYING, SAYS SOVIET

MOSCOW (UPI) — Russia said today U.S. planes have penetrated Czechoslovak air space to spy out positions of Soviet troops.

A Sunday supplement to the official Soviet foreign office publication Izvestia linked the U.S. and West Germany in espionage attempts along the Czechoslovakian frontier.

The illustrated supplement, Nedelya, printed what it called dispatches from correspondents in Czechoslozakia who visited the country's border with West Germany.

Allied Thrust Into DMZ Backed by Naval Guns

SAIGON (AP) .—Southern allied forces, supported by tanks and naval gunfire, thrust into the southern half of the so-called demilitarized zone between the Vietnams Friday and reported killing 158 North Vietnamese soldiers in heavily-fortified positions.

Farther south, one of the U.S. Army's most decorated field generals, Maj.-Gen. Keith L. Ware, was killed when his command helicopter crashed in flames near the Cambodian border.

Southern casualties in the DMZ assault were four killed and 46 wounded, spokesmen said. All of the dead and about half the wounded were South Vietnamese. U.S. army and marine units participated in the attack.

Military spokesmen said the assault was a spoiling action designed to blunt an expected drive south by two North Vietnamese divisions. It also was meant to relieve Northern pressure on outposts in the northern provinces of South Vietnam.

The DMZ, which extends about three miles on each side of the border, was created at the Geneva Convention in 1954 to serve as a neutral buffer zone. But North Vietnamese troops have used it as a sanctuary for their troops menacing Southern allied outposts.

MARKS FOURTH DRIVE

Friday's assault was the fourth major drive into the South Vietnamese half of the zone, although there have been a number of reconnaissance patrols into the area.

The first announced Southern allied thrust into the zone came in May 1967, when U.S. marines moved in for five days.

The helicopter crash that killed Ware came as the general, commander of the U.S. 1st Infantry Division, was inspecting his troops. They chased Communist troops toward the Cambodian border following a two-day battle near Loc Ninh, a few miles east of the border.

It was not known whether the 'copter was brought down by Communist fire.

A military spokesman said Ware and seven others on board the craft were killed.

Only 1½ hours before Ware's helicopter crashed, his troops had been engaged in scattered fighting that swirled until darkness around Loc Ninh.

Ware, 52, who won the Medal of Honor, the United States' highest for gallantry, and the Silver Star during the Second World War, was the fifth U.S. general to die in the Vietnam war and the second Southern allied general killed in the last week. South Vietnamese Brig.-Gen. Truong Quang An, 35, was killed Sunday when gunners shot down his helicopter, also near the Cambodian border.

FORGIVEN and asked to come back as special adviser is Big Minh, Gen. Duong Van Minh, who was sent into exile following overthrow of South Vietnamese President Diem in 1963.

Royal Oak Rezoning Sought for Theatre

Application has been made to Saanich municipality for light industrial and drive-in theatre use on 24 acres at Royal Oak.

The applicant is Hallatt, Stewart and Company, lawyers representing West Coast Theatre Service Limited. The site is bounded by Patricia Bay Highway, Glanford Avenue and Raymond Road.

A spokesman said the rezoning application supersedes one for warehouse use submitted earlier but tabled by council pending the outcome of municipal plans for the area.

It has been indicated that Saanich plans are several months away from being completed.

PROTEST REZONING

Residents earlier strongly opposed any suggestions of wholesale rezoning to light industrial and warehouse use in the area stretching from Royal Oak Shopping Centre to the Simpsons-Sears warehouse near Douglas Golfland.

Meanwhile, redevelopment of Royal Oak Shopping Centre has been applied for but this does not require a change in rezoning.

Planner Tom Loney said the changes indicated were the removal of some buildings and the building of a new food store and additional shops.

Roberts Bank Rail Protest Turned Down

A protest by the Lower Mainland Regional Planning Board against the route selected for a British Columbia Hydro Authority rail line to the Roberts Bank deep-sea port has been rejected by Frank Richter, Commercial Transport Minister.

He said Friday he is "certainly not impressed" from an engineering point of view with the board's feeling that a route along the Fraser River should have been selected rather than the Boundary Bay route approved by the government.

Members of the board, representing 26 lower mainland municipalities, voted unanimously Thursday against the Boundary Bay route and pledged a continued fight to get it changed.

RICH ART HAUL MADE IN RAIDS

LONDON (AP) — Paintings and drawings worth more than $400,000 were stolen from two of Britain's finest collections in art raids discovered Friday.

The missing masterpieces include works by Renoir, Pissarro, Rubens and Thomas Rowlandson, the 18th century English caricaturists.

One haul, from a country house, was estimated to have been worth $240,000. The works of art belong to Maj. Leonard Dent.

The second raid was at the London home of Count Antoine Sellern, where paintings valued at $168,000 were taken.

More Trade With Canada Caribbean Aim

By NORMAN CRIBBENS

The Caribbean countries are looking to Canada for more trade, more investment and "more hospitable" immigration laws.

"We would like you to accept more of our skilled and semi-skilled workers," Frank Stephens, a Member of Parliament in Trinidad and Tobago, told 80 delegates to the commonwealth Parliamentary Association, meeting in the B.C. Legislative chamber here today.

Interviewed later, Mr. Stephens said Canada accepts seasonal farm workers and a limited number of domestics from the Caribbean.

"Doctors, nurses and teachers are always welcome," he said, "but Canada's immigration laws are unfavorable to unskilled and semi-skilled workers."

Addressing the Commonwealth Parliamentary Association, under the chairmanship of B.C. Speaker William Murray, Mr. Stephens said:

"We sincerely hope you will ask your government in Ottawa to give greater attention to the Caribbean area. We hope you will press for a free trade Commonwealth area to include Canada and the Caribbean countries."

INCENTIVES OFFERED

Mr. Stephens said Trinidad and Tobago are particularly anxious to attract Canadian investment to their hotel and tourist industry.

"We offer special tax incentives such as tax exemption on materials and equipment imported for setting up tourist attractions. And we believe a taxation treaty with Canada would be beneficial to us both."

Mr. Stephens said Canadian teachers, particularly mathematics and science teachers, are very welcome in the Caribbean, and a number have already been accepted.

WELL RECEIVED

Delegates to the wind-up conference of the ninth annual session of the Commonwealth Parliamentary Association, including senators and MPs from Ottawa and MLAs from all 10 provinces, gave Mr. Stephens a hearty ovation.

Premier V. C. Bird of Antigua said Caribbean countries offer increasing tourist facilities to vacationers and some 30 new hotels have been built in his country in the last two years, many by Canadian investors.

After a workshop on parliamentary matters, held in the Legislative Buildings this afternoon, delegates and their wives were entertained at Government House by Lieutenant-Governor and Mrs. J. R. Nicholson.

WEATHER SYNOPSIS

A strong west to southwesterly flow of moist cool Pacific air will spread over B.C. today as an intense low pressure centre becomes stationary in the northern Gulf of Alaska. A few showers will occur over the province today in this moist flow but they will be present only along the outer coast on Sunday as a drying trend spreads across the province.

DRIVE EXTRA CAREFULLY Monday when approaching the junction of Hillside and Rose Street. Traffic approaching the city from the Topaz area will find a left hand jog in the soon-to-be six lane expressway as city work crews move from the newly completed section of the road to bring the old section into line. The above chart, shows what is happening as the main artery punches through the Rose-Blanshard Urban Renewal area. The six-lane expressway will link up with the existing six lanes running north to Topaz from Hillside. It is shown in the shaded centre area. The dotted lines south of Hillside mark streets already closed or soon to be closed when the renewal scheme moves further along. A similar dotted line to the left of Rose Street denotes a short dead-end street which will also be closed by the new traffic patterns. The shaded areas to the left of Rose denote streets to be widened or upgraded as part of the overall face-lifting plan. Eventually the six lanes of Rose will link directly with Blanshard and with the new Patricia Bay Highway, giving motorists easier access between the city centre and Swartz Bay.

WILDCAT STRIKE AT MILL RESUMES

LADYSMITH — Negotiations to try to settle a dispute at Ladysmith Forest Products Ltd. sawmill broke down Thursday when the 80-man crew resumed a wildcat strike.

Company, union and Forest Industrial Relations (bargaining agents for the employers) representatives were in negotiation at Vancouver Thursday when it was learned the afternoon shift at the mill did not start work.

Forest Industrial Relations adhered to their ploicy not to negotiate while men are out and the talks ended.

The men failed to resume work Firday.

They first walked off the job Tuesday in protest against the company's hiring of an outsider to operate the mill debarker machine.

The men claim an operator should have been chosen on a seniority basis from within the mill.

Acting chairman of the plant committee Bob Clay said Friday: "The present strike could have been averted if the company was prepared to discuss the problem in good faith and at least remove the cause of the problem until the grievance was settled by negotiation."

Mr. Clay said the fact responsible men with families to support walked off the job and are forfeiting wages speaks for itself as to the serious nature of the situation.

Mill manager Joseph Frumento declined to make any comment on the situation this morning.

. . . SOVIET

President Ludvik Svoboda told the assembly this was "no time for melancholy and lamentations" and that approval of the legislation would achieve a "solution which would comply with the honor and the inviolable rights and interests of our people and its socialist future."

The assembly also endorsed the government's statement that the "new situation"—meaning the Soviet bloc occupation—had forced "modifications" in the time schedule and contents of the liberalization program.

While the assembly was in session the Soviet news agency Tass charged that right-wing anti-socialist elements are still in responsible government posts.

ATTACKS CZECH PRESS

Tass also attacked the Czechoslovak press for allegedly whipping up right-wing and anti-soviet sentiment in the country.

The attack was considered the sharpest from Russia since the invasion.

Observers believe the Soviet Union is not satisfied Prague has done enough to pare down its liberalizing moves in various directions.

These are thought to include the defence of the Czechoslovak border with West Germany, the lack of measures by Czechoslovak security forces against what Moscow calls counter-revolutionaries, and the function of the re-established censorship.

The Soviet Union disclosed that Russian troops took over some guard functions on the Czechoslovak-West German border.

But Premier Oldrich Cernik emphasized Prague's view that Czechoslovakia can defend its own frontiers when he told the assembly the army will be built up to meet its new tasks "especially those concerning the guarantee of our western border."

Russia may be pressing for direct censorship instead of the self-censorship legislation approved by the assembly.

In another development, the Czechoslovak leadership denounced what it called "false reports" in Poland's and Bulgaria's Communist party newspapers.

CALL FOR PROTEST

The National Assembly presidium called on the foreign ministry to protest an article in the Polish party newspaper Tribuna Ludu which claimed the assembly's foreign affairs committee had discussed Czechoslovak neutrality on Aug. 23.

Soviet bloc newspapers have repeatedly charged that Czechoslovakia was considering a break from Communist East European orbit.

The Czechoslovak radio said the Czechoslovak ambassador in Poland would be directed to deliver a protest note.

City Housewives Angered By Milk Price Increase

Victoria housewives have threatened to use powdered milk or shop for fluid milk in grocery stores to counter a price rise which starts Monday.

One woman called the increase — adding two cents to the price of one quart of milk — appalling, and said she could not afford it.

Many women with families have indicated they will buy milk in supermarkets where it sells for two cents less per quart. Others said they may use powdered milk to supplement the amount of bottled milk they buy.

They were reacting to a general price increase announced Friday by local dairies. Northwestern Creameries Ltd. said it was raising the price of one quart containers from 32 to 34 cents for home delivery.

OTHERS FOLLOW

Other major dairies in the city indicated they would follow the price increase, which would not be applied to cream and other dairy products.

The price hike is the second in a year and follows by two months a general price increase in the Vancouver area.

It is nine cents, or 36 per cent, higher than the price of milk 10 years ago. Then, a quart of milk delivered to homes cost 25 cents.

The price was set in that range back in 1951, when it was 24 cents a quart, the highest price anywhere in Canada. (It had increased then from 15 cents in 1946.)

The price remained static through until September, 1965, when it was increased to 27 cents. In December of that year, it went up to 30 cents for home delivery, or 28 cents in stores.

Early this year the price went up again, to the level it will hold until next week.

The increase surpasses the hike in Vancouver last July, which took milk prices up to 33 cents per quart or 63 cents for two-quart jugs and 90 for three-quart jugs.

The new prices announced by Northwestern Creameries add two cents to one quart jug, and one cent per quart to a three-quart jug.

The rise was attributed by dairy officials to a new labor contract expected to be negotiated by the first of October. It will follow closely the contract signed in Vancouver two months ago.

The two-year agreement gave dairy workers there an increase of from $14 to $15 a week, with a further 20 cent hourly increase in the second year of the contract.

Increased equipment and carton costs and higher prices paid to producers through the milk board were also blamed for the price hike.

The producer-paid price for 10-gallon cans went from $5.94 to $7 in May of last year.

The housewives' answer to the increase — using powdered milks and changing their buying habits — may not last. A consumer's association representative said Friday buying milk in supermarkets could cost the shopper more.

Reds Agitate Separatists

OTTAWA (CP) — Creditiste leader Real Caouette said today Communists from France have operated in Quebec for some time trying to start a revolution and get young people to fight against the rest of Canada.

Mr. Caouette said in an interview that there are "professors at the University of Montreal" who have been sent from France to promote the separatist movement among young people in the province.

Two Injured In Traffic

Two people were admitted to hospital overnight in separate road accidents.

Michael Yanosik, 25, of 436 Niagara, suffered head, chest and hand injuries when his car collided with an oncoming auto on Fairfield at Thurlow early today.

Police said his car was eastbound on Fairfield when it struck a westbound auto driven by John Booth, 114 Wildwood. Both cars were heavily damaged.

A spokesman at Royal

CTK, the official Czechoslovak news agency, accused the Bulgarian Communist party newspaper Rabotnichesko Delo of violating the Moscow agreements by publishing a false report on the discovery of an arms cache in Czechoslovakia. There was no official Czechoslovak comment yet on a Bulgarian defence ministry statement that a Bulgarian sergeant had been kidnapped near Prague airport Sept. 9 and murdered by a "gang of counter-revolutionaries."

WARMING UP for a bigger race, Democratic presidential candidate Hubert H. Humphrey gives Hays Gorey of Time magazine a good go on the beach at Sea Girt, N.J., but came second in footrace.

U.S. Candidates Squabble Over Crime in Streets

By United Press International

Crime in the streets of America remained the number one campaign debate today as all three presidential candidates continued to sound off on it — mostly criticizing each other.

Humbert H. Humphrey called Richard M. Nixon a "Fearless Fosdick" trying to win votes by "political demagoguery."

Nixon said Humphrey was "naive" about how to handle the nation's crime crisis.

Third-party candidate George C. Wallace meanwhile blamed the problems of the cities on foreign aid, supported by both the major parties. "If we didn't spend so much money on foreign aid — and it's like going down a rat hole," he said Friday in Cincinnati, "We could have solved the problems of the cities."

Humphrey, in a sharp attack on Nixon from Sea Girt, N.J. Friday characterized Nixon as the bumbling cop in the L'll Abner comic strip. By emphasizing only civil order to the exclusion of civil justice, Humphrey said, the GOP nominee had created a "counterfeit currency with seals on one side, on the enforcement side.

"It isn't either, or. It is both. If Mr. Nixon is going to play Fearless Fosdick, that is his privilege."

Not TV Marshal

Later, in Pittsburgh, Humphrey challenged Nixon's charge that he was naive on law enforcement. "To call a man naive when you haven't even played a TV marshal, much less a police force, is ridiculous," he said.

Nixon, speaking in Cleveland Friday, said the war on poverty backed by Humphrey is "no substitute for the war on crime."

"I say that doubling the conviction rate in this contry would do far more to cure crime in America than quadrupling the funds for Mr. Humphrey's war on poverty," Nixon said.

He said "just like the administration of which he is a part, Mr. Humphrey has exaggerated and overemphasized poverty in this country as a cause of crime."

Nixon added that Humphrey was "a well-intentioned man but on this issue of the crime crisis in America his views are naive."

Change Promised

Wallace, in Cincinnati Friday, said, "When elected President, we are going to start enforcing the law. We will make it safe to walk the streets of Cincinnati."

He again attacked the Republicans, telling his audience, "If you elect the national republicans you're going to have about the same as you now. If you elect me we're going to change some trends."

Nixon's running mate, Maryland Gov. Spiro T. Agnew, also commented on the crime situation. In Chicago, scene of violent police-demonstrator battles at the democratic national convention just two weeks ago, ugnew said he and Nixon would create the "kind of atmosphere in which civil disobedience would be unnecessary."

Earlier in the day, at Erie, Pa., he said there "is no place in America for the looter or the bigot."

'Unholy Alliance'

In other policitcal developments:

Abe Fortas — Humphrey charged that Nixon and Sen. Strom Thurmond (R—S.C.) had formed an "unholy alliance" to block President Johnson's nomination of Fortas as chief justice so Nixon could name his own chief justice if elected in November. Nixon said there was "absolutely no truth whatever" in the charge. Thurmond said, "that's ridiculous."

Nixon — campaigning in the middle west, Nixon said if he lost in Indiana he would be defeated in November. He also said if he carried illinois by 5 per cent he would win. Nixon also said he did not think the U.S. should apologize or pay ransom for return of the spy ship Pueblo.

George Romney — The Michigan governor Friday denied that Nixon had offered him a cabinet post if he wins the election. But Romney did not rule out the possibility of such an offer if Nixon wins.

Nelson A. Rockefeller — The New York governor will begin a nationwide tour today on behalf of the Nixon-Agnew ticket and local COP candidates. He will visit Minnesota today and also plans to go to California, Massachusetts, Pennsylvania and "several other states."

Students Win Major Reforms

PARIS (AP) — France has announced major reforms of its tradition-bound university system in a move viewed as a concession to demands by students who touched off France's paralyzing strike wave last spring.

French Education Minister Edgar Faure, chosen by President de Gaulle to take over the ministry at the height of the June disorders, outlined the changes Friday night.

Faure promised that university examinations—a chief target of the student protestors—would be radically modified next year. But he insisted that exams postponed because of the student unrest last spring must be taken now and would have to follow the traditional pattern.

There have been dozens of incidents of students disrupting examination sessions now under way.

There was no immediate reaction from student leaders to Faure's proposals.

EFFECTIVE IN NOV.

Faure also announced reform programs for the new school year starting in November.

—Creation of an experimental centre where 7,500 students will begin a broad liberal arts curriculum similar to that used in many North American universities. French students have been forced to study within their chosen specialities.

—Students at the experimental centre also will be allowed broader participation in campus life and university administration.

—Some 1,500 literature students at the Sorbonne will take scientific courses at a suburban university centre in an effort to encourage the bridging of academic disciplines. At the same time, science students will be encouraged to take arts and letters studies. This, too, is an experimental program.

—Three more centres will be opened where students can get certificates after two-, four- or six-year intervals. The principal change here is the two-year cutoff, enabling students to use their university training in the job market earlier than in the past.

—The Paris faculty of medicine, now concentrated into one crowded centre, will be split into 10 autonomous medical schools. This will allow most students to begin their practical training in hospitals in the third year of medical school. Many medical students have been delayed in taking their hospital training because of the centralization, overcrowding and administrative backlog.

Peruvian Plight Grieves Eskimo

OTTAWA (CP) — An Eskimo woman from the Northwest Territories was shaken when she saw thousands of Peruvians barely existing in thatched shambles this summer.

"She didn't think such poverty existed outside the Canadian North," said Rev. Andrew Steinman, a Roman Catholic Oblate priest who accompanied Alice Alashuak, an artist from Povungnituk, N.W.T., to the World Craft Council meeting in Lima Aug. 26-Sept. 5.

Mrs. Alashuak felt so sorry for the Peruvians that she now wants to adopt one of their children.

"I don't know if it can be done but I will sure help her," said Father Steinman, interpreter and guide for the 49-year-old sculptress and printmaker.

They were here to say thanks to UNESCO, a United Nations agency, for a grant that allowed Eskimo representation at the Peru meeting.

Povungnituk, one of the more prosperous communities in the Canadian North, is dominated by a co-operative which grossed more than $500,000 last year selling Eskimo crafts.

Mrs. Alashuak sat in on many lectures and panel discussions at the conference attended by 800 delegates from more than 40 countries.

Five Defence Promotions

OTTAWA (CP) — The defence department Friday announced the appointments of five senior officer to become effective Jan. 1.

—Lt.-Gen. Edwin M. Reyno, 51, a native of Halifax, now chief of peronnel at Canadian forces headquarters here, will become vice-chief of the defence staff.

—Vice-Admiral Ralph L. Hennessy, 49, Ottawa, comptroller-general at Canadian forces headquarters, becomes chief of personnel.

—Maj.-Gen. Michael E. Pollard, 48, a native of Montreal, commander of air defence command, North Bay, will be promoted to lieutenant-general and become comptroller-general.

—Maj.-Gen. Maurice Lipton, 52, a native of Sydney, N.S., deputy chief of staff at North American Air Defence Command headquarters, Colorado Springs, Colo., becomes commander of air defence command.

—Maj.-Gen. G. S. Austin, 52, a native of Kamloops, B.C., deputy comptroller-general at Canadian forces headquarters, becomes deputy chief of staff with NORAD.

Albania Leaves Warsaw Nations

LONDON (UPI) — Communist Albania has pulled out of the Warsaw Pact for fear of a possible Russian attempt to extend its crackdown on Czechoslovakia to Albania's pro-Peking regime, diplomatic sources said Friday.

Recent rumors of Soviet troop concentrations near the frontier of Romania suggested the possibility of Soviet moves against fellow mavericks Yugoslavia and Albania as well. None of these rumors has been borne out, but apparently Albania is not taking any chances.

Radio Tirana, in a broadcast Friday night, said the Albanian parliament approved a law officially withdrawing the nation from the Warsaw Pact. welcomed the pullout with

The broadcast from the Albanian capital said deputies "stormy applause and jubilation."

Albania does not want to be exposed to any forceful Soviet "protection" which the Tirana government apparently fears Moscow might be tempted to proffer by invoking Albania's violations of Warsaw Pact commitments, the sources said.

Albania's membership in the Warsaw Pact stems from the days of its adherence to the Soviet bloc under Stalin. Albania was among the pact's founding members.

Promise of Light Ahead

THE FORMAL WITHDRAWAL of Albania from the Warsaw Pact yesterday was a gesture rather than a new fact in the international situation, for the small Mediterranean country has long been anti-Kremlin in its policies. But even so, the step may rightly be assessed as a sizable debit in Russia's international account: the Warsaw Pact has theoretically been weakened and the Tirana-Peking axis has been strengthened. The importance of this may be more evident in the crucial days that lie ahead for world communism. The crumbling continues on the fringe of the Iron Curtain.

This is so even though the same day saw further capitulation in Prague, where Parliament, under pressure of the Russians, passed laws abolishing freedom of the press and freedom of assembly. These two rights are always the first targets of tyranny, for where the freedom to gather and the freedom to publish criticism do not exist, the authority of a foreign oppressor or of a domestic dictator can have free rein.

Shortly after the Red Army imposed its censorship on Czechoslovakian news media a further complaint came from Moscow, that Czech writers were conveying opinions between the lines, so that otherwise innocent reports or comments carried an opposite meaning. Now even that medium of communication will be denied Czechoslovakian patriots, but the very manner of its going is as plain an admission of Russian defeat as could be devised. The self-criticism that now will come from Czechoslovakian leaders will fool no one, the confessions of "rashness and imbalance" issuing from Premier Cernik and Mr. Dubcek will be rightly interpreted throughout Europe, and nowhere more clearly than in the East, where double-talk and enforced statements are tools of the ideological trade.

But equally recognizable will be the genuineness of Albania's declaration of a formal break with the military alliance of Russia and its satellites, and the scarcely veiled implication that military retaliation by Russia would trigger support for Albania from Red China. This development does not, of course, make sudden democratic heroes out of the Albanians. They are still the subjects of a tightly ruled Communist regime, and dependent on a very questionable tie-up with Peking. But they, with Yugoslavia, are living proof that the Comintern—Russia's great concept of unified world-wide Communist domination — has not, and is not likely to, become a reality.

Czechoslovakia is a much more strategically placed bulwark in the Soviet western defences than was Albania, and so will have much more difficulty in making its escape. But the light that flared there so briefly is not totally extinguished. When the changes that have occurred in communism in the last 20 years are considered, the next two decades appear filled with promise rather than despair.

A Gamble Worth Taking

THERE HAS BEEN WIDESPREAD speculation that President Johnson intends to end the bombing of North Vietnam before November 5 as a dramatic peace gesture designed to influence the election result. The reports have persisted despite emphatic denials. The president repeated again this week that the United States must be assured of a reciprocal response from the North Vietnamese before it will act.

Some of the speculation can be attributed to recent remarks of Vice-President Humphrey, who is attempting to win the support of Democrats who were alienated by rejection of a strong Vietnam peace plank at the party's nominating convention last month. Despite his close association with Johnson policy, Mr. Humphrey made the surprising remark that he could have accepted the plank, which called for an outright end to the bombing. And Mr. Humphrey's running-mate, Senator Muskie, came out flatly this week for such a step, which he said would be a "valuable risk" the United States should take in an effort to end the war.

The situation is confused and it is unfortunate that the prolonged election campaign has influenced the peace negotiations. The North Vietnamese obviously have been exploiting the circumstances, hoping to capitalize on the open divisions in the United States.

There are two aspects to President Johnson's reluctance to follow up with a complete ban his March 31 order limiting the bombing to the less populated areas of the North Vietnam panhandle. One is the fear based on previous experience that the Communists will take advantage of the "all-clear" to move more men and supplies into South Vietnam. The other is a desire not to appear weak by giving in to pressure from Hanoi.

Are these objections valid if they stall the Paris peace talks? There was some new evidence this week that they are not. One development was a persuasive argument presented publicly by Mr. Arthur Goldberg, the former ambassador to the United Nations, in favor of a bombing pause. He said ending the raids would enable the United States to take the initiative in the Paris negotiations by insisting on steps to ensure that North Vietnam was not thereby gaining a military advantage.

But the arguments are not conclusive and it is obvious that there is risk involved for the United States. As Mr. Goldberg pointed out, any course of action, including standing pat, involves the risk of a wider conflict. The question to be answered is which gamble promises to be the most fruitful. At this stage the odds appear to favor a bombing halt.

The Powerful Future

SUGGESTIONS HEARD FROM time to time that eventually nuclear power plants will supplant orthodox hydro-and-coal-powered production units are usually pitched for some indefinite time in the future. But the whole wonderland of cheap, abundant power is brought strikingly nearer by an announcement of the U.S. Atomic Energy Commission that a new type of reactor may be in use in the 1970s, known as a "liquid metal fast breeder reactor". By the 1980s it is hoped to generate electricity by this method on a commercial basis.

The magic of the new fast breeder reactor is that it uses about 70 per cent natural uranium — fairly common—compared with the less than one per cent used in present power reactors. The non-fissionable but fertile uranium is transformed into energy-releasing fissionable material in the breeder reactor. If successful, this would open up supplies of fuel extending many centuries ahead.

The concept of vast, cheap power sources could, of course, revolutionize the world's industry and production. It could make obsolete the expensive long-distance transmission systems which now are necessary to bring power from isolated hydro sites to urban areas. It could provide under-developed nations with one of the means of becoming self-sufficient. It could bring much nearer the brave new world of freedom from labor which has spurred mankind for generations.

And, of course, it could put right on our doorstep the problem of how to manage and control, for man's benefit rather than his ruin, all these unprecedented developments.

All Help Short of Aid for the Czechs

Frye

IN the all-out tug-of-war which continues between Moscow and Prague, the Czechoslovaks still sorely need outside help. But finding ways to get it to them will be one of the toughest jobs diplomats have tackled in recent times. There is still very little the outside world can do. Military help has always been impractical. Loans for industrial modernization and hence for economic independence from the Soviet Union, have apparently been "negotiated" out of consideration. Czecholsovakia is not to be allowed such freedom.

What the outside world can do, if it will, is to keep the fire of moral indignation burning under Moscow.

Waiting for 'Normal'.

This will be a useful increment to Prague's bargaining power, influencing the evolving definition of what constitutes "normalization" in Czechoslovakia. When the situation there is "normalized," Soviet troops are to be withdrawn.

The principal available source of international pressure, as former United States UN delgate Arthur J. Goldberg pointed out this past week, is the 124-nation UN General Assembly, which convenes September 24.

Unlike the veto-bound UN Security Council, which debated the matter at the height of the crisis, there are several things which the Assembly could do, a majority willing.

● It could direct Secretary-General U Thant to send a UN "presence" to Prague. The Czechs might feel obliged to refuse him entrance, but they could use the possibility of his arrival—i.e., their option to change their mind—as a bargaining lever against Moscow.

● The Assembly could call for an unconditional Soviet troop withdrawal. The troops would not obey; but pressure in that direction from the world community would again be useful to Prague in negotiating the terms of withdrawal.

● The UN could dramatize anew the basic issues of Soviet colonialism and denial of self-determination — issues which are of the greatest importance to much or all of the "third world." A continuing injury to Soviet interests in that part of the world might help impel the Kremlin toward a less immoderate course in Czechoslovakia.

Can't Ignore Risks

None of this could be easily or quickly accomplished. It would be foolhardy to disregard the risks and the political price to be paid.

Russia would fight back with every resource at its command, including public and private diplomatic pressure and blackmail.

A first-class cold-war donnybrook would result, with obvious damage to prospects of "SALT" (strategic arms limitation talks), progress on a Vietnam peace, and an East-West detente in general.

It is, moreover, by no means certain that the solid front of world criticism of Moscow, which sprang up so spontaneously in August, would remain intact in September. The fact of negotiations between Moscow and Prague has left many governments reluctant to "interfere" at "this stage."

Genuinely Doubtful

Some are genuinely doubtful, and others profess to be doubtful, that "interference" would really help the Czechs.

No one can guarantee that the issue could even be successfully inscribed on the Assembly agenda. This is an affirmative decision which requires majority approval, and a majority rarely decides to take such action over the resistance of the country needing help. (Under obvious duress, Czecholsovakia has said it does not want further discussion.)

The Soviet Union is pulling out all the stops in its fight to bar further debate. In a move reminiscent of its tactics in the dues-arrears battle, it threatened this past week that "normal operation" of the UN would be "prevented" — that is, that Soviet-bloc delegates might walk out — if there were "any further attempt" to consider Czecholsovakia.

A number of UN member countries, feeling the Soviet lash, probably would be grateful for a convenient device to dodge a judgment on the merits. Denial of the agenda on the ostensible grounds of Czech disapproval would be such a device.

Goldberg, who had such an unhappy and frustrating time trying to get the UN to discuss Vietnam in a constructive context, would be the first to appreciate the difficulty which his successor, George W. Ball, is likely to have with Czechoslovakia.

Goldberg, too, would be likely to be among the first to acknowledge that the United States would be in a stronger position to enlist UN support for self-determination in Czechoslovakia if Washington had taken a more consistent stand for action — not just talk — on behalf of self-determination in southern Africa.

Don't Drop Case

Obstacles and handicaps aside, however, it is obvious that the United States and/or a group of other countries are going to have to try to mobilize further UN backing for the Czech liberals. To drop the case at this stage without additional effort would be unthinkable.

'Insulting Provocations, Gross Intrusions'

Western

IN the course of his most recent display of international bad manners, Gen. de Gaulle announced earlier this week that the election of a French-speaking prime minister from Quebec would lead to no modification of French policy towards Quebec. To the new, and unfortunate, French ambassador to Canada it must be obvious, however, that Mr. Trudeau's election has profoundly modified the climate of Franco-Canadian relations. In general, English-speaking prime ministers have been extremely reluctant to engage in controversy with personalities of the French government. Mr. Pearson's rebuke of Gen. de Gaulle was a quite exceptional response to an overt provocation of such grave character that it could not be ignored. Even on that occasion subsequent comments emphasized the normalcy of relations between the two countries: normal in the sense, presumably, that there was no rupture of diplomatic or economic relations.

Mr. Trudeau shares none of these English-Canadian inhibitions and is not by temperament inclined to turn the other cheek. His attitude was made plain to the country in the election campaign and he has been given a massive mandate by both linguistic communities. Thus, whether Gen. de Gaulle changes or not, the situation has been radically changed by events beyond his control.

This was manifest on Wednesday when the prime minister repeatedly seized upon opportunities to lash the French president with stinging rebukes and scornful gibes.

It was the more effective because Mr. Trudeau came to his press conference armed with something much better than strained de Gaullist analogies and generalities. He had in the Rossillon affair a clear case of French interference in Canadian internal affairs.

Sought Direct Links

Mr. Rossillon is not merely an official personage but, according to Mr. Trudeau, an official of the French prime minister's staff. Although there is a Franco-Canadian cultural agreement, he undertook his mission to Manitoba — via Ottawa and Quebec City — without the knowledge of the Canadian government. The apparent object was to create direct links between Paris and the French-speaking Manitoba community.

The prime minister used biting language which should enliven considerably the report of Ambassador Siraud to his superiors in Paris. It was, he thought "distasteful" that the French government should act in this "underhanded and surreptitious way." He added some comments about "secret agents" coming in to agitate among our people, and about the manifest danger that such interference could provoke a backlash injurious to the progress of linguistic reform.

With the ground thus well prepared. Mr. Trudeau was drawn with a minimum of encouragement into more general comments on Gen. de Gaulle's public thoughts of Monday. At that time the president, who seems to regard Biafra as an African Quebec, meditated aloud about the failure of federations, mentioning Canada, Nigeria, Rhodesia, Malaysia and Cyprus. He supported Biafra's right to self-determination and, in the course of the same conference, condemned the Soviet action against Czechoslovakia.

Poured Salt in Wounds

Mr. Trudeau observed that unitary states also have their problems as evidenced by the succession of constitutions in France. He added rather mildly that there were some striking examples of successful federations, including the United States. With these deceptively academic observations out of the way, he emptied a salt-shaker into some current wounds by calling attention to French efforts to meet the demands of Bretons, Basques and Alsatians for "less colonialism by the Parisians."

Since the basis of French policy, as reaffirmed in the Czechoslovak case, is respect for national sovereignty, Mr. Trudeau expressed wonder at the attempts of the French president to intervene in countries other than his own. He had an explanation, though. French ministers had evidently been so shaken by the events of recent months that they had not yet recovered their sense of logic.

From all this Mr. Siraud is entitled to conclude and to report to his government that there is a more than seasonal chill in the Ottawa air. This is the new normalcy, of Canadian acceptance but not of Canadian making. It will presumably continue so long as Gen. de Gaulle maintains a policy compounded of insulting provocations and gross intrusions into Canadian affairs.

The more fortunate French ambassadors are posted with the paratroopers to places such as the republic of Chad.

Nature Rambles

By FREEMAN KING

GO for a hike along the beach northwards from Mt. Douglas Park. Along the edge of the tide are many species of seawoods that have been washed ashore. Some items are bleached out and look like thin gray paper. They are probably Sea Lettuce.

Pieces of the brown Turkish Towel may be seen; it looks very much like a drab piece of bath towel. You will be able to spot some seaweed that looks like a twisted rope. It may be mixed up with the kelp and could be a species called the Hooked Rope or Hooked Skein.

Take a close look at the blades of the kelp and you may find living there one of the colonies of Bryozoa. These look like a grey circle with tiny dark spots in the centre; each circle is an individual animal.

Examine the blade more closely and perhaps you will find a minute yellow dot-like substance. This could be an egg of a small snail that lives amongst the kelp.

In some places where the water is deep and there is a rocky bottom the kelp plant will grow to 90 feet in length, none of the seaweeds has any roots, but they grow a holdfast to keep them anchored to the bottom. As you wander back take a close look at the clay banks. See the many strata that were laid down by the receding glacier of long ago. At the top is the over-burden containing the living plants and the soil, then perhaps a layer of brown clay, then a layer of gravel. This will change again perhaps to a band of sand, then again to a clay that has many smooth, water-worn rocks embedded in it.

Look at some of this darker clay: see how it, too, is in layers, each layer being laid down at a different time. The pressure of the material pressing down on it has formed a compact mass.

In this medium it is possible you can find small pieces of almost fossilized wood and the imprints of some ancient root system.

Note how certain plants have established themselves in this type of soil, especially the Horse Tail.

Safety First

May I, through the medium of your newspaper, appeal to mothers not to allow small children to play with glass bottles or jars? Why not give them plastic ones?

Recently a well meaning neighbor gave my child a glass bottle. I immediately went out to take it away from her, but she had already smashed it and was sitting on the cement sidewalk with glass all around her. Luckily, she only suffered a slightly cut finger.

I have seen other small children playing with glass bottles in full view of their mothers, and their mothers allow it, obviously not thinking of the danger to the child. — A Subscriber.

Sewerage Down Under

I gather from letters from friends in Victoria that Saanich taxpayers are to be asked to vote on consolidation and possible extension of their sewers. I have also read a forthright and logical assessment of the situation by Dr. Marcus Bell.

I agree with Dr. Bell's conclusion that "only a fool would choose ocean disposal in these circumstances" but I am surprised that he emphasizes composting as the answer to sewage disposal problems.

Since leaving Victoria three months ago I have been travelling and observing almost constantly. I have also discussed disposal problems with many authorities. The places that are disposing of sewage satisfactorily without polluting their natural waters are doing it by upgraded septic tank practice. This community which we have chosen as our new home (Mulgrave Shire, in North Queensland) has its own crews doing the septic tank installations. Cost to the property owner is very small — nothing is added to the general taxes and there is no maintenance cost. There is no sewage in the ditches and the beaches are fabulously clean. This area, incidentally, had a variety of soil conditions ranging from pure sand to heavy red and yellow clay and subsurface rock; the standard dwelling site is 66' by 132' although many are only half that size, and the annual rainfall (concentrated in three months) is eighty-seven inches.

Dr. Bell made his point. There are better ways of getting rid of sewage than dumping it in the sea. The essence of his message was that Greater Victoria should take a good look at some of the alternatives. No person who recognizes the value of clean coastal waters would disagree with this.—Lloyd Smith, Palm Cove, P.O., via Cairns, Queensland 4870, Australia.

Decided By Ballot

London Free Press

THE Canadian Union of Students in endorsing a policy which affirms the right of a "sovereign" Quebec to establish a separate government from the rest of Canada if it so "wishes" sounds a lot like the "let-them-go" line of thinking that made some headway in English-speaking Canada in recent years.

The reasons might be the same too. It became popular, before proper examination of the issue, to conclude the easiest and thus the "best" way to handle the Quebec problem was to push it aside; to let Quebec go off into a reserve of impotent isolation, while the privileges and the advantages of the overwhelming North American majority were undisturbed.

That as much as anything may be the reason Quebec universities pulled out of CUS a few years back.

Some national political parties grasped at the "special status" bit, presumably with the status of the rest of the country to be untouched.

It required the alertness of French Canadians like Jean Chretien and Pierre Trudeau to unmask all this as a potential trap that could relegate French Canada to the very ghetto it was trying to escape.

Of course, as the Students' Union says, if Quebec in a process of democratic self-determination, decides it must leave Canada, it should not, and in fact could not, be stopped. But Quebec has decided no such thing. On the contrary the issues were argued over clearly at the last federal election, and the decision of both French Canada and English Canada was for one Canada, with constitutional rights and opportunities for two language and cultural groups across the whole country.

New Plan Moves City To Country

PEOPLE LIKE to live in cities but there must be greater dispersal if the choking conditions of "megalopolis" are to be avoided.

By ATHELSTAN SPILHAUS
UNESCO Features

A federal commissioner recently expressed an opinion typical of the "hopelessness approach" to city problems when he said, "We cannot, even if we would, dismantle the urban complex". I disagree completely.

The overgrown urban complex must be selectively dismantled and dispersed if we are to cure the ills of the megalopolis.

Half of the people in the United States live on one per cent of the land, and there is a continual drift to the big cities. Urban renewal encourages the increase in the size of the cities.

Two or three storey slum buildings are torn down, and sterile, high-rise, so-called low-cost housing brings more people into the centre of the city than ever before, compounding the problem.

Surrounded By Open Land

I propose, as a corrective, development of a system of dispersed cities of controlled size, differing in many respects from conventional cities, and surrounded by ample areas of open land. The proposed Minnesota Experimental City will be a prototype.

People like to live in cities. Dispersal does not mean that the whole United States is to become a single sprawling suburb, such as California is becoming. Dispersal refers to cities big enough to offer the advantages of city living yet small enough not to be subject to unplanned overgrowth. Each, with its surrounding reserved land, would be a separate unit.

If the present 200 million people in the United States were living in 800 cities with a population of a quarter of a million each, and if these cities were scattered evenly across the United States, we would not have the pollution, riots, and many of the other ills that develop when cities become too large.

Need More Urgent In Rest of World

If the need for dispersal is urgent in the United States, it is even more urgent in the world as a whole, especially in those countries where the birth rate is much higher.

Let us look ahead and suppose that the world population, if we do nothing about population control, reaches 15 billion by A. D. 2068. And let us assume that our technology permits us to build cities on any solid land, from Antarctica to the tropics, from desert to rain forest.

The area of all the continents is about 2,300 million acres. If we built cities of controlled size, dispersed throughout the world, there would be 60,000 cities of a quarter of a million people each, such city would be surrounded by 40,000 acres, or 64 square miles of open land. The alternative of allowing the present big cities to grow unplanned, would mean that vast tracts of the earth's surface would be uninhabited and the urban complexes would be intolerable.

The advent of atomic power opens up the possibility of building verdant cities even in desert areas, if these areas are near the sea. An atomic plant which would generate a million kilowatts of electricity could distill 500 million gallons of fresh water from seawater and, from the residue, make enough fertilizer to grow the food to feed the entire population of ten cities the size of the proposed experimental city.

We must try these schemes and others that will emerge. The place to try them is in new experimental, dispersed cities, such as that envisaged in the Minnesota plan.

Placed 100 Miles From Other Centres

Early in planning the Minnesota Experimental City we set some guidelines. (1) The ultimate maximum population would be a quarter of a million. The community would be (2) economically viable as a unit of the U.S. economy, (3) truly experimental, (4) at least 100 miles from any major existing urban centre, and (5) a densely populated centre surrounded by open land.

This surrounding land, which would have an area perhaps 100 times that of the densely populated centre, would be used for forests, outdoor museums, recreation or agriculture, or just left as a rural area.

Plans for building the Experimental City differ in many respects from plans for building other kinds of cities. Conventional cities grow above the ground, and as they grow, and as people demand transportation, power, water, gas, and sewers, the ground and rock underneath the city are tunnelled for subways or the streets are dug up and the utility lines are buried.

Whole Substructure Will Be Excavated

In the Experimental City the whole substructure will be planned and excavated, and the power lines and utility lines will be installed, before the city is built. Knowledge that the city is to be of a certain size will make this possible.

Costs of all city services will be part of the rental, occupancy charges — the "hotel bill" — for individuals, businesses, or industry in the city. Much of the equipment for servicing the city will be invisible and inaudible underground. Water and building materials can be stored there.

SLUM AND GHETTO districts of major North American cities must be removed but this article questions whether urban renewal schemes are the best answer. Athelstan Spilhaus is president of the Franklin Institute of Philadelphia, and this is an abridged version of an article which first appeared in Science, the Journal of the American Association for the Advancement of Science.

Heating plants and cold-storage facilities can be located there. Underground pipelines can carry out solid wastes conventionally carried by trucks. Snow or rainwater from the streets can be channelled to underground reservoirs.

All the buildings in the Experimental City will be constructed of the newest light-weight materials, and modular techniques of assembly will be used. The average useful life of a building has been estimated to be between 20 and 30 years.

All buildings in the Experimental City will be designed with this in mind, and methods of construction that leave permanent outmoded monuments or later require the services of the wrecking crew will be abandoned. We will get away from the idea of building forever and, instead, will build for living, recognizing that people have continually changing desires.

The disassembly of buildings will resemble the disassembly of an erector set. Reusable components of the building will be swallowed by the city's substructure. There will be no cluttering of streets with cranes and other moving equipment. In building new structures, the process will be reversed. Materials will be lifted from the substructure into the middle of the site, and adjacent activities will not be disturbed.

Certain parts of the Experimental City probably will be domed, so that the advantages and disadvantages of totally enclosed cities can be determined. It is our current view that not all of the city should be domed. Doming only a part of it will enable us to determine the extremes of climate under which total enclosure is economical and acceptable.

One of the most pressing problems of our urban living is transportation and the use, care, parking, and garaging of the private automobile.

Transport Without The Side Effects

How can we provide people with a transportation system that facilitates the desirable social relationships which constitute the joy of city living yet does not have undesirable side effects?

What people basically like about the private automobile is the fact that it is a small pod and gives them a sense of privacy in a world where any kind of privacy is becoming a scarce luxury. They also like the automobile because it takes them from where they are to where they want to go without stopping where everybody else wants to stop.

But when so many automobiles crowd the streets that we cannot move because of traffic jams, and when our average speed in a pollution-producing, many-hundred-horsepower vehicle is eight miles an hour, it is time to look at the alternatives.

Now in the process of design are many systems that can move people in motorless, driverless, noiseless, semi-private pods, computer-controlled so that the passengers travel from where they are to where they want to go without stopping. If you want to go to the store you don't go to the station and then walk to the store: your pod is sidetracked right into the store.

The various systems have a common denominator: they are driven by a propulsion system built into the track. The pods are inexpensive, thus many of them can be used at the same time. Moving sidewalks, moving platforms, and other wheelless systems are all technically feasible.

One important concept that has emerged in our discussions is this: if we are to use mass transportation in the Experimental City it should be free, like elevator service. You don't pay a fare to ride vertically in an elevator. Why should you pay a fare to ride horizontally? The cost can be embodied in the service costs of the city.

Among the greatest innovations that can be tried in the Experimental City are the new technologies in communications that have been developed but not yet put to practical use.

The current view is that radio frequencies should be reserved for purposes, such as communication to or from a vehicle in motion, where wires are not feasible. The substructure of the Experimental City would be wired, and coaxial cable would reach to every point where, conventionally, there would be a telephone. These wires and cables can be planned and located in the substructure even before we have a clear-cut idea of what terminals, picture-phones, computers, facsimile machines, and the like may ultimately be needed.

Urban renewal in its worst manifestations is the construction of the slums of the future. Many people in the present overgrown cities might like to move out into new complexes which provided the advantages of city life without the physical and social distress.

Tomorrow's Slums Fate of Suburbs

Many others whom the authorities say they cannot move have never contemplated moving because they have been trapped, lacking the opportunity to go anywhere else. The fact is that most of those who can afford to do so have already fled the cities, to suburbs that will become the slums of tomorrow.

We must build a city for today's city-dwellers and suburb-dwellers to go to. We must provide people with a different choice, not just that between life in a dirty overgrown city with suburbs or a completely rural existence. We can provide a middle choice — clean cities of controlled size, with plenty of space and an exciting new environment.

History Obsolete In Today's World

By GEORGE LARDNER JR.

WASHINGTON — What strikes John P. Roche after two years as resident-intellectual at the White House is "the irrelevance of history" in the making of great decisions.

Roche held forth before the American Political Science Association with a medley of impressions that, as panel chairman James MacGregor Burns remarked, would probably have gotten him the bum's rush at a convention of historians.

Unruffled, Roche, who has made something of a career of bringing his fellow intellectuals up short, summed up his stewardship as special consultant to the president with characteristic flair.

"The hell of it is," he said, "that the problem (on any given day at the White House) isn't intellectual" at all.

This, suggested Roche, who is leaving the White House to return to his professorship of history and politics at Brandeis University, is as it should be in a world where quick decisions are constantly required. In the crunch of world crisis, he implied, the "intellectual" approach simply doesn't work.

Salting his talk with examples, Roche recalled last year's crisis over the Arab-Israeli war.

President Johnson, Roche said, asked his advisers what should be done and "one or two incautious members" launched into a dissertation on the history of the Middle East.

The president, by Roche's account, listened patiently, but finally interjected in the midst of one scholary observation, and demanded: "Therefore? . . . therefore what?"

"Suddenly, "Roche said, "all the history in the world doesn't make the slightest bit of difference."

In the Middle Eastern crisis, he said, the real question was what to do if Russia "decided to bail out its clients. These questions have to answered fast and they have to be answered yes or no."

Indeed, the outgoing White House academician said, presidential decision-making is necessarily an imperfect process based, "if you're lucky, on 51 per cent of the evidence."

THE GALLUP POLL

Racially Mixed Marriages Disapproved in Canada

A slight majority of the Canadian people (53 per cent) say they do not approve of marriages between whites and non-whites. Only about a third of the population (36 per cent) say they agree with such unions.

This disapproval is expressed through all age groups except the young voters (50 per cent) who see nothing wrong with mixed racial marriages.

In an international Gallup Poll study, people of the United States express greatest disapproval of black and white unions. More than seven-in-ten Americans say they do not agree with white and non-white marriages. France, on the other hand, shows greatest approval—62 per cent.

The question: "Do you agree or disagree with a mariage between whites and non-whites?"

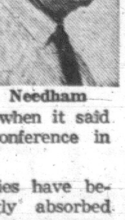
If You Want An Education, Who Needs Universities?

By RICHARD J. NEEDHAM
The Globe and Mail



Needham

The Canadian Union of Students doesn't speak for all of the young men and women attending university; I doubt that it speaks for most of them. It does speak for many of them, especially what are called the activists; and I guess it spoke for these when it said at its annual conference in Guelph:

"Our universities have become increasingly absorbed into the corporate system. The needs of this system both for trained personnel and for economically useful knowledge takes precedence over the educational aspirations of the students."

There's a good deal of truth in this; the universities are indeed tending to train people for jobs rather than educate them for life. But that's the way most students want it; they're there not to get an education, but to get a degree which will admit them into a high-paying job or a high-paying profession.

What of that minority who (to quote the CUS statement) do have "educational aspirations"? Their solution is perfectly simple — to leave the university and get an education by other, cheaper, and perhaps more effective means.

Dr. Wilder Penfield has said that you can become educated by reading, travel and talking with intelligent, experienced people. I would go right along with this; you must attend university if you want a degree, but if you simply want an education, there's no necessity to go near one.

●

Go instead to the public library, where you'll find all the truly great teachers who ever lived. Hit the road for a year and find out something about yourself. Talk to older people who've had some experience of life. Get a job, any job, and learn on it.

I'd apply this equally to high school students; those, at any rate, over 16. If a student feels (as many do) that the high school is trying to train him rather than educate him, and if his desire is to become educated, he can simply leave and follow Dr. Penfield's prescription.

The student activists, of course, will disagree. They argue that the system can and must be changed from the inside by demonstrations, sit-ins, and similar carryings-on.

I doubt these can have any useful effect, which brings me around to those demonstrations outside three Toronto high schools when they re-opened the other day.

Representatives from the Ontario Union of Students were on hand; and distributed copies of Jerry Farber's article, The Student as Nigger, which was reprinted in university newspapers across Canada last winter.

I've read the Jerry Farber article several times. It's coarsely worded, and exaggerated in tone; but I agree with its fundamental argument — that universities and especially high schools treat the student much as white people in the South treat the Negro.

They don't really regard him as a human being, with a human being's rights and dignity. (The scholarly Edgar Z. Friedenberg makes the same point, more effectively, in his study of the present-day high school, Coming of Age in America.)

But no student over 16 has to put up with such treatment. If he feels, as some do, that he is being treated without the respect due to any human being, he is entitled to leave and pursue his education by other means. He can't be forced to stay in high school any more than he can be forced to attend university.

●

So why stay? Why be angry and bitter? Why waste time and effort on demonstrations?

Why attempt to change a system which apparently suits most of the students; and which in any event is too huge and complicated to be changed in any meaningful way?

To the disgruntled student, I would say, "You want an education? Go out and get it; no one's stopping you. The whole world is out there, willing and able to teach you anything you really want to learn. It's a school, the best school of all, and there are no tuition fees."

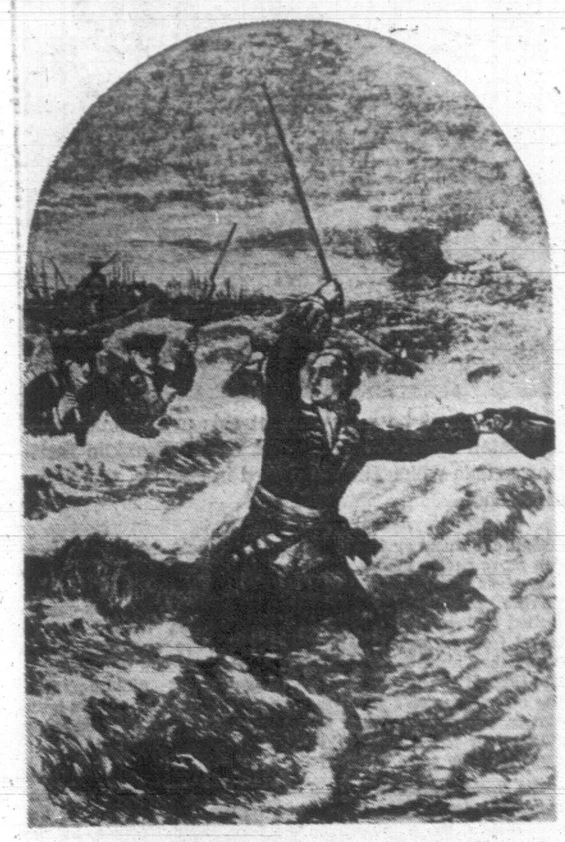
MUNCHING BROOMS FOR LUNCH

An Owlish Fascination With 'Ambulating Sawmills'

The Book Page

Edited by Anthony Jenkins



BRIGADIER JAMES WOLFE at the storming of Louisbourg comes from Leslie F. Hannon's Canada at War, published by McClelland and Stewart at $4.95 (128 pages). The book is a generously illustrated record of the major battles that have involved Canada's fighting forces from the seige of Quebec City to peace-keeping in the Middle East. It is not offered as a comprehensive history but as a picture record of adventures that are "as thrilling or harrowing" as any on the TV screen. The author declares that "politics and punditry have been skirted, or completely avoided, in this book; the keynote is action." Amidst the procession of gory glory are some interesting period photographs and advertisements.

A Yakky Mouse In Prize Book

Children of British Columbia and three Northwestern states have named a boisterous fantasy the winner of the 1968 Young Reader's Choice Award. Beverly Cleary's The Mouse and the Motorcycle was chosen in school and public library voting in the spring.

A plucky mouse, Ralph, finds vacationing Keith's toy motorcycle in their formerly fashionable but now shabby hotel in California. With a cautious pb-pb-b-b-b, Ralph rides it off the table into the wastebasket. Keith is so intrigued at finding his cycle real and Ralph so talkative, that he provides a split ping-pong ball for a helmet, and helps his jaunty friend enjoy moonlight excursions up and down the hotel halls.

LASTING POPULARITY

Ralph may lack the depth and sensitivity of another famous mouse, E. B. White's Stuart Little, but the off-handed humor and pinpoint accuracy of dialogue have already won a lasting popularity for Mrs. Cleary's book, which she said she wrote for her grade school son who doesn't like to read.

Mrs. Cleary, author of the Henry Huggins books which are also loved by middle-grade children, accepted the award last month at the Vancouver convention of the Pacific Northwest Library Association.

Clutching Grim Tales

THE WIND ALONG THE RIVER, by Frances Fraser. Macmillan of Canada, $4,25. 88 pages.

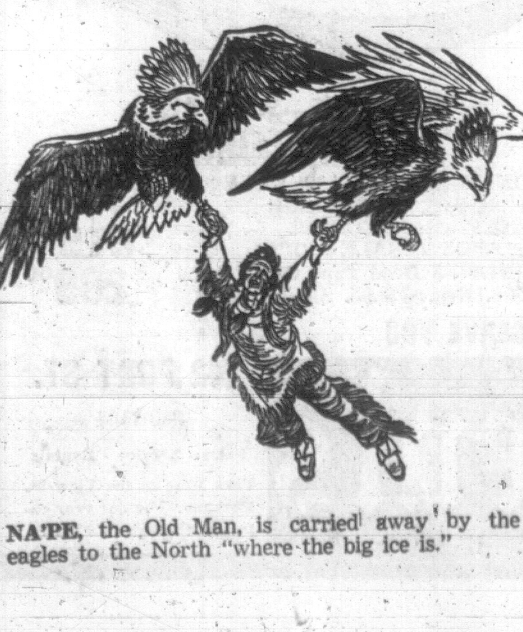
This charming little book of Indian legends was commissioned by the Centennial Committee and entrusted to a writer who has spent most of her life recording Blackfoot folk tales. Apparently Mrs. Fraser's versions have so successfully captured the spirit of the original that the Indians call her "Pretty Singing."

There is indeed a simplicity and strength here that has the elemental power of folk poetry. Many of these legends have grown out of attempts to explain certain characteristics of the natural world: why magpies have long, sparse tail-feathers and why the American eagle is bald. There is also a ruthlessness and an unswerving justice which reflects the Indian's struggle to survive in a hostile world, a hostility that is also figured in the truculence of the god-like "old ones."

BITTER RETRIBUTION

A number of these tales involve impossible deeds that must be accomplished before the warrior can marry the princess, but unlike their European counterparts, the romantic endings are followed by bitter and masculine retribution: "The beautiful daughter of the war-chief loved him and married him. But he did not forget that she had laughed and would not marry him when he had been a poor boy with a scar on his face. After a while he killed her. That is all."

This is a beautifully produced collection which will give some permanence to a culture that is rapidly disappearing. "All we have remaining is what cannot be sold, for what white man can buy a tribal memory, a legend, or a song? These can never be taken from us. Only if we forget them, or lose our love for them, can we lose them." A.W.J.



NA'PE, the Old Man, is carried away by the eagles to the North "where the big ice is."

Mother-in-Law's Fragile Claustrophobia

THE WEDDING GROUP, by Elizabeth Taylor. Clarke, Irwin & Co., $5.00. 230 pp. Reviewed by Anthony Jenkins.

The novels of Elizabeth Taylor are not as well known in Canada as they might be. The name arouses heated passions (for or against); however, the lady in question is not Miss Taylor, the love-goddess, but Mrs. Taylor, one of the most distinguished of modern British novelists.

Mrs. Taylor's first novel was published just after the war. The latest book is her 12th, and each of those novels has proved to be an impeccably ordered and lucid examination of human delusion.

One of her best books was called A Game Of Hide And Seek, and the title might well stand as the key to all her writing. She constantly explores the way that individuals play hide-and-seek with their own hopes and fears so that they are as unable to come face to face with themselves as they are with other people. In her most typical work, the characters are frequently shown making allowances for what they think others must be feeling only to find they have misjudged the situation and that those allowances have been made in vain.

Mrs. Taylor weaves her characters closely together, and yet she manages to keep the fabric of their inter-relationships in a continual state of flux.

Straight Plot With Wide Range

All this sounds rather complicated, but the joy is that Mrs. Taylor is not a "difficult" writer. Although her work is complex and highly literate, she belongs to what some critics call the "old-fashioned school" and which might better be called the "traditional" one. Her plots are interesting and straightforward, appealing to a wide range of readers in their analysis of the human predicament.

The Wedding Group centres around Cressida MacPhail, a young girl brought up in rather peculiar circumstances. Her grandfather, a piously egotistical painter, has created for himself a quasi-religious community made up of his adoring daughters and their submissive husbands. In her 18 years, Cressy has ventured into the outside world only as far as a convent school. Predictably she rebels against these strictures and sets out for the village down the hill to become independent.

TAYLOR . . . delusion specialist

Flowering Heroine Under Pressure

The rest of the story shows how her individuality flowers and blooms, and is then threatened even more seriously. Like all the other main characters in the book, she is bent by the will of those around her and by her own weaknesses.

The chief conflict is between Cressy and her mother-in-law, though the irony is that Cressy does not realise that there is a fight going on. In her desire to keep her son, David, Mrs. Little caters to Cressy's inexperience in an attempt to make herself indispensable; "That woman has them in thrall—especially the girl. She pets her, and spoils her, does all her thinking for her, and stuffs her up like a Strasbourg goose." When a baby comes along, Cressy is brushed aside by loving, helpful grandmother.

This is only one of the book's many studies in the relationship between children and parents, husbands and wives, and of the feelings of duty that those relationships impose. These family groupings are as stylized and as fragile as the Wedgwood china wedding group, the book's central symbol.

Mrs. Taylor is one of those writers whose perceptions are so finely honed that the insights one comes across on every page are not so much revelations as they are reminders of one's own experience. I know of no other writer who in so few words and with such effortless skill can sketch a room or a garden so that it remains unobtrusively in the background and yet enables the reader to enter the scene.

Yet the scenery is also functional. In this novel, it is predominantly claustrophobic, matching the atmosphere of the family ties in the foreground: autumn is sultry and over-ripe, while winter blankets everything. "The snow isolated her — deep on the paths, and in a drift against the garage door. An occasional red-faced, mufflered tradesman drove along the lane, churning up the gravelly slush, and plodded to the back door, leaving a bottle of milk, which sank inches into the snow on the step, or cold parcels of groceries. To find the damp newspaper stuck in the letter-box was the high point of the day."

'Lady Novelist' And Booming Men

Mrs. Taylor is an extremely subtle observer of character. Her wit is precise and often barbed, yet she stands back from her creations so that the plot seems to unfold because each character is what he is. One of the beauties of the book is the way the personalities of Cressy and her mother-in-law develop and change. If the men are less complex, it is because Mrs. Taylor belongs to the great tradition of feminine novelists who know the limits of their range. One of the tricks that she often plays is to let her characters discuss that patronized figure, the "lady novelist", and apparently she would admit no such restrictions:

"The reason, they say, that women novelists can't write about men, is because they don't know what they're like when they're alone together, what they talk about and so on. But I can't think WHY they don't know. I seem to hear them booming away all the time. Just listen to this lot, next to me."

But happily Mrs. Taylor does concentrate on her female characters, and (if the novel-form as we know it is not dead by then) it is a pretty safe bet that in fifty years' time the name Elizabeth Taylor will conjure up the novelist and not the film-star.

A PALEFACE SQUINT AT CRUEL CUSTER

THE RED SABBATH by Lewis B. Patten. Doubleday, 188 pages, $4.75.

Reviewed by Grant McOrmond

In The Red Sabbath, Lewis Patten tells the story of General George Armstrong Custer's last stand in the valley of the Little Big Horn River on June 25, 1867. To the historical action he adds the coloring of fiction, thus qualifying his work for inclusion in Doubleday's "Double D Western" series.

The story is told by Miles Lorette, one of Custer's scouts; the telling is marked by an irritating disregard for the fundamental principles of the English language. His narrative manages to re-create something of the life of the frontier, but fails dismally to establish valid characterizations, either of the fictional hero or of the historical figures around him.

The Red Sabbath is apt to strike any thoughtful reader who may pick it up as superficial and inept in substance and awkward in construction. However, it redeems itself to some extent by its attempt to shatter the traditional image of General Custer, the great Indian fighter.

While Patten never comes to grips with Custer's character, the general's actions are judged through the speeches of his followers.

These actions reveal him to be a proud, foolish man, inhuman in his treatment of his troops, cruel and crafty in his war against the Indians, and an inept glory hunter as a military leader. The chief glory of Custer's career, the defeat of the Cheyennes at Washita River, in 1868, is revealed as a cowardly attack on a sleeping Indian encampment.

His defeat and death in the valley of the Little Big Horn resulted from unwise haste and his decision to divide his force into three columns. Custer led the centre columns into the heart of the Sioux forces and was annihilated; the right and left columns, though savagely attacked, were able to hold out until the main body of General Terry's troops arrived.

HUNTED AS ANIMALS

The pro-Indian bias of Patten's writing will also give the readers of this paltry book an insight into American policy towards the Indians during the 19th Century. The United States was intent upon exterminating the native tribes. The Indians were hunted as animals; the living were betrayed without qualms and slain without mercy.

The Red Sabbath is a meagre book, inadequately written, but even with all its defects it manages to recreate one of the major episodes of American history more clearly than any history book. It teaches the lesson of the frontier anew: when the avarice of civilization encounters the desperation of savagery the result is the negation of humanity in a red sabbath.

PILGRIMS OF THE WILD, by Grey Owl; Macmillan of Canada; 282 pps; $2.25.

Reviewed by R. G. Lawrence

This is the republication of a book for the kind of readers who have enjoyed Gavin Maxwell's Ring of Bright Water and Eric Collier's Three Against the Wilderness. Pilgrims of the Wild associates itself with the former because both Maxwell and Grey Owl raised unusually intelligent small animals — otters and beavers — from infancy and both were fascinated by the almost human creatures with whom they shared their lives.

Both Grey Owl and Eric Collier attempted (with heartening success after great difficulties) to rejuvenate a devastated forest area by persuading beaver to settle. The idea in both instances was to use beaver dams to combat erosion and to raise the water tables of a forest.

There are, of course, many differences in the three books referred to. Grey Owl's is the oldest, having first been published in 1935, but this matters little, apart from references to the novelty of motor cars, airplanes and radio. "We all had an idea in those days that radio caused electrical disturbances that had a bad effect on the weather."

IT TOOK a smart-alec beaver like Jellyroll to lead Grey Owl — the unsophisticated trapper-turned-naturalist—to deeply-felt principles of animal conservation.

Roughness of Style

Grey Owl is the least fluent writer of the three, but that doesn't matter much either. Occasional cliches and roughness of style give the impression of immediacy, reinforcing Grey Owl's picture of himself as an unsophisticated trapper-turned-conservationist, who put pen to paper with some hesitancy. This lack of sophistication led the author at times into sentimentalizing and romantic philosophizing, but this is a small price to pay.

New readers are likely to find these three books equally gripping in terms of events and the suspense that surrounds these events. Pilgrims of the Wild concerns two pairs of beaver, principally in the setting of eastern Quebec (near Cabano and Lake Temiscouata). Grey Owl conveys very successfully the personalities of McGinty and McGinnis (the first pair) and Jellyroll and Rawhide (their successors).

Toothy Curiosity

Life was obviously never dull with two energetic and curious beavers living in the house. The attitudes of Grey Owl and his wife towards their "ambulating sawmills" oscillated between love and annoyance. For instance, two frustrated little beavers who wanted to know what was on the top of a table simply chewed the legs off during the owners' absence.

Jellyroll often played with the broom. "It also served as a quick, if rather dry lunch, or something in the nature of a breakfast food. She would delicately snip the straws off it, one at a time, while the teeth, working at great speed, chopped each into tiny portions . . . The sound produced was similar to that of a sewing machine running a little out of control. A considerable dispute raged over this broom, but in the end I found it easier to buy new brooms and keep my mouth shut."

Apart from his interest in beaver conversations, mischievous habits and intelligence, Grey Owl was led by his beaver towards his deeply felt principles of animal conservation.

Doubtlessly sympathetic readers will enjoy vicariously the pleasures and tragedies of owning beavers, but the publishers of this book have contributed two annoyances. First, several of the 14 photographs have no relevance to the text, and second, Macmillans have reprinted the original introduction from the 1935 edition.

Hugh Eayr's observations are rather fatuous (and he refers to sketches by Grey Owl evidently in the original edition but not in this), and he only hints tantalizingly at the mystery behind the identity of Grey Owl. Now, 33 years later, the publishers would have done well to have provided an up-to-date introduction that would make the content of the book more meaningful.

UPTIGHT WITH 'YAHS'

NOT BY THE HAIR OF MY CHINNY CHIN CHIN, by Sidney Bigman. Doubleday, 224 pages. $5.75.

The most effective thing about this book is its title; otherwise, it is a dull, rambling and pointless little novel.

It chronicles the listless adventures of two hippie types who scratch out an aimless existence on a Spanish farm. The book has no real shape and no style; it rambles discursively and self-indulgently on. None of the characters is differentiated save for the fact that one of them punctuates his sentences with a recurring "hmm . . . yes," while the hero grunts an occasional "Yah" and continually adjusts his underpants.

Supposedly, the point of the book is to show how a man who has once dropped out can take on all the bourgeois vices when he finds a way to make money.

But it is not at all clear whether the author feels that his hippies are reckless or commendably free. Throughout most of the book, Frank and his American wife, Steve, are shown to be pretty hopeless, but when Steve decides that Frank has sold out to the conformists one wonders where the author stands in all this. — A.W.J.

First Concert To Usher In Busy Season

Twenty-eight years ago the Victoria Symphony Society with considerable anxiety and hope launched its first orchestra with a modest concert in the Empress Hotel ballroom.

Nobody really dared to anticipate that the venture would pass its quarter-century—steadily increasing in public favor, prestige and official recognition.

But that's the way it's happened and the Victoria Symphony Orchestra today, about to raise the curtain on the 28th season, is entitled to a degree of confidence and optimism unparalleled in past experience.

Public support, which on a pro-rated basis takes second place to no comparable city on the continent, has shown steady growth and has encouraged greater Canada Council, provincial and civic support.

A threatened withdrawal of essetnial wind players through closure of the tri-service music school at CFB Esquimalt, has vanished for the present, due to the stationing here of service musicians from Chilliwack.

With its well endowed, energetic conductor, Laszlo Gati on the podium directing a strengthened orchestra, Sept. 22 and 23 at the Royal Theatre will usher in a highly promising season.

To the roster of visiting artists, of which the distinguished pianist, Moura Lympany is first, Mr. Gati has added Victoria's two most notable professional artists in duo pianists Robin Wood and Winifred Scott (Dec. 8-9), the fine Victoria Choral Society ensemble whose director is Rodney Webster (March 16-17) and the astoundingly talented young pianist, Camille Inkman of Victoria and Vancouver. (oct. 27-28).

The final program in March, hopefully, will have the distinguished Czechoslovakian conductor, Josef Hrneir, on the podium.

Altogether the full orchestra will play 25 concerts this season, 10 pairs at the Royal and five out of town, at Duncan and Campbell River. The Symphony's small string chamber orchestra will also play a concert at Campbell River.

In addition to the full season of concerts and the six recitals, the Symphony Society is also sponsoring visits to the Royal Theatre of opera — the Canadian Opera Company presenting Rossini's Barber of Seville — and ballet — the National Ballet Company's special tour program, Ballet Concert.

All events are available to subscribers at considerable discounts over single event sales and once again there is the option of selecting six concerts out of the season of 10 pairs.

ALSO BROUGHT GIFTS, IDEAS

When Laszlo Gati arrived in Victoria 14 months ago to become music director and conductor of the Victoria Symphony Orchestra, he brought with him more than his considerable experience on the podium.

He also brought his particular expertise with stringed instruments, his rich European background, administrative gifts and ideas.

One of his most fruitful ideas put to work by the symphony board, has resulted in a new dimension being added to the symphony's service to the community, the filling in of a blank spot in the musical life of the city.

●

A couple of seasons before, Famous Artists had suddenly withdrawn their winter concert series from Victoria.

This was a serious deprivation after many years of being able to enjoy some of the world's finest artists in concert.

For no matter how extensive one's record library may be, there is in truth no substitute for the real thing—the actual presence in a concert hall of the living musician performing without the artificial dynamic controls and engineered perfection of the recording studio.

But by arranging to have symphony soloists appear in recital at the McPherson Playhouse, several things were achieved.

Victoria got a celebrity concert series costing considerably less than the same series would have cost under ordinary circumstances.

●

Music lovers and serious students were given the opportunity to assess these artists, not just in the relatively narrow terms of a single concerto performance with the orchestra, but on the broader and deeper level of the full recital program.

For the more one enjoys an artist in what is essentially the virtuoso setting of the concerto, the more one desires to be able to explore other facets of the artist's musicianship.

Also, of course, in being able to offer a recital as well as a pair of orchestra concerts, the Symphony Society has found it possible to attract consistently better artists than has been usual in past seasons.

This year, the recital series having proved an artistic success as well as financially viable in its introductory, season, there will be a further six events at the McPherson, beginning Wednesday, Sept. 25 with the leading British woman pianist, Moura Lympany.

Miss Lympany has chosen an ideally pianistic program —Bach's Chromatic Fantasy and Fugue, four Chopin Impromptus, the gorgeous Schumann Papillons and five Preludes by Rachmaninoff.

●

And anyone who doesn't think such a program from such a pianist an essential complement to the Saint-Saens G minor Concerto she will perform with the orchestra, has an indifferent concept of the enjoyment of music.

The Wednesday recital series continues with one each in October and November, two in January and one in February.

Violinist Steven Staryk, Soviet cellist Karine Georgian, Segovia protegee, guitarist Oscar Ghiglia, Israeli violinist Yossi Zivoni and American pianist James Dick are the artists.

Full programs for all recitals are available at the Symphony Society office, 1960 Lansdowne Road or at the box office in Eaton's.

Popular Ball Resumes

Twentieth birthday and first meeting of the season coincide for the Women's Committee of the Victoria Symphony Society.

On Sept. 17, 1948, the committee was formed at the home of Miss Sara Spencer, one of the Symphony Society founders and an early president of the board.

Through the years the Women's Committee has raised a considerable sum of money for the symphony orchestra, principally through the symphony ball, a popular highlight of the winter season.

Empress Hotel renovations caused cancellation of the ball last year, but it returns this season, taking place on St. Valentine's Day, Feb. 14.

Currently president of the committee is Mrs. D. B. Roxborough.

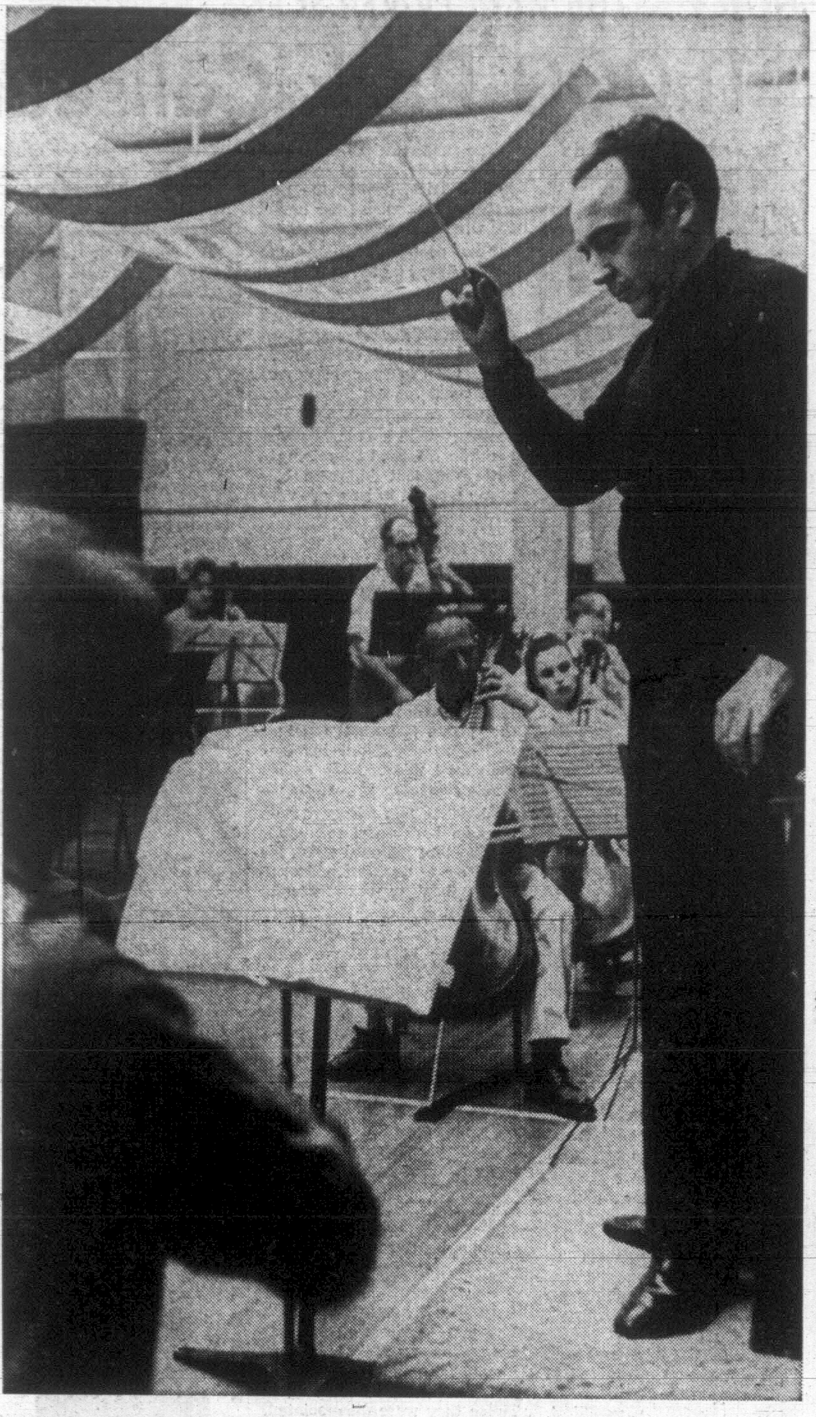
IT IS THESE PEOPLE WHO RUN THE SHOW

Charged with responsibility of administrating the affairs of Victoria Symphony Society for its 28th season are Gerald A. Neeley, president and chairman of the board; and vice-presidents T. L. McMaster, finance; T. E. Watkins, production; and J. Longmore, promotion.

Treasurer is J. Strong.

Staffing the attractive offices at 1960 Lansdowne, are executive assistant Stan Sunderland, accountant H. Robertson and secretary, Mrs. Joan Neville-Smith.

Mr. Sunderland's appointment was made as a result of the departure of Arne Bo, former office manager, appointed to the University of Wisconsin as special administrator in the university's school of music.



FRESH IDEAS plus a broad background of experience and tradition accompanied Laszlo Gati to podium, resulting in gala international season.

She Commuted 200 Miles To Play With Orchestra

A slim, auburn-haired woman whose love of music and orchestral performance lead her to commute 200 miles from her home in the Kootenays to play in the violin section of the Spokane Symphony Orchestra, is the new concert master of the Victoria Symphony.

Soft-spoken and an excellent all-round musician in the estimation of this city's music leaders, Elfreda Gleam continued to make the long trek to Spokane for the better part of six years.

At the same period she was travelling 500 miles to Vancouver every month or six weeks to have lessons with people like Esther Glazer and Harry Adaskin.

Later, when her husband was in Powell River for two years, she again commuted, this time for sessions with her Vancouver pianist, Robert Rogers.

GUESTS HERE

Together they did recitals and CBC concerts and were highlight guest artists of one Victoria Musical Art season.

Vancouver-born, Mrs. Gleam spent two years as a scholarship student at London's Trinity College. During that time she gained her licentiateship of the Royal Academy of Music as well as the FTCL diploma.

She probably developed her special love of ensemble performance there — "I learned more from the professor of chamber music than anyone else." She also led the college orchestra.

Back in Vancouver she continued studying with Jean de Rimanoczy and became under him, leader of the second violin section in a CBC orchestral program entitled Classics for Today.

One of the highlights of her years in Vancouver as a professional musician is the memory of playing at the Vancouver Festival under Stravinsky.

TEACH STUDENTS

It was while she was living in the Kootenays and her children were small that she discovered another of her special talents. She had a real ability to teach.

Soon students were coming considerable distances — from as far away as Trail — to study violin with her.

Now living in Victoria with her three children — two daughters aged 17 and 12 and a son, 15 — Mrs. Gleam, whose husband died a year ago, is building a new full life around her music.

She is teaching at the conservatory and has also embarked on university courses leading to a B.Ed. with major in music.

She has done three years in two as a University of Victoria student and will continue towards the degreee by attending certain daytime classes and summer sessions.

In the meantime her appointment as concert master of the symphony is the crowning incident of this period of her life.

RARE OPPORTUNITY

"Naturally I'm very happy about it," she says. "It's a rare opportunity — one that doesn't come too often for a woman."

She feels the season ahead is an exciting one. "I'm delighted with Mr. Gati's choice of music — so many lovely things from the classic repertoire and at the same time we're not neglecting the 20th century.

"We must play Shostakovitch, Bartok, Morawetz and Beckwith," she says. "It's essential."

And she is right, of course. Unless such works are programmed we can scarcely expect to be taken seriously in the line-up of Canadian orchestras.

Individuality Is Difference In Conductors

By Audrey
Johnson

One of the big advantages of being part of a major symphony orchestra, says James Hunter, new principal cellist with the Victoria Symphony Orchestra, is the opportunity presented of playing under many of the greatest conductors of the day.

He cites experiences under Beecham, Monteux, von Karajan, Barbirolli, Sargent, Walter as part of his personal memory store.

For Jim Hunter has had a long, interesting career in professional music, stemming from the early days of World War II when he was a youthful sound and music editor for the National Film Board.

After two years naval service, Hunter, barely out of his teens, returned to intensive music study under such distinguished teachers as John Weinzweig, Barbara Pentland, Kathleen Parlow and Boris Hamburg.

At the age of 22 he joined the Toronto Symphony and became assistant principal cellist by the time he was 26.

He was also a leading player with the CBC Symphony and the Boyd Neel Hart House Orchestra and with numerous chamber music groups.

It was in these years and in the subsequent nine years he spent with the Vancouver Symphony — where he became acting principal cellist — that he came into contact with the great men on the podium.

Asked what, in the musicians'-eye-view, makes the difference between one conductor and another, he tells you that it is a question of individuality as much as anything, both as to sound and interpretation.

"A conductor makes the sound of an orchestra as he wishes it to be. Think of the orchestra as a great organ and the conductor as the player pulling out the stops, selecting the registrations."

●

He describes how, in the space of one rehearsal, a von Karajan or a Barbirolli will alter the texture and quality of the string tone to a sound approximating the Berlin Philharmonic or the Halle Orchestra.

It is this individuality of preference that will, for example, subdue the sonority of the orchestra to allow a bassoon phrase to glisten like a burnished thread in a sombre tapestry.

"It is fascinating to start a rehearsal of some familiar score with a visiting conductor and suddenly find you are hearing things you had never before realized were happening," he remarks.

But these are highlights in the life of a musician playing in a major professional orchestra. As in any other occupation, much of what one does is routine and the bigger and more influential the orchestra, the greater are the tensions under which it operates.

Jim Hunter is not the first professional instrumentalist to admit that he has sought escape from the continual tight schedule of rehearsal-performance which leaves little time to enjoy music or to explore it in other areas.

A keen teacher and a musician who delights in small ensemble and solo work, Hunter finds life more spacious and versatile in the less tense atmosphere of the semi-pro orchestra.

His nine years in Vancouver are a good example of the kind of musical life that suits him. He was often heard as a solo recitalist, played with the Vancouver Arts String Quartet, the Cassenti Players and the Hugh McLean Consort.

This was in addition to being principal cellist of the CBC Chamber Orchestra and lecturer in cello at University of B.C.'s music department.

In the year previous to coming to Victoria, Mr. Hunter was principal cellist with the Winnipeg Symphony, the CBC Concert Orchestra and was a member of the newly formed Canadian Festival String Quartet.

Rigors of climate extremes — "Winnipeg is the third coldest city in the world" — turned his thoughts back to the West Coast just at a time when the Victoria Symphony and Conservatory of Music were seeking a principal cellist and teacher.

With the Victoria orchestra there is a sense of growth, of striving and enthusiasm that is exhilerating, he finds. He admires Laszlo Gati's approach to the problems that are unique with such an orchestra and the astounding quality of performance that has been developed.

●

As to the recurring question of the string section— the need to thicken and improve its quantity and quality—this he agrees is three parts financial.

"But strings are a problem right across the country," he points out. "Parents are not anxious to encourage sons and daughters toward professionalism as string players because the remuneration is considerably lower than in other professions. It's all right as a hobby but . . ." He shrugs.

Consequently there is a chronic dearth of competent string players. Whether or not this means the great orchestras will gradually diminish in size and number, who can say for certain.

In the meantime, Victoria should consider itself lucky to have what it has got—including Mr. Hunter.

Pierre Solos At O'Keefes

TORONTO (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau went to the opera Friday night and the staid O'Keefe Centre survived.

All of the more than 3,200 seats were sold for the opening of the Canadian Opera Company's 20th season, Centre manager Hugh Walker said.

The opera was Verdi's Aida, in Italian, and the prime minister stayed for all of the 3½-hour performance.

He and 574 others who paid $35 a couple remained for the post-opera ball in the foyer of the centre, a gala affair that kicked off Toronto's autumn social season.

Mr. Trudeau, hatless, and in white tie and tails, arrived at the centre by limousine 10 minutes before curtain time. It took two burly policemen and a cadre of ushers to clear a path into the theatre.

The foyer and sidewalk outside were filled with hundreds of persons who jostled and pushed in an attempt to see the arrival of the guest of honor.

NOW . . . THE VANCOUVER SCENE

11,000 Pack Coliseum for the Best

By RUSSELL FREETHY

Freethy

Last weekend the only place to be was Vancouver. With the Rascals on Friday, and Jimi Hendrix on Saturday, who could ask for anything more. But, there was more, much more.

At the Kerrisdale Arena on Friday night, there was Tunnel.

This is the most popular group at UBC. They put down a good set of recent and not so recent hits. (Cream, Yardbirds, etc.)

Soul Unlimited was hard on the eyes with electric green and bright blue suits and Carl Graves in vivid red. A tremendous rythmn and blues band, but, exactly like every other rythm and blues band in sound and stage presentation.

And then there was Spirit, one of the more impressive West Coast groups.

Their improvisational jazz-like performance was a masterpiece. This group is so good, I'll be telling you more about it later.

●

When the Rascals come on stage and break into "Do You Feel It", you just know they're going to be great.

Eddie is the powerhouse of the group on stage. Singing, dancing, working out with tambourine or bongo drum. He never stops, he doesn't even slow down, except for "A Place in the Sun".

Just a little fellow, with a great big voice, he really belts out a moving rendition of this song. Bearded Felix is an absolute wizard on the big Hammond organ, lending his voice to "Beautiful Morning".

Dino, who doesn't sing, never ceased to impress and amaze the audience with his deft touch on the drums.

Gene Cornish, whose lone vocal contribution was "I'm So Happy Now", is kept in the background until their final number, an extended instrumental.

●

These guys certainly proved their musicianship with this workout.

The Rascals are a tremendous group to listen to on records, and they sound better and are excellent entertainers on stage.

Saturday night, in the Pacific Coliseum 11,000 people heard probably the best rock concert ever to play in Vancouver.

The unknown Eire Apparent, recently arrived from the British Isles, opened the program and prepared the crowd for what was going to happen.

This group was adequate, but nothing like the rest of the show.

The Soft Machine, consisted of an organ and bass centered around one hell of a drummer, who takes care of the lead vocals.

They started the audience moving with their ultra-rythmic efforts. Something a little different in rock, this group has got to be good, very good.

●

A short intermission and the Vanilla Fudge served up the best set of both shows. Two numbers to turn on with, and 'You Keep Me Hangin' On" and the crowd was going wild.

But, it wasn't over. Far from it, for twenty minutes the group jammed together and each artist did his own individual thing.

Vince Martell is an exciting guitarist. Tim Bogert, on electric bass served a super session that included using his bass as a percussion instrument, beating out fantastic patterns.

Mark Stein, the organist, put down a bit of boogie, a cut of contemporary jazz, and improvised a little of everything.

And then there was Carmen Appice, the drummer. Oh, my goodness gracious, what this guy can do with his drums—unbelievable.

The object of this group is to get as much from a four-piece band as possible without any falsified sound effects. When they finished their set the crowd gave them a standing ovation.

●

Another long, anxious wait. Everyone knew that he was here. What was taking so darn long. Twice the huge crowd broke out in come-on clapping. Twice they were disappointed.

Then all in white, Jimi Hendrix came onto the stage, tuned up and began to play. After the first song, he stopped and dedicated the entire show to his family, who were out in the audience.

During the second number the crowd shifted and thousands streamed down from their seats onto the floor to get a little closer to him.

I can't tell you the order in which he interlaced his hits with a bit of blues and rock. He filled the Coliseum with strange stimulating sounds.

He was doing all sorts of freaky things with his guitar and complement of foot pedals. Playing with his teeth and playing with no hands at all.

●

If you weren't experienced before, by twelve-thirty you certainly were.

That did it, I had to get up and leave. The Jimi Hendrix experience is just that. A wonderful, mindblowing ear shattering, sensual experience. For those of you who haven't seen him in person, all I can do is sympathize.

Sept. 21st, you can tip-toe around the Coliseum with Tiny Tim, sit down and protest with Country Joe and the Fish and do your own thing to the undulations of the Collectors.

Abilities Overshadowed by His Commercial Life

By TED LINDBERG

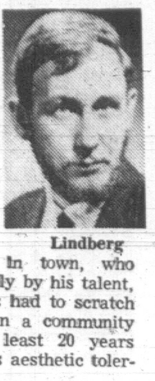
Flemming Jorgensen, a reasonably well-known Victoria artist-designer, has installed a large, comprehensive show of landscapes: painting and graphics, at Pandora's Box gallery.

The show is running Monday through Saturday until September 26.

In terms of landscape, Jorgensen has a prodigious facility, based mainly on his ability to carve out a strong composition in a few incisive strokes. On this ability, in a way unfortunately, the work must also stand or fall, because this rapid formative gesture is the heart and soul of the expression.

The painting is intuitive; physical but not visceral; intelligent but not intellectual. There is evidence of distinct tactile pleasure in laying on the pigment, most often in somber tonalities of local color.

All of this has grown out of a genuine graphic sensibility, which is confident and well-developed, but sometimes overshadowed by his commercial double-life, which must be difficult to suppress at times.



Lindberg

Like every other professional artist in town, who lives exclusively by his talent, Jorgensen has had to scratch for a living in a community which is at least 20 years retarded in its aesthetic tolerance.

This engenders some questionable habits, like assuming there is little market for anything but the most straightforward, aesthetically pleasing landscapes; or framing any trifle that looks more or less finished on the premise that someone might buy it; and this, en masse, makes for a somewhat uneven show.

•

One is confronted by a half a dozen definite styles and twice as many techniques, though one must keep in mind that this exhibition is more or less an eight-year retrospective dealing with the landscape portion of a highly prolific body of work.

Within the context of this showing, the most distinctive of styles is the dark simply blocked-out landscape, somewhat reminiscent of Albert Ryder in moodiness, but not so heavily enamelled, nor nearly as forboding.

They speak of the same romantic mystery in simple, understated shapes and lines, and with a rigorously limited palette, consisting of yellows and blues, secondary greens, with considerable use of black.

•

Case in point would be the small oil paintings like "Yellow Fields," "Blue Hills," "Silent Country," "Fields at Dusk," "Black Fields I" and "Winter Landscape." These are valid and probably very personal statements which reflect the often sunless atmosphere of this coast.

Then, there is another strong propensity for a heavy, black calligraphic structuring, around which Jorgensen works in the sky-shape above the land-shape below.

"Landscape Solitude" is an excellent example of this rough-hewn, monolithic outpouring: a sprawl of escarpments and ravines in black, relieved by a blue-brown tinge just below the horizon, with a white sky and snowy foreground. This motif is repeated in "Open Land," "Rural Area," "Before Harvest" and others.

In one pleasing little painting titled "Awakening," this spidery calligraphic form is arranged above the apparent horizon, giving respite to the more strict landscape format.

Art In Review

Jorgensen's simple water colors have always been good, though perhaps not in terms of formal watercolor technique. Rather, these are quick sketches; unassuming but provocative.

I think much of what he has done in the intervening years 1961 to '68, are directly traceable to this brushed-color shorthand, and also alludes to the style of his teacher-colleague, Herbert Siebner.

The largest painting in the show, "Hommage to Spain," (roughly six by six feet), owes much of its success to an obvious water color treatment of acrylic on canvas. It is two round hill-forms in thinned-out greens and yellows, brushed opaquely in places and rinsed transparent in others, with a flat white sky under a pendulous yellow-grey stain of a cloud.

There are other paintings which are less easily catagorized, which strike responsive chords: "Peninsula," a larger landscape, intrigued me because of a distinct horizontal thrust in the landshape, as if it were being submitted to a compression test by the verticle sides of the frame.

"Midsummer," another oil painting, is like a daydream in which a haycock has abruptly turned into a charging bull, and "Bush Country" displays an almost uncharacteristic use of freer, thornier lines over sombre values to build a more complex terrain.

Jorgensen is quite ingenious when it comes to printmaking—some really satisfying impressions have been made by the monoprint technique, (a bastard combination of direct painting on a smooth surface, in this case marble, and then rubbing absorbent paper on it, to transfer an image). His "Andalusian Landscape is a prime example of this.

In conclusion, I must point out again that the show is really too large and diverse to properly treat within the confines of this column, but I would recommend a lingering perusal by anyone interested in singling out the best of current Victoria art.

Movements 'Too Slick' To Bring Out Nielsen

Diamond In The Groove

By BERYL PROUDMAN

Nielsen; Clarinet Concerto; Symphony No. 2, Benny Goodman; Morton Gould; Chicago Symphony LM 2920.

Musicologists have nothing but praise for Carl Nielsen so why do so few people outside Denmark appreciate his music?

For one thing, he was so overshadowed by the popular giant Sibelius, that only a complete separation of the two Scandinavian composers, both born in 1865 but so dissimilar, can result in a just appraisal of Nielsen.

His disinterest in the romanticism of his day and his daring experiments with tonality, may have fostered the idea that he is a difficult "modern" composer. This unfounded blanket judgment may have put people off and prevented many from enjoying his compositions.

FRESH APPROACH

His modernity lies in his fresh approach to what he most admired in Bach, Mozart and Brahms and in a forward-looking concern with the problems of the world he lived in rather than a sentimental exaggeration of past events or impractical dreams.

He never wanted to be thought of as "difficult" so that where his imagination led him into tonal experiments he made sure that his music should never assault the ears with harsh sounds and he never courted complexities which would make his work unpalatable.

Because there are so few recordings available of the Clarinet Concerto and the Second Symphony, this one by Morton Gould and Benny Goodman is welcome though not completely satisfactory.

The Second Symphony marked the end of the first phase of the composer's life but has none of the gaucherie often found in early works. Realistic in his outlook Nielsen never regretted his early works which, he felt, represented his thoughts at the time.

FOUR 'HUMORS'

Based on the four "humors" of which the medieval world believed man to be compounded—choleric, phlegmatic, melancholic and sanguine—this symphony is as near to program music as Nielsen ever came.

On this recording, the phlegmatic and sanguine movements are taken at tempi which seem too slick and superficial to bring out the breadth of Nielsen' concept, and some of the melodic passages are surely too romantically interpreted to suit the rocklike determination of this purposeful Dane.

To him music was the sound of life and every composition a journey of adventure which set out from one point and strove towards another.

So few of his compositions began and ended in the same key that the Clarinet Concerto, one of his last works, is unusual in that the key of F dominates.

A constant battle between E and F throughout the concerto lends interest to its tonality but the harmonies are so subtly wrought that no harsh discord arises.

As a compliment to the five musicians who had premiered his wind quintet, Nielsen planned to write a concerto to each that would suit his instrument and temperament. Unfortunately he died when he had only written one for flute and this great clarinet concerto.

The music describes Aage Oxenvad, to whom it was dedicated, as a moody, often agitated man with an underlying sweetness and sincerity.

Broad themes underlie the competitive interplay between soloist and orchestra and knit the work into an impressive unit.

This concerto is one of the most difficult for a clarinetist to play and, at first disconcertingly different to listen to. Its charm and obvious greatness compel one to listen to it several times until greater familiarity brings fuller comprehension.

Benny Goodman plays with admirable competence but the balance is arranged in such a way that every breath he takes is audible and the listener is too well aware of the difficulties he is surmounting to enjoy the overall effect of the work.

TOO LOVINGLY

As in the symphony on the other side, several solo passages are dwelt on too lovingly and romanticized too much to agree with Nielsen's philosophy of music.

In this respect, the recordings made by the Danish State Orchestra, though less distinct are more sympathetic to the composer's wishes.

Anyone who will take the trouble to dissociate him from Sibelius' overshadowing barbaric grandeur will find that Nielsen has beautiful things to say and that he expresses them with clarity and sweetness worthy their attention.

AT THE MOVIES

With NORMAN CRIBBENS

INTERLUDE
Musical Romance
Odeon Theatre

This English-made film, rich in color and music, is in the nature of a summer idyll and offers a welcome change from some of the horror and violence we've been getting lately.

Much of it is in the mood of the Swedish classic, Elvira Madigan, shown here last June, and I'm tempted to believe the English cameramen have emulated Sweden in their feeling for texture, color and light.

The cameras roam through modern London and out into the rolling countryside of Sussex and Berkshire. They drop into old-world inns, such as The Mermaid at Rye, and explore quaint old villages whose roots go deep into history.

Had the film been intended as a tourist commentary, it could not have been more effective. However, it is concerned, not with tourism, but with the illicit love-making of Oskar Werner, in this case a distinguished symphony conductor.

★ ★ ★

Oskar, the gentle German, is fast becoming the ladies' favorite pin-up and, as the maestro who is torn between a beautiful wife and a beautiful mistress, he is decidedly appealing. My chief misgiving about him is that he seems more in love with himself than either.

As he says at the beginning of the story, he is "an egotist like most artists," and he goes on to prove his point very effectively.

We first see him as a very serious, much-publicized conductor engaged in strenuous rehearsal at a TV studio. But the classics take a back-seat when Barbara Ferris, a mini-skirted reporter from the London Evening Standard, calls on him for an interview.

Oskar has been having trouble with the people who manage his concerts, and Barbara wants the inside story. But it is nothing to the trouble Barbara gives him when, after lunch in a historic London pub, they wind up in her apartment.

Oskar has a lovely wife (Virginia Maskell) and three lovely children living in a lovely country home outside London. His conscience, of course, is troubled, but he manages to sustain the image of a jolly, paternal father and a dutiful husband.

Wifew, however, is conscious of a growing tension and, as her parents are coming to stay, she suggests he spend a weekend in the country.

Oskar takes himself off to the quaint old Mermaid Inn at Rye, Sussex — and the girl reporter goes with him.

Oskar is caught between his love for a fey, fetching creature who is not ready to be tied by marriage and the cool, elegant woman he has married.

Both wife and the mistress are sensitively portrayed, and there are excellent supporting performances by John Cleese as a milquetoast press agent who dreams of being a writer, and Geraldine Sherman as the kind of girl who always falls for a married man.

Jigsaw Doesn't Come Together

A piece that will strike many people as the most original situation comedy since the appearance of that six-foot rabbit named Harvey, is the season opener for RPA Productions.

Actually it is a witty adaptation, its chief ploy being taken from a brilliant pantomime farce episode in the Chinese theatre, in which darkness is light and light, darkness.

Black Comedy opened Friday at the McPherson Playhouse, and one could only think how very fortunate the director and cast were in their vehicle. The play, in other words, is the whole thing.

The rest is rather like a jigsaw puzzle in which the pieces just don't quite come together to make a complete picture. There are isolated bits of smooth, competent acting — from Yvonne Adalian, Linda Sorensen, Michael Gibbons, notably — but they are just that — isolated.

Failure of the production to "jell" as the saying goes, or for the actors to develop an effective sense of team-play or build and sustain a proper tempo, leads to the suspicion of a shortage of rehearsal time.

YVONNE
. . . bright note

Director Harry Hill has allowed too much sign-posting of the comedy business. Obvious yards of white cord on a lamp shout that it will shortly entangle someone — and it does.

The studied effect of many of the moves and business the labored easily anticipated episodes of farce soon become tedious.

A lot of this is due to the fact that Mr. Hill has not so far, been able to establish the kind of tempo that makes mechanical processes invisible.

There is vast room for improvement in the set design. It is distracting, fussy and unconvincing and completely lacking in any imaginative use of the stage space.

This production is all the more disappointing in that the script provides such excellent potential and that the result falls so far short of the professionalism RPA proclaims. It is certainly not to be compared with almost anything that has preceded it under that banner.

Black Comedy being somewhat shorter than the average play, it is usually presented with a curtain raiser. Mr. Shaffer himself wrote a short play — White Lies — which appeared with it originally.

It does seem however, that it might be permitted to stand alone if nothing really suitable can be found to accompany it.

In this instance Owen Foran provides a monologue from Chekov — On the Harmfulness of Tobacco. I have every respect for Mr. Foran as an actor but as a monologuist he leaves me unimpressed.

At least in this instance, the style and character of Chekov escapes him. There is a lack of breadth arising from a basic unsureness which also disrupts his timing.

This rather uneasy monologue followed by a full intermission gives the beginning of the evening a clumsy and disjointed feeling.

Black Comedy continues its run tonight and throughout next week.

Welshmen Superb In Arena Concert

By BERYL PROUDMAN

The Pendyrus Male Choir is much more than just another Welsh choir, as was amply shown Friday night in the splendid concert in the Memorial Arena which launched their nation-wide encore tour.

Though emphasis was laid on the music of Wales, and many people attending were of Welsh heritage — they were the ones who knew the words to "Land of My Fathers" — at times during the evening the choir sounded like a 16th century monastic group, the Glasgow Orpheus Choir and The Soviet Army Chorus. Though the soloist became a comrade for this occasion the words were in Welsh.

This remarkable choir brought characteristic understanding and intensity to all its singing but its unusual control and restraint kept the subtle harmonies distinct and clear even in the arena.

TOUCH OF BEAUTY

Beverley Humphries brought a touch of feminine beauty and an arrestingly beautiful voice to several numbers.

Though her Mozart was exquisite, the breathless hush of appreciation which greeted "Softly Awakes My Heart" showed how that touched many hearts.

Iford Lloyd, a slight, young man sang in a full-blooded rich voice suitable to a "little hero" which his achievements in national festivals in Wales has made him.

WARRIOR POEM

A group of modern Welsh compositions added to the variety of the program. David Wynne's "Owain ab Urien" interestingly combined modern music with the ancient rhythms of a warrior poem describing a battle "so bloody that even the ravens were red"; and Mansel Thomas' "Anthem of Challenge and Comfort," dedicated to the victims of Aberfan, combined the dark dramatic discords of a horror-filled situation with comforting words of hope.

Even old favorites took on new quality when sung so superbly. "Men of Harlech" became a brisk rallying march, "Cwm Rhondda," despite the harmonising contributions of members of the audience, sounded unusually crisp, and "Myfanwy" was so full of love and longing that even non-Welsh eyes were misty.

The only thing which marred the performance was that it had to be presented in that acoustic abomination, the Memorial Arena. The lighting was erratic and clumsy, the microphone pickup so inadequate that many people whose seats were squashed in behind jutting walls could neither see nor hear satisfactorily.

DOORS CLANGED

The performance was several times interrupted by loud-clanging metal doors in the garishly-lit echoing corridors, and a persistent wheezing squeak in a vent or window spoilt all but the loudest selections.

No wonder music lovers shudder at the idea of attending any cultural event in such a place. It speaks volumes for the reputation of this fine choir that so many people, knowing the risks they ran in doing so, bought tickets to hear the Pendyrus Choir again.

Hawaii's Beyond Reach Of Many Collectors

Stamp News

By ROBERT G. OLIPHANT

Due to scarcity and costliness, many of Hawaii's stamps are beyond the reach of most collectors, but a small representative set can be put together without too much expense and trouble.

Although the issues previous to the mid 1860s are largely very expensive, most of the stamps after this period can be bought for quite reasonable prices.

Now the problem of where good Hawaii can be obtained arises. I suggest that you try E. E. Harris and Co. of Boston, Mass. They have a rather good stock. Although I wouldn't advise the average enthusiast or beginner to save the classical issues of Hawaii, they would, however make excellent additions to any major early U.S. collection.

Collectors of Hawaii can not help being enveloped in the rich and colorful history of the islands, which the stamps, pictorial postal cards, and envelopes amply reflect. More of Hawaii in a forthcoming column.

Bermuda will issue a set of adhesives on Sept. 24, to commemorate the 1968 Olympic Games. The stamps will be of a common design, divided into six equal sections, three along the upper half, and three along the lower, and intersected with the respective value and the legend: Bermuda.

The six sections feature: a running athlete, a football player, a Finn class sailing vessel, a Dragon class sailing vessel, the Olympic Games symbol with legend: Olympic Games Mexico 1968, beneath, and the upper middle section features a silhouette of the Queen. The stamps were designed by Victor Whiteley, and printed by photogravure by Harrison and Sons, on block CA watermarked paper.

On Sept. 24, Spain will also release commemoratives to honor the Olympics: shooting (1 Pt.); horse riding (1.50 Pts.); cycling (3.50 Pts.); sailing (6 Pts.).

From Oct. 8 to Oct. 17, Israel will hold a national stamp exhibition in Jerusalem. It will be known as Tabira.

On Oct. 7, Dubai will release four "jam labels" in honor of children's day. The stamps will depict paintings of children by four well-known artists: Sir Thomas Lawrence (1769-1830), Edouard Manet (1832-83), Jean Baptiste Perroneau (1715-83), and Francisco Jose de Goya Y Lucientes (1746-1828). Values: 3.00 Rls, 1.25 Rls, 1.00 Rls, and 60 Dirhams.

Dubai is one of the prime offenders among the states that churn out far too many stamps for their actual postal needs.

Austria will issue the following stamps during the remainder of this year: Sept. 20, 750th anniversary of Graz-Seckau diocese (2 Sch.); Oct. 18, 50th death anniversary of Prof. Koloman Moser (2 Sch.); Oct. 20, baroque frescoes (six 2 Sch. values); Nov. 5, 50th anniversary of the Austrian Republic (three 2 Sch. values); Nov. 29, Stamp Day, (3.50 Sch. plus 80 Gr.).

A 2 Sch. stamp will also be issued to commerorate Christmas, and the 150th anniversary of "Silent Night—Holy Night." Early in 1969, Austria will release six 2 Sch. stamps to commemorate the 500th anniversary of the Vienna diocese.

Formosa's program for the remainder of 1968: September, Human Rights Year (2); October, Olympics (4), President Chiang Kai-shek (6); November, New Years' Greeting (2); December, 20th anniversary of the Constitution (2); art treasures III (6).

Tips: Often stamp and coin dealers receive phone calls requesting evaluation of certain stamps and coins. Unless he actually sees your stamps or coins, a dealer cannot possibly give you reasonable appraisals of their value.

Black Beauty Still Waiting

By AL FORREST

One of the favorite games in the U.S. is to guess how many years it will be before America gets a Negro president.

A sophisticated adjunct to the game is to forecast whether it will happen before or after the U.S. selects a colored girl as Miss America.

This week both events seemed to be far in the future; further even, say than the B.C. Lions next Grey Cup championship.

At last count 10 per cent of the population of the U.S. was found to be Negro (20 million out of 200 million) so wherever you wander south of the line you would expect that 10 out of every 100 persons would be Negro.

But if by chance you wandered into the dressing room where the 50 Miss America finalists were straightening their hair-dos and displaying their ample smiles, well, you couldn't help wonder about the missing America in the room.

By simple arithmetic five out of the 50 should have been Negro. But there wasn't even one.

As the girls paraded across our TV screens in their tight bathing suits the most noticeable thing was white skin.

They were selecting Miss White America.

And the judges across the nation were saying something to the Negro people. What they were saying was hurting the Negro more than the fact that his or her president is white.

And this continuing slight is the real imputus behind the Black Power struggle and its personal slogan: "I am black and beautiful."

The Miss America pageant hits the Negro people where it hurts.

It's saying to Mr. and Mrs. America: "Some of your best friends may be Negro but would you want your daughter to lose to one in a beauty contest?"

In fact, in truth, on the streets of America they do.

Negro girls draw just as many second glances and wolf whistles on the streets as their paler sisters do.

Gather together the 50 most beautiful women in America and at least five of them will be colored.

Holds hands in a circle with America's 10 most beautiful women and one of them is certain to be singer Leslie Uggams, a Negro.

But on our TV screens last Saturday instead of truth we got partial truth. We got an old refrain: "Here she is, Miss Lily White America."

Some Negroes and civil rights people took note of all these things and sponsored a Miss Black America contest in Atlantic City four blocks up the boardwalk from the other event.

Separate but equal . . . and totally unnecessary . . . 10 or 15 years from now.

Diller Bombs but Lucy Back

This week the Phyllis Diller show bowed in and bombed out. It is CTV's big new fall addition and the network hoped it would become a don't-miss program. Rather, it's a don't bother.

This week we are into the fall season with a vengeance with most of the new programs taking their bows.

Here is a list of the major new programs of the fall season:

SATURDAYS

ABC and CBS are content with last season, NBC is adding two new shows, Adam-12, a detective, Dragnet-like series with Martin Milner and Kent McCord at 7:30 p.m. and The Ghost and Mrs. Muir, a haunted story reworked at 8:30 p.m.

SUNDAYS

ABC enters space with The Land of the Giants, on an unknown planet where things are big, starting Sept. 22 at 7:30 p.m.

On NBC at 7:30 p.m., The New Adventure of Huck Finn, a live-plus cartoon background starring Kevin Schultz as Tom Sawyer and Michael Shea as Huck.

MONDAYS

On CBS, Here's Lucy returns with a new format for Lucille Ball — an employment agency — and with the same old Gale Gordon at 8:30 p.m. At 9 p.m. the place is the same, Mayberry RFD, by the star (Andy Griffith) has moved out. Ken Berry takes over.

The Outcasts, on NBC, has one of the few controversial plots of the season. It is the continuing story of a post-Civil War slave owner ane ex-slave in an angry partnership. Don Murray and Otis Young star in the black-white Western.

TUESDAYS

There are some pretty blatant carboncopies on TV, but few will beat Lancer, seen at 7:30 p.m. Lancer, a greying and prosperous rancher, calls his long-lost sons back to defend his property. They do. Take away the long-lost, which only lasts one or two weeks, and you have Bonanza. Andrew Duggan stars as Lorne Green.

At 7:30 on ABC, it's The Mod Squad, with three young detectives, Peggy Lipton, Michael Cole and Clarence Williams III, who go through LSD, old men and other assorted evils in a search for justice.

Julia, on NBC, at 8:30, is a show with a black star — Diahann Caroll — as a widow with a little boy in Los Angeles. She lives in an integrated apartment, has a good job, a white friendly neighbor, and the insurance money from her late husband, killed in Vietnam.

At 9:30 p.m. on CBS, The Doris Day Show.

At 10, That's Life, a musical-comedy-variety show with a rare extra, a plot.

WEDNESDAYS

On ABC, Here Come the Brides (to Seattle) set in frontier days, at 7:30 p.m. The Good Guys with Bob Denver and Herb Edelman, a comedy at 8:30 on CBS, and The Outsider with Darren McGavin as a private eye at 10 p.m.

THURSDAYS

On ABC, a situation comedy with difference, as Peter Kastner portrays a girl model, in The Ugliest Girl in Town. First show is at 7:30 p.m. Sept. 26.

And opposite The Ugliest Girl, on CBS, is Blondie, portrayed by Patricia Harty, with Will Hutchins as Dagwood. Jim Backus is the boss, Dithers.

Just after Blondie on CBS is Hawaii Five-O, a detective and adventure story set in you-know-where with Jack Lord as detective number one-o. It debuts Sept. 26.

At 9:30 an ABC, Journey to the Unknown dwells on the suspense of down-to-earth happenings like that of ESP and other psychic occurences.

FRIDAYS

ABC premieres The Don Rickles Show, featuring the comic and special guests, at 9 p.m. Sept. 27.

NBC offers The Name of the Game starting next Friday with an overall theme of a magazine staff in action and an excuse for a movie-length feature every week. It's 1½ hours long, and begins at 8:30 p.m.

Row Over TV Convention Film Mounts

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. government has asked the three major networks for comment on what it describes as "hundreds of complaints concerning the television coverage" of the turbulent Democratic national convention in Chicago last month.

In a related development, the networks joined five major magazine and newspaper executives Friday in requesting a presidential commission to investigate what they termed "police violence aimed at repressing free news coverage" of the anti-war demonstrations that erupted during the convention.

The Federal Communications Commission, which regulates the U.S. broadcast industry, cited coverage both of the police clashes with protesters and the debate over the war on Vietnam in asking the networks for a reply on the complaints.

The networks and news publications sent their request to President Johnson's commission on violence. The commission, formed after the assassination of Senator Robert F. Kennedy, already has announced plans to investigate the Chicago disorders.

More than a score of news men were beaten covering the bloody confrontation between police and thousands of anti-war demonstrators in four nights of violence during the convention.

The FCC sent letters to ABC, CBS and NBC, saying it received complaints that alleged "the television coverage did not fairly present the issues on a number of grounds."

The agency said these charges included "failure to give exposure to the views or statements of city government officials of Chicago with respect to alleged brutality by the police, and bias in favor of views or opinions in opposition to the policies of the national government with respect to the war in Vietnam."

It asked comment within 20 days.

PRICE SEEMED A BIT FISHY

PENSACOLA, Fla. (AP) — A 12-foot plywood fishing boat was advertised for sale "for 60 fish." But when Ernie Crisp showed up Thursday he was told, "we meant dollars."

"You said fish," Crisp countered. He got his boat for 60 goldfish.

Alderman Said Wrong On U.K. Sewage Facts

City Alderman Robert Baird was wrong when he said Thursday disposal of untreated raw sewage has been outlawed in the United Kingdom, a Victoria consulting engineer said Friday.

Cities in the U.K. have not stopped dumping raw sewage into the sea.

In fact, some cities are now building sewage outfalls without any form of treatment other than comminution breaking up solids.

Jack Priestman of Ker, Priestman and Graeme Engineering Ltd. said Ald. Baird's assertions were in error and must have been based on a misunderstanding.

BAIRD
. . . misunderstanding

Ald. Baird had said shortly after returning from an extended trip to England and Scotland that disposal of untreated sewage by outfall "generally speaking is now outlawed in most of Great Britain."

He also said most commmunities there have been given until 1971 by purification boards to clean up their problems with untreated sewage.

Ald. Baird said he spoke with engineers in London, Coventry, Perth, Kirkcaldy and Aberdeen to get his information.

But Mr. Priestman replied the borough of Hastings, on the southeast coast of England, was still building sewage disposal facilities without full treatment.

After hearing Ald. Baird's statement, he telephoned borough engineer Edgar Baxter and learned Hastings was halfway through construction of an outfall. Solids there will be broken up, but treated no further.

No standards have been changed there," he said.

Mr. Priestman was one of the consulting engineers to the Capital Region Board on its study of sewage disposal for Greater Victoria.

Ald. Baird's remarks "sounded very strange" to him this week because he had "recently been in contact with the engineer of Hastings."

Mr. Baxter went to see the chief engineer of the government ministry having authority to confirm the correct method of disposing of sewage," Mr. Priestman said.

"The central government is approving outfalls with comminution," he said.

Recently, city engineer James Garnett checked with British authorities on Standards of Pollution control. He was assured that standards set out in a White Paper in 1960 were "still valid" and there had been no change.

These standards are the same as used in the regional board findings here.

The towns Ald. Baird checked must have been inland or on river estuaries and not opening into open sea. They would be ones discharging into fresh or enclosed waters, Mr. Priestman said.

Kirkcaldy and Aberdeen are coastal communities. Perth is situated on the Firth of Tay, about 20 miles from the coast. Coventry is nine miles from the geographic centre of England and London is on the River Thames.

"This is one of the mistakes that has been made in this whole (sewage) controversy — people have only gotten half the knowledge and failed to get the rest of the facts," Mr. Priestman said.

"What I in effect confirmed from (Mr. Baxter) was that disposal of domestic wastes is being approved at this time in England without treatment."

SOME LENGHT

Hastings is an area much like Greater Victoria, Mr. Priestman said, with a winter population of about 100,000 persons.

In summer the population goes up to about 200,000 with thousands of visitors swimming and gathering on the beaches.

The outfall being constructed is about 5,000 feet in length, Mr. Priestman said — the same length as most of the outfalls planned for Greater Victoria.

He added he could speak with authority on the similarities between Hastings and Victoria because he was head of the borough's sewage and drainage department for seven years, until 1949.

SEVENOAKS CENTRE STUDIES LOW BID

Herb Bate Ltd. was tentatively awarded a $147,000 contract for the construction of three new residences at Sevenoaks Children's Treatment Centre.

The Bate tender was the lowest of four submitted and directors of Sevenoaks say that pending review, it will likely be accepted.

The provincial government will contribute approximately $52,000 toward the cost of the buildings. The Family and Children's Service, parent body of Sevenoaks, will raise the rest.

Designed by the architectural firm of Campbell and Smeeth, the residences will replace the portion of the centre destroyed by fire in February, 1967.

Before the Magistrate

Two youths who pleaded guilty to taking a car without the owner's consent each were fined $250 Friday.

William Hill, 19, and John Griffiths, 18, both of CFB Esquimalt, were also ordered to post six-month $250 good behavior bonds.

Court was told the car was taken from 1006 Bay Street Wednesday and later found abandoned. A cheque book belonging to Hill was found on the seat.

The youths were also prohibited from driving during the six month probationary period.

Marci White, 842 Esquimalt, was given a one-year suspended sentence and placed on a $500 good bahavior bond on a charge of public mischief.

At an earlier hearing court was told she reported a theft of $98 from her apartment to police. It was discovered later no theft had taken place.

Melvin Harris, 1930 Argyle, was fined $400 after he pleaded guilty to impaired driving. Court was told he was stopped by police on Dupplin Road Aug. 14 and gave a breathalyzer reading of .24.

A 19-year-old youth who earlier pleaded guilty to assaulting a 15-year-old girl in a downtown restaurant Aug. 8 was sentenced to one month in jail.

Kenneth Howard, of no fixed address, was also placed on a $250 six-month good bahavior bond.

George Turner, CFB Esquimalt, was fined $150 on a charge of driving while under a licence suspension. Court was told he drove on Esquimalt Road July 18.

Fined for careless driving were:

Terry Creamer, 311 Prospect Lake Road, erratic driving on West Saanich Road Aug. 10, $35; William Falconer, 913 Darwin, hit a pole on Prospect Lake Road Aug. 6, $40; William Hutton, 121 Oswego, rolled a car over on Cordova Bay Road Aug. 2, $50; Colin Hudson, 4052 Wilkinson Road, rolled a car at Douglas and Dallas Aug. 3, $50; Albert Palmer, 851 Craigflower, accident off Douglas Street June 28, $35.

New York's Market Rally Takes Turn for Worse

By PHILIP GREER

NEW YORK (WP) — The stock market's Indian summer rally ran into some opposition this week, but the profit-taking soon gave out and the list returned to the upside.

The downturn came at roughly the point where analysts expect a major technical test of the market's strength. The selling was considered normal, though, and the jury was still out on how far the rally might carry.

For the week, the Dow Jones industrial average lost 4.04 points to finish at 917.21. Standard and Poor's 500-stock composite was down .34 point to 100.86 and the New York Stock Exchange index gave up .13 point to 56.50.

The exchanges went back to the Wednesday closings — at least two more are yet to come — but trading volume still rose, to 51.04 million shares from the 44.84 million traded in the previous week.

When the market lost a session to the Labor Day holiday. Volume for the year crossed the 2 billion mark, more than a month earlier than in record-setting 1967.

WINNERS PREVAIL

The overall balance of power stayed with the winners, with 803 issues up on the week, while 729 fell. In the previous week, there were 1,062 winners and 462 losers. The number of new 1968 highs rose to 176 from 134 and new lows held even at 29.

The business news background was generally good. Unemployment fell back to the record 3.5 per cent rate reached earlier this year, thanks to the disappearance of summer workers.

"The trading accent remained in blue-chip stocks and special situations, while the erstwhile glamor stocks stayed in their back seats. The bigger moves in the investment-grade stocks were on the downside, with Eastman Kodak dropping 4⅛ to 77⅛ and United Aircraft and U.S. Steel each off two points, to 61 and 39⅞. The drop in big steel spotlighted the weakness in the group, which is waiting for its customers to use up their strike-hedge inventories and start ordering again. Jones and Laughlin was off 2¾ to 64⅝ and Republic was down 1⅝ to 42¼.

Auto companies reported jumping sales in the first ten days of the month, but the group had a spotty response. General Motors was up ⅝ to 82⅛, Chrysler climbed 1¼ to 68½, while American Motors lost ⅜ to 12¼ and Ford was down 1½ to 52¾.

Price increases continued to swing through the chemical industry, but the stocks took little advantage. Union Carbide and Du Pont were both unchanged on the week, while Monsanto was up 1¾ to 52½.

Among the most heavily tradded stocks, the accent was still on the upside. Of the 20 most active issues, 11 were up, eight were down and unchanged Union Carbide was at the bottom of the list.

Martin Marietta led the list, adding 3⅝ to 28. Building stocks were strong — along with the savings and loans — on indications of an easing in the interest rate problem that has plagued the building industry. Along the same lines, Johns-Manville added 1⅝ to 74⅛ despite heavy profit-taking on Friday.

In the savings and loans, Imperial Corp. of America led in activity and rose 2⅛ to 17⅞. Great Western Financial was ahead 1⅝ to 30, first charter added 3¼ to 41 to 41⅝ and Lytton Financial was up 1⅝ to 13½.

The biggest drop on the list came in Global Marine, which tumbled 9 points to 41⅞. The company announced it is ending its search for gold in Alaska, touching off a storm of trading on Thursday that had the stock tied up more than it traded.

On the upside — and also connected with Alaska — Atlantic-Richfield led the way with a 9⅞-point jump to 105¼. The company, along with Jeesey Standard, has a rich oil find on Alaska's northern slope.

Firms Make Uranium Deal

TOKYO (Reuters) — A group of nine Japanese electric power companies has approved a provisional contract concluded with Dennison Mines Ltd. of Canada for a joint development of uranium deposits in Colorado and British Columbia, a group spokesman said today.

The six-year contract with the Canadian firm was recently initialled by three major Japanese power firms on the behalf of the Japanese industry, the spokesman said.

The contract, retroactive to last month, provides for investments of $650,000 (U.S.) annually to be equally shared by the two parties.

A formal contract is expected to be signed soon, the spokesman said.

Stock Markets Surge to Peak

By GERALD CLARKSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Prices were up to a 2½-year peak on Canadian stock markets this week after an almost unbroken surge since Labor Day.

Western oils climbed to record levels Friday, while base metals were the only major group to escape the trend. Brokers were continually expecting a break in the rally after New York's poor day Tuesday, but mixed trading Wednesday and Thursday was followed by a sharp revival.

Among leading oils, Canadian Superior jumped 8¾ to 55, Dome Pete 7⅞ to 79½, Home A 3⅜ to 27½, Home B 4¼ to 29¼ and Worldwide Energy 3 to 8.50.

The most spectacular industrials were Ford of Canada, up 11⅛ to 273⅛, American Growth Fund Management, up 6 to 52, Wajax, up 5⅜ to 32, Tamblyn, up 4¾ to 45¾ and Security Capital B, up $2.50 to $5.50.

The strongest industrial groups were beverages, banks, food processors, steels, communications, pipelines, utilities and construction stocks.

Trading volume was exceptionally heavy, and perhaps the major indicator of the 1968 trend on Canadian markets is the record turnover in industrial shares at Toronto.

RECORD VOLUME

Industrial volume on Canada's largest exchange ran at a daily average of 1.5 million shares, which is almost three times last year's level. The previous week's average was 1.4 million shares.

Brokers say this is mainly due to institutional trading and to the sharply increased popularity of Canadian industrials with fund managers both at home and abroad.

Specualtion in junior industrials has been an equally prominent feature, but analysts say the old emphasis on penny mining and oil stocks, trading under $2 has almost certainly vanished forever.

The market nevertheless remains a dangerous place. Bongard, Leslie and Co., brokers with membership at all Canadian exchanges, point out the pitfalls of the junior industrial sector in their September investment letter.

"For several months now the average investor has demonstrated an unusual propensity to speculate. He has abandoned, or at least become more aloof to, many of the traditional blue chip investments."

Commenting on Seaway Hotels, a typical example which has risen to around $20 from $4.80, the letter says this is "an embryo hotel chain which is losing money. The stock is subject to more rumors than any five 'go-go' stocks in the market."

While it has a "broad and loyal market following, there is just too much passion connected with this one for us to cope with it for the time being."

Trading in Great West Saddlery, the year's fastest climbing stock, resumed this week after a lengthy suspension requested by the company to kill speculation.

After opening Tuesday at a record 19½, the price gradually slipped back to 15½, which was up 2⅝ from its level July 8 when it was suspended.

Great West, an apparently dead investment, was trading as low as 46 cents in March when it suddenly shot into the sky after being taken over by Edward and Peter Bronfman of Montreal.

Analysts say the takeover was a stroke of the purest luck for former shareholder, and the company has now become a vehicle in the Bronfmans' complex program of corporate expansion.

The over-all rise among junior industrials is being charted by brokers J. H. Crang and Co., who are producing a "go-go index" of 77 representative stocks.

This index shows that the group has done more than four times as well as the 152 stocks which make up the Toronto industrial index since the end of March. It includes many recent listings and the surging real estate leaders.

PUZZLING FUTURE

Commenting on the current situation, another broker says there is "too much speculation in Canada and care should be exercised."

"Real estate stocks, in particular, should be carefully judged; in many cases expectations cannot be independently assessed and there is a great deal of latitude exercised in the accounting of the earnings of this group."

Laurentide Plans Structure Change

VANCOUVER (CP) — M. L. Goeglein, president of Laurentide Financial Corporation Ltd., announced Friday the company plans to ask shareholders' approval for changes in the company's capital structure that he believes will help in marketing future debt issues.

Mr. Goeglein said in a statement that approval of the proposals would simplify Laurentide's capital structure and permit resumption of dividend payments at an earlier date than would otherwise be possible.

He said the proposals will be presented to shareholders at the company's annual meeting here Oct. 4.

Mr. Goeglein said the Vancouver-based finance company has made considerable progress in getting out of the financial woods

NO DIVIDENDS

Because major losses wiped out the company's surplus and left it in a deficit position, Laurentide has been unable to pay dividends on any of its various classes of shares, said Mr. Goeglein.

"The preferred share dividends are cumulative in each case and dividend arrears accruing on these shares will total $4,011,000 at Sept. 30."

There are also arrearages in payment of sinking and purchase funds, of about $1,000,000.

"The company's total dividend, sinking fund and purchase fund requirements to service preferred shares outstanding amount to approximately $2,900,000 annually, which is substantial in relation to current earnings for the fiscal year just completed of $2,100,000, he said.

In consequence, a prime objective of the proposed capital changes is to reduce preferred share servicing required to a level more readily covered from the existing sources of business.

The essentials of the proposal are to eliminate the present $500,000 annual dividend requirement on subordinated preferred shares while paying out dividends on five other series of preferred.

Sinking and purchase fund requirements would be delayed until July 1, 1970, on three series and until July 1, 1975, on secondary preferred.

Bond Issue For Sale in U.S.

WINNIPEG (CP) — The Manitoba government says it plans to sell up to $50,000,000 worth of bonds in a public issue for distribution in the U.S.

Provincial treasurer Gurney Evans said the issue is to finance northern hydro-electric projects.

U.S. Firm Expects Lead In Oil Sands

CALGARY (CP) — President William Mitchell of Coronado Oil Co. predicts his Denver-based firm will be the leader in northeastern Alberta's Cold Lake oil sands production race by an increasing margin after Dec. 1, when two new experimental steam-injection projects are scheduled to start.

On that date, Mr. Mitchell said, five custom-built steam generators, now being installed at Grand Centre and Rat Lake, about 140 miles northeast of Edmonton, will begin pumping.

The projects are the first ever to be designed with the aid of a computer program, which produced figures indicating optimum size, well space and steam injection rates.

Mr. Mitchell said the larger of the projects will put Coronado's Cold Lake heavy-oil program on a virtually commercial footing.

When further experiment has established the exact economic margins to be worked up with up to the well head, Coronado will be ready to design a full-scale commercial project.

Coronado has a technological lead over other companies because it began steam injection work in California in 1962.

Mr. Mitchell said the key to Coronado's plans for Cold Lake is the development of two methods of treating heavy oil so that it will flow and can thus be moved to market by conventional means.

He said his company's program is based entirely on being able to market Cold Lake oil in its natural state, without complications such as those created by the prorationing system or new market sections of Alberta's oil sands development policy.

B.C. Forest Products

A $2.5 million expansion at the British Columbia Forest Products Ltd. Mackenzie sawmill was announced Friday by the firm's president Ian A. Barclay.

He said expansion of the mill, located about 125 miles north of Prince George, will increase lumber production by 40 million board feet to 120 million annually.

Canada Retires IMF Borrowing

OTTAWA (CP) — —Two more steps to take Canada back to normal from its dollar crisis early this year were announced Friday by Finance Minister Benson.

The last $64 million of a $185 million borrowing from the International Monetary Fund has been paid back, along with an extra $6 million that establishes a small creditor position for Canada in the fund.

The borrowing was made last February in the form of a purchase of U.S. dollars from the IMF with Canadian dollars. The repayment is made by reversing the procedure, buying back Canadian currency with U.S. dollars from Canada's official exchange reserves.

Canada now has restored what is known as its "quota" or "gold tranche" in the fund.

Mr. Benson also announced cancellation of a standby credit from the Export-Import Bank of Washington, arranged in March.

WAS LAST CREDIT

This was the last existing credit among $900 million in guarantees offered Canada to help her maintain the pegged value of the dollar during pressure in the exchange markets between January and March.

Canada's exchange reserves lost more than $700 million during the period of the dollar's weakness, but in a consistent comeback since mid-March the reserves have been substantially rebuilt.

They now hover near $2.55 billion a maximum level established by agreement between Canada and the United States.

Montreal Seeks Action

MONTREAL — The world's most modern stock exchange — both in physical structure and technical operation — has lain practically fallow for three years.

Located in a city of great personal and corporate wealth, the Montreal Stock Exchange and its companion Canadian Stock Exchange, have the capacity to become the nation's leading stock trading centre.

But through a number of adverse factors, the anticipated growth of MSE-CSE has not taken place, while the aggressive Toronto Stock Exchange has continued to develop into the nation's leading exchange and North America's most important mining market.

Place Victoria, set squarely on Montreal's historic financial street, Rue St. Jacques, is where the stock exchange tower rises, a massive, shiny black skyscraper with bright white column at each corner.

•

Surely a most impressive setting for any stock exchange outwardly, the building inside carries on the striking effect with marbled halls, spaciousness and modern functionalism.

The stock exchanges, sharing a single, cavernous, red-carpeted trading floor, operate with all the sophistication of electronic computer aids without losing the traditional color of sometimes frenzied traders shouting their bids and offers, rushing to telephones, hand-signalling and littering the floor with waste paper.

But for all the drama taking place under the big electronic board, the results in cold figures leave a lot to be desired. In fact, even the heavy action is usually limited to the first few minutes after each opening, when most of the day's trading is done.

Comparing Montreal with Toronto's performance in 1967, the share volume is away out of proportion, while the dollar volume comes within $2.2 billion. Montreal last year traded 260.14 million shares worth $1.3 billion, and Toronto handled 819.14 million shares valued at $3.5 billion.

This is in spite of the fact that Montreal, and St. James Street particularly, spell "establishment" — with upper case E. There were those who believed that, through the stock exchanges, Montreal could recapture the position of financial leader in Canada.

•

To try to correct growing imbalance with Toronto, the Montreal-Canadian stock exchanges in 1965 spent advertising money, but only sparingly and with reluctance. A $100,000 budget was used up in six months and for two years nothing much has happened.

Now, according to Jean P. Branchaud, MSE director of public relations, a new attempt is being made to stimulate public interest in the market.

A great deal depends on what steps are taken by the Quebec government to streamline its securities legislation, bringing it more in line with that of Ontario, B.C. and Alberta.

Companies have persistently complained of the extreme difficulty of getting securities listed on the Montreal Stock Exchange, not because of exclusive legislaton, but through delays encountered between the time an application is made and a prospectus is approved.

On its own hook the exchange is again trying to tempt the public, as well as urging a modern approach to securities legislation that will make it easier for companies to become listed and therefore encourage trading.

M. Branchaud said he is mounting a campaign to make the public more equity conscious, in an area of Canada where real property and bonds have been the historical forms of investment.

•

This is partly a carryover from the French attitude and it is true to an extent in the Maritimes as well, which is part of the area east of Ottawa in which the Montreal Stock Exchange regards itself as the rightful focus.

And what of Toronto's domination of the mining market, assuming Montreal successfully recaptures industrial trading? Perhaps somewhat over-enthusiastically, M. Branchaud regards the MSE as a challenger for Toronto even in the mining sector.

Other public relations projects include revision of publications explaining how the exchanges work and their economic role, how to invest in common stocks and mutual funds, and production of a 30-minute color film for general distribution that will give a visual insight to investment and a broker's transaction, step by step.

Finally, he is hopeful that the Montreal exchanges will be able by the end of the year to extend computerized closed-circuit TV stock quotation service across Canada, a service now confined to brokerages in Montreal and Toronto. This alone would be a great selling aid, a Canadian first, putting Montreal in the same league as New York Stock Exchange in its service to investment dealers.

Montreal has the facilities and the capacity for many times the trading it now does. Its computer is unique, designed exclusively for the task and held by the exchange to be the finest in the world.

All it needs is more grist, and that must fall to human efforts to supply.

•

Meanwhile a crack is forming in the financial community. One of the nation's major investment houses, Pitfield, MacKay, Ross and Co. Ltd., this weekend is moving its head office from St. James Street to — of all places — Toronto.

Why? They say because Ontario has 14 Pitfield offices to serve, Quebec only two. For this firm the glitter of prestige is gone from St. James Street. They are going to where the action is.

Paper Soggy

By KEN SMITH
Canadian Press Business Editor

TORONTO (CP) — Despite some hopeful talks earlier this year, Canada's pulp and paper industry appears to be some distance away from recovering from financial doldrums.

Bothered by over-capacity and growing competition in the key United States market, the industry absorbed another drop in net earnings in the first half of their year.

Total net profit of the 10 major companies showed a decline of 18.8 per cent to $46.3 million from $56.9 million in the similar 1967 period.

The major culprit in the situation is newsprint. Although the big companies have been diversifying into other products rapidly to try to balance sales, newsprint still accounts for about 44 per cent of all industry business.

Within Canada newsprint consumption has grown regularly.

Total daily circulation of members of the Canadian Daily Newspaper Publishers' Association this year is estimated at 4.48 million, up from 4.12 million a decade ago.

Consumption of newsprint by papers this year is estimated at 660,000 tons, up 3 per cent from 1967, an increase of 138,000 tons from five years ago and of 226,000 tons from 1958.

In the United States, however, the newsprint picture has not been so bright.

After increasing exports by 1 million tons over a three-year period to a record 6.6 million tons in 1966, Canada's sales in the U.S. fell 3.9 per cent to 6.3 million tons in 1967 and are expected to drop this year to 6.2 million tons.

More important in trying to assess the outlook, the U.S. mills have been adding to their capacity rapidly. Despite increased competition in the U.S. market, Canadian newsprint makers have expanded facilities rapidly in recent years.

Heart Failure Blamed

By The Canadian Press

The death of Wayne Larkin cast a pall over National Hockey League training camps Friday, but except for the New York Rangers camp at Kitchener, Ont., work went on.

Larkin, 29, of Buffalo Bisons of the American Hockey League, collapsed on the ice and died of an apparent heart attack during light skating workouts at the Rangers' camp.

The club cancelled drills for the rest of the day, but was to resume work today.

NHL president Clarence Campbell said Larkin's death was "a terrible thing, but what astonishes me is that it happened under unusual circumstances."

"He was merely skating. There was no body contact of any kind."

Campbell said electrocardiograms are not part of the routine examination given players, "but some clubs may well find it worth their while to order them from now on."

PUNCH SYMPATHIZES

Punch Imlach, general manager and coach of Toronto Maple Leafs, said Larkin's death was "a very unfortunate thing to happen."

But he said the Leafs will not cut back on the rigorous training program, which includes a lot of calisthenics.

"Our PT program which we started this year is designed to build up the players' bodies to be able to stand the strain and prevent such tragic accidents."

Talking of the Toronto conditioning program after Larkin's death, Imlach said he had "never heard of anyone dying because of PT."

"They tell me you'll pass out before you get hurt. This is the type of thing we're trying to prevent. We're trying to build up the heart so that it stands the strain."

BLAMES HIS HEART

Dr. Felice Viti of Brooklyn, N.Y., the Rangers' doctor, described Larkin's death as "an inexplicable heart death."

"He wasn't under any particular stress. It was just an ordinary skating session."

Larkin was married and the father of two daughters. His wife, Nina, is expecting their third child.

In London, Ont., coach Harry Sinden of Boston Bruins said star defenceman Bobby Orr will be able to skate when their camp opens today.

Orr underwent two operations this year for removal of a knee cartilage.

FOLLOWS DOC'S ORDERS

Sinden said Orr will be able "to do some light skating but his program, for a while at least, will be pretty well dictated by what the doctor told him."

At Haliburton, Ont., veteran NHL referee Vern Buffey was putting 70 refereeing candidates through a week-long school.

The instructors are all veterans: Art Skov, Bruce Hood, Bob Sloan, Matt Pavelich, Claude Bechard, Pat Shetler and Bill Beagan.

Friday, the class was addressed by Scotty Morrison, NHL referee-in-chief.

"You've got to be able to skate," he told the students. "You've got to be in shape to go 60 minutes. You've got to be decisive without being cocky. But first you've got to have a tough hide to take the sweet caresses of Mr. Imlach. . . ."

'SPIKES' SPARK CONTROVERSY

Sprinter John Carlos displays controversial shoes he wore while cracking world 200-metre record Thursday in U.S. Olympic track trials at South Lake Tahoe, Calif. Officials said his record (19.7 seconds) would be submitted for recognition, but with notation pointing out type of "spikes" used. Shoes have 68 short spikes in contrast to four or six longer spikes normally on track shoes.

Salmonbellies Taking Charge

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

New Westminster Salmonbellies won their second straight game 7-3 from Vancouver Friday night in the best-of-seven semi-finals for the Western Division title of the National Lacrosse Association.

In the East, Montreal Canadiens defeated Peterborough Lakers 9-6 in an Eastern Division semi-final which reduced the Lakers' lead in their best-of-seven series to 2-1.

Ken Oddy and Larry Henry led Salmonbellies with two goals each. Paul Parnell, Dave Tory and Wayne Goss added singles.

Marksmen for Vancouver were Sid Warick, Pete Black and Bill Rawson.

At Peterborough, Ron Roy, Brian Aherne and Gord Keats counted twice for Montreal. Singles were by Ken Thompson, Larry Ireland and Ken Richardson.

Jim Grady scored twice for Peterborough, with singles coming from Cy Coombes, Tim O'Grady, Larry Ferguson and Bob Sicinski.

Vancouver's loss was the second of the day. Western commissioner Tom English ruled earlier against a protest on Thursday's 11-10 loss.

"I will not interfere on a referee's discretion," said English, in ruling on the protest on two referees' calls.

'IRON CURTAIN' PAIR BOYCOTTS CUP EVENTS

VIENNA (Reuters) — Bulgaria and Poland have quit Europe's top club soccer competitions in the aftermath of the Warsaw Pact invasion of Czechoslovakia.

The European Football Association last month revised its schedules for the European Cup Winners Cup and the European Cup so that Eastern European teams behind the "Iron Curtain" were matched only among themselves.

The move was designed to avoid possible demonstrations against Communist teams playing in the West.

Poland and Bulgaria said the revision of the schedules is discriminatory and contrary to the rules of the competitions.

The two cups — played as a knockout series of home-and-away games — are Europe's premier competitions for individual teams from the various countries.

A Tender Hope For Lion Crew

By The Canadian Press

When Ottawa Rough Riders come out tough tonight against British Columbia Lions, the Eastern Conference leaders will have one very tender spot—quarterback Russ Jackson's ailing shoulder.

Tonight's CFL game between Ottawa and B.C. Lions is available to Cablevision subscribers only on Channel 10 starting at 8 p.m. and Sunday's CFL game between Winnipeg and Saskatchewan can be seen on Channel 8 starting at 1 p.m.

The Riders signal caller injured the limb in a contest Sept. 4 against Winnipeg. And the Lions, looking for a miracle that will boost them into the playoffs, are hoping the shoulder injury is really Ottawa's Achilles heel.

There had been a lot of talk along the Ottawa bench of giving Jackson a week off, but the red-hot race for the eastern title torpedoed that suggestion. And then the Riders got clobbered Wednesday night 25-20 by the Eskimos at Edmonton, so Jackson is starting tonight for sure.

In other weekend Canadian Football League action, Saskatchewan Roughriders, the Western Conference leaders, are expected to keep Winnipeg in the cellar when the teams meet in Regina Sunday.

In the East, Toronto Argonauts tangle with the Alouettes in Montreal Sunday afternoon.

The Lions are probably going to start veteran Jackie Parker, though there were reports earlier in the week that head coach Jim Champion would take a chance on Paul Brothers.

Regular starter Pete Ohler had a cast removed from his ankle earlier in the week, but won't be available for quarterback duties this weekend. Lions halfback Leroy Sledge, the team's biggest disappointment of the season, is another doubtful starter.

The Lions had pinned a lot of their hopes on Sledge before the season opened, but he's been plagued with knee problems.

In Regina, linebacker Jim Conroy and defensive back Johnny Bitchok will be out of the Winnipeg lineup, and three of their team-mates, Gene Lakeusiak, Peter Francis and Walt Chadwick are doubtful starters.

The Bombers haven't been able to dress a full 32-player complement for more than a month. While most WFC clubs find themselves overstaffed at this point in the season, Winnipeg will probably muster only 31 players by game time.

Racing Under Lights Increases Mutuel Play

VANCOUVER — Footprint won the feature, a dead heat featured the sixth race, and B.C. Turf Ltd. also declared itself a winner Friday.

W. H. MacDonald's Footprint, seemingly beaten at the quarter pole, came charging down the stretch to win the featured seventh race at Exhibition Park by two lengths over Kool Copy. Docette was third.

In the sixth, the photofinish camera failed to separate Pidge's Pride and Who's Haydn and they shared first-place money. Both were timed at 1:193-5 for the six-and-a-half furlong sprint.

SIX-MONTH EARNINGS

Off the track, B.C. Turf — a half-owner of the B.C. Jockey Club — reported six-month earnings (to June 30) of $104,240.

Jack Diamond, the company's president, informed shareholders that earnings should be comparable or better than total earnings last year of $110,866. There were no six-month figures issued last year.

Diamond said the use of lighting at Exhibition Park this year appeared to have increased gross pari-mutuel betting and he expected the increase to continue through the season.

Earning included $72,821 from the sale of land.

TULSA WINS PCL CROWN

SPOKANE (AP) — Tulsa won the 1968 Pacific Coast League baseball championship Friday, clinching the pennant on a 1-0 victory over Spokane behind the six-hit pitching of Chuck Taylor.

Taylor didn't walk a batter and struck out five in picking up his second win as the Oilers won the best-of-seven series four games to one.

Beliveau Glad He Didn't Quit in 1966

MONTREAL (CP) — Centre Jean Beliveau, entering his 16th full season with Montreal Canadiens, has signed a two-year contract with the National Hockey League team.

Beliveau is the third-highest goal-scorer in NHL history behind Gordie Howe of Detroit Red Wings and now-retired Rocket Richard of Montreal.

Beliveau, 37, said he almost retired in 1966, but that he was glad he had reconsidered the decision.

Earl Keeps Sign On Tiger Bullpen

Detroit's Relief Pitchers Baseball's Forgotten Men

By The Associated Press

The Do Not Disturb sign has been hanging in the Detroit bullpen for 10 days now and as the Tigers inch closer to the American League pennant their only problem seems to be remembering to invite relief pitchers to the celebration.

Earl Wilson shut out Oakland Athletics 3-0 on 10 hits Friday night. This, combined with second-place Baltimore Orioles' 10-2 loss to Cleveland Indians, cut Detroit's magic number to five. Any combination of Tiger victories or Oriole losses totaling five wraps it up.

Wilson's shutout was the seventh straight complete performance for the Detroit staff. The last time manager Mayo Smith had to summon help from the bullpen was Sept. 4.

In other American League games Friday, the streaking New York Yankees swept a doubleheader from Washington Senators 4-2 and 2-1, Boston Red Sox shut out Minnesota Twins 3-0 and Chicago White Sox edged California Angels 2-1.

Wilson, who won his 13th game, helped his own cause with an eighth-inning home run, his seventh homer this season and the 33rd of his career.

Earlier, Dick McAuliffe had tagged his 16th homer for the Tigers and Bill Freehan's bloop double had driven in another run.

Wilson worked his way out of jams in each of the last three innings, picking Reggie Jackson off second in the seventh, getting Rick Monday to bounce into an inning-ending double play in the eighth and stranding two runners in the ninth.

It was his second complete game in the recent route-going spree. Denny McLain, who went after his 30th victory of the season today, also had two and Pat Dobson, Mickey Lolich and John Hiller had the others.

Yanks Run Streak to Eight Games

Cleveland battered Baltimore, scoring six times in the third inning as Sonny Siebert and Mike Paul combined for a three-hitter. Max Alvis smashed a bases-loaded double, driving in three runs and keying the Indians' big inning.

The Yankees ran their winning streak to eight games—longest since 1964, the last year they won the pennant. New York has won 27 of 37.

Mel Stottlemyre won his 20th in the opener, allowing eight hits. Frank Fernandez and Mickey Mantle drove in two runs apiece. In the nightcap, rookie Stan Bahnsen captured his 16th on a seven-hitter with Bill Robinson's sixth-inning single driving in the deciding run.

Ken Harrelson drove in two runs and hit his 35th home run, helping the Red Sox past Minnesota. The two RBI gave the big guy 106 for the season—tops in the majors.

Cincinnati Reds made a big hit with St. Louis Cardinals after making five of them against San Francisco Giants.

Waving their wands, the Reds reduced St. Louis' magic number to three Friday night after a 6-3 victory over San Francisco that all but made the Giants disappear from the National League pennant race.

Cardinals Backing Toward Pennant

The Cardinals needed a little cheering up after losing to Houston Astros 4-2. Despite their own almost certain berth in the World Series, the Cardinals have been backing toward the pennant, losing seven of their last nine games.

In the rest of the league, New York Mets squeezed past Pittsburgh Pirates 2-0, Los Angeles Dodgers beat Atlanta Braves 2-0 and Philadelphia Phillies downed Chicago Cubs 3-1 before losing 9-1 in a twi-night doubleheader.

The Reds, best hitting team in baseball, proved it to the Giants in one inning. Trailing 2-0 on Willie McCovey's double and Dave Marshall's sacrifice fly, Cincinnati unloaded in the seventh inning against Gaylord Perry.

Alex Johnson opened the inning with a triple and one out later Lee May, Tony Perez and Hal McRae stroked consecutive doubles for three runs. Leo Cardenas then climaxed the eruption with his fifth homer, knocking out Perry, 14-14.

A double by Johnson in the eighth led to another run and Jim Maloney had his 13th victory against nine losses.

The Cardinals, no big hit themselves lately, caught the show in Houston after again forgetting the script that had put them high atop the league.

Still, the Cardinals need only enough victories or San Francisco defeats totalling three to capture their second consecutive flag.

McLain Nearing Plateau

DETROIT (AP)—This is the Year of the Pitcher in major league baseball, and the Pitcher of the Year is Denny McLain who may owe more to a couple of dislocated toes than a strong right arm.

The dislocated toes may be the reason McLain was shooting today to become the first 30-game winner since Dizzy Dean in 1934.

It was just a little over a year ago that the dislocated toes became a part of baseball lore. McLain headed into September with 17 victories and his Detroit Tigers looking for several more as they battled for the American League pennant.

JUST MISSED

But 17 was it for McLain. Two dislocated toes kept him from making another start until the last day of the season and the Tigers finished one game behind pennant-winning Boston Red Sox.

No one on the Tigers is about to say that McLain's dislocated toes cost Detroit the pennant, but there's no doubt the feeling existed.

McLain's explanation was that he had fallen asleep on a couch at home. Awakened suddenly by a noise in another part of the house, he automatically jumped off the couch.

His leg buckled under him and result was two dislocated toes.

MORE SERIOUS

Now, only a year later at age 24, McLain is treading in the heady waters of 30 victories, a plateau reached previously by only 13 pitchers in the history of major league baseball.

While McLain will talk about the dislocated toes, he doesn't deal with them as directly as his wife Sharyn, a knowledgeable baseball wife whose father is Lou Boudreau, former player and manager.

"I think he's been more serious since then," Sharyn says. "Winning the pennant means a lot to the players this year, especially with what they went through last year.

"And don't think that didn't bother Denny a lot. You never know how many games he might have won in September, and the pennant went right down to the last game. I know how much this means to him."

"It's quite possible that the toes had something to do with it," McLain says.

Unitas Doubtful Starter

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Atlanta opens at Minnesota tonight, but the big question on the inaugural weekend of the National Football League's 49th season is whether Johnny Unitas will open at quarterback for Baltimore.

"Extremely doubtful," Colt coach Don Shula said of his star quarterback's chances of starting Sunday's game against San Francisco. Earl Morrall is the likely signal-caller.

The outcome of the Atlanta-Minnesota inter-division game—the only National Football League game scheduled tonight—isn't likely to have a major effect on either team's final divisional standing, but the presence or absence of the veteran Unitas could be a major factor in the tough Coastal Division, where Baltimore is expected to again challenge Los Angeles.

Unitas hurt his throwing arm a week ago against Dallas and the usually stoic leader of the Colts admitted "it hurts worse than ever," after a brief workout.

ONE OF SIX

The game is one of six Sunday afternoon.

In addition to the San Francisco-Baltimore affair, the other Sunday games are Philadelphia at Green Bay, New York at Pittsburgh, Detroit at Dallas, Washington at Chicago and Cleveland at New Orleans.

The American Football League goes into its second week of activity with Houston at Miami Saturday night and New York at Kansas City, Denver at Cincinnati and Oakland at Buffalo in Sunday afternoon games.

Wakeham Three Back; Putting Ills Hit Trapp

WOODBRIDGE, Ont. (CP)—Wayne Vollmer says "positional play" is the secret in beating the treacherous 6,563-yard Board of Trade Country Club layout.

"You have to use exactly the right club," the 23-year-old Vancouver golfer said Friday after taking the first-round lead in the Canadian Professional Golfers Association tour championship with a four-under-par 66.

"I used a four-wood off the tee on the 18th and a three-wood off the ninth."

Putting and driving were the secrets to Vollmer's success. He was seldom in the rough and took only 32 putts during the round.

Close on his heels came Bobby Breen of Toronto with a 68, while Moe Norman of Gilford, Ont., Bill Wakeham of Victoria and Alvie Thompson of Toronto followed at 69.

WINDS UP TOUR

The 54-hole medal-play championship is the windup of the 1968 Canadian professional tour. It features the 12 top professionals in the nine previous tournaments with a top prize of $3,000 and total prize money of $15,000.

Bob Cox of Vancouver and Len Harvey of Regina were the only other golfers to manage par Friday. Both finished at 70, two strokes better than Wilf Homenuik of Winnipeg and four better than Stan Homenuik of Dauphin, Man.

Trevor Bateman of Montreal finished with 76, John Hendrick of Montreal had 77 and Vaughan Trapp of Victoria had 81.

Vollmer started the round with an extra stroke on the par-four first hole.

"I thought I was going to have one of those days right then," he said. "But I felt better after I parred the second."

FINISHES TWO UNDER

Vollmer felt so good that he shot three straight birdies after that and finished the first nine holes with a two-under 33.

He started the back nine with an eagle three on the 10th hole, parred the next two and took his only other extra stroke on the par-four 13th.

Veterans Norman and Thompson both started fast and were three under par after nine holes. But both lost the lead and Breen, playing just ahead of them, held his two-under edge over the final nine.

The most disappointed golfer after the round was Trapp, the Vancouver Island Open champ, who found himself unable to putt. He missed a number of putts from less than four feet and watched several other long ones hang on the lip of the cup.

Young Pro Hot But Vets Lead

SUTTON, Mass.—Youthful Marty Fleckman set a blistering pace Friday but Paul Harney and Art Wall, a pair of veteran pros, continued to wreck par and shared a two-stroke lead today as play started in the third round of the $150,000 Kemper Open golf tournament.

Wall and Harney put together second straight sub-par efforts to share the lead with 36-hole totals of 137 at the halfway mark at Pleasant Valley Country Club.

Fleckman, however, stunned the field by setting a course record of 34-32—66, six under par on the spacious 7,230-yard layout. The tremendous round moved the 1965 National Collegiate Athletic Association champion from Houston into a tie for third with Arnold Palmer, Doug Sanders, Howie Johnson and Orville Moody.

Wall, whose best effort this year has been a tie for eighth place in the American Golf Classic, picked up four birdies in two under par 35, and then carding three birdies for a 32 on the back nine

HAS 35 PUTTS

Palmer added a two-under-par 70 despite 35 putts for 139.

Sanders, another veteran who has slumped because of outside business interests this year, fashioned a neat 35-33—68. Johnson had 33-35—68 and Moody a 36-32—68.

J. C. Goosie, who had an opening 68, added a 72. He was tied at 140 with Australian Bruce Crampton, who had a second-round 71, and Al Geiberger, who posted a second 70.

Another stroke back at 141 were Al Balding of Toronto, Jerry McGee, Jack Montgomery and Bobby Cole of South Africa. McGee had a 69, Balding 70 and Cole a brilliant 67.

The first-round leader, Noel Goldstrand, blew up on the back nine and finished with 75 for a total of 142.

The field of 140 was trimmed to the low 70 scorers and ties. The cutoff was 147. The casualties included U.S. Open champion Lee Trevino, Chi Chi Rodriguez.

Mexican Boat Clings to Lead In Tuna Derby

YARMOUTH, N.S. (CP) — Only seven hours of fishing stood between the Mexicans and the Alton B. Sharp Trophy when five teams took to the boats this morning in the final day of the international tuna cup match.

It has been 11 years since the Mexicans won the silver cup, which symbolizes world supremacy in tuna fishing. They won it in 1957 on the strength of a 655-pound bluefin that outweighed catches by the British and Cuban teams.

Mexico also won it in 1954 with five fish, weighing 2,180 pounds, and in 1953 with a single 728-pounder.

However, the Mexican team did not appear over-confident Friday night. When reminded that his 860-pound tuna taken the first day was match leader, Juan Posada of Mexico City said: "You can't say that until tomorrow at two." The match will end then unless there is a fish on a line.

Louis Deverteuil of Barbados, veteran angler from the British-Caribbean team, launched the match Tuesday by hooking into a 756-pound fish that swam wildly for three hours and 40 minutes, exactly the same time it took Posada to bring his to gaff two hours later.

Defending champion United States, Canada and Italy, entered for the first time, have had little more than nibbles.

DINSDALE TO COACH

Stoke Fullback Helps Arsenal Increase Lead

LONDON (P) — Arsenal increased its lead over Leeds United to two points when it scraped home 1-0 against Stoke City in an English League First Division game today.

Heavy rain turned the field into a quagmire and neither team could control the ball. Arsenal got its goal when Stoke fullback John Farmer put the ball into his own net just before halftime.

Leeds dropped a valuable point in drawing 1-1 at Leicester and West Ham United was held to a 2-2 tie by Tottenham at Upton Park where the gates were closed 15 minutes before the start of the all-London clash.

Burnley, hammered 7-0 by Tottenham Hotspur Sept. 7, scored a surprise 1-0 win over European champion Manchester United, which will travel to Ireland next week for its first defence of the trophy.

ARSENAL EXTENDED

Despite its all-round superiority, Arsenal had to work hard for the win, which gave it 16 points from nine games. Leeds was two points behind with a game in hand.

Chelsea took over third place from West Ham with an easy 4-0 victory against fellow Londoners, Queen's Park Rangers.

West Ham went ahead after 57 minutes in its game against Tottenham on a goal by Martin Peters and Geoff Hurst made it 2-0 with another goal two minutes later. But the greatly improved Spurs came back within minutes on a goal by Jimmy Greaves and Alan Gilzean salvaged a tie with a goal with five minutes to play.

Chelsea's win against Queen's Park plunges the Rangers into deep trouble. They now are at the bottom of the league, three points behind last year's league champion Manchester City which tied 1-1 with Southampton at home.

WEST BROMWICH WINS

West Bromwich Albion, the English Cup holders, scored its first away win of the season when it beat Newcastle 3-1, and Liverpool also collected its first win away with a 2-0 victory at Ipswich.

Blackpool, the Second Division's only unbeaten team, moved into second place behind Charlton with a 2-1 win at Millwall, ending another long unbeaten home sequence by the London team.

Charlton, which drew 1-1 at Preston, has 13 points in nine games and Blackpool has 12 with a game in hand.

One of the surprises in this division was the home defeat of Sheffield United, which fell 2-1 to Oxford United—a Third Division team last year.

The third Division leaders, Luton Town, defeated Tranmere 3-1. Luton's nearest rivals, Mansfield, now three points behind, travelled to Barrow and lost 3-0. It was Barrow's first home win of the season.

Darlington retained its lead in the Fourth Division with a 3-2 win against Notts County.

Gulls and Cats Ready to Work

Another hockey season will explode in Victoria Monday, when both the San Diego Gulls and Victoria Cougars will hit the ice at Memorial Arena to launch their training campaigns.

Manager-coach Max McNab's Gulls, who have been cracking Western Hockey League attendance records, in their modern arena, will be holding their first training camp in Victoria after preparing for their first two seasons at Chilliwack.

"We had an excellent camp in Chilliwack," McNab says, "but I believe Victoria is an ideal location in every way. All of the facilities are of professional stature."

Veteran defenceman Jack Evans, who is returning to the Gulls this season as a player and assistant coach, is expected to handle the club during the first week while McNab visits the training camp of Detroit Red Wings."

THREE GAMES HERE

Most of the Gulls are expected to report Sunday and McNab expects to have about 20 players in camp.

McNab announced this week that San Diego would play three of five pre-season exhibition games in Memorial Arena. The Gulls tackle the Cougars in their first outing next Saturday night. They will meet Portland Buckaroos on Sept. 28 and trangle with Phoenix Roadrunners on Oct. 1.

Cougars, preparing for their second British Columbia Junior Hockey League season, will follow the professional Gulls on the ice Monday morning.

McNab and Evans are planning to have their athletes working in two daily sessions, starting at 9 a.m. and 1 p.m. through the week.

Cougar coach Doug Anderson, who was winding up a tryout camp at Esquimalt Sports Centre today, will send the young Cats out for workouts each day at 11:15 a.m. and bring them back for evening sessions.

Richmond League Signing Players

Registration for boys and girls wishing to play in the Richmond Community Basketball League will be held next week.

Enrolment is limited to youngsters between nine and 13 years of age (as of Dec. 31, 1968) and residing within the Richmond Elementary School attendance area. Girls will register Sept. 16 and the boys the following evening (7 to 8:30 p.m.) at Richmond.

Registration fee is $3 per player, up to a maximum of $6 per family.

What's so great about phoning on Sunday?

B.C. Tel, part of Trans-Canada
Telephone System

Costs one-fifth less—that's what!

Sunday is the put-your-feet-up-and-relax day. That's why we made it bargain day for phoning. All day Sunday long distance calls cost around 20% less than on weekdays—enabling customers to call almost anywhere in the ten provinces for a maximum cost of $1.95 for the first three minutes. This day-long rate reduction is particularly convenient when phoning relatives or friends in Eastern Canada, with its three to four-and-a-half hour time differential. The same reduced charges apply each weekday evening from 6 p.m. So why bother to write, especially on a lazy Sunday?

DALEY PLANS DEFENCE ON TV

CHICAGO (AP) — The official Chicago version of disturbances during the Democratic national convention will be broadcast Sunday over radio and television stations from Hawaii to London.

The one-hour program was produced by the city after Mayor Richard J. Daley argued that network telecasts during the convention week gave a one-sided portrayal of the situation.

MOORE
. . . 'best in years'

Moore, Thompson Differ On Value of Settlement

VANCOUVER (CP) — The International Woodworkers of America Friday ended its annual western Canadian convention with a free-for-all leadership campaign that will be settled by mail voting.

Delegates aligned with either opposition or incumbent officer slates strayed from a routine report and used it as an opportunity to campaign.

And it gave regional president Jack Moore a chance to answer critics who have questioned his leadership in coast negotiations and 7½-month strike in the southern interior.

"I'll stand on the record I've put out over the years," he told delegates of the largest union in B.C. "I've been president of the regional council since 1962 and since then we've got the best contracts on the coast that we've ever had."

BEST-RUN STRIKE

He said the interior walkout "was the best-run strike I've ever seen" and called the coast settlement which provided 36 cents over two years "a tremendous victory."

Syd Thompson, president of the 7,000-member Vancouver local and Mr. Moore's leadership rival, said the interior fell behind the coast in wages because of three-year contracts recommended by regional officers.

"And when you produce second-rate settlements you get into a situation the interior found itself in," he said.

But the leadership and the strike fund — the two major issues at the convention — were not settled.

The leadership will be decided by a ballot among the more than 38,000 IWA members in Western Canada, most of them in B.C. The vote will be tabulated within 40 days.

The strike fund, which dwindled to $1,007,000 from $3,750,000 during the interior strike, will be dealt with at a special convention that must be held before Jan. 31, 1969.

REVIEW TEST

A resolution calling for reactivation of a three-man committee to study the IWA's "errant members list" was approved and ordered the committee to conduct its review with the objective of returning as many as possible to full membership.

The list began in 1948 when a Communist-leaning group attempted a takeover of the union. The convention was told that many people were put on the blacklist "just at the whim of some individual"

Other resolutions approved:

● The provincial government increase living-out allowances to $10 and that the allowance be made available to injured workers requiring treatment away from their place of residence;

● Legislation requiring police to inform arrested citizens of their rights under the law at the time of their arrest;

● The Canadian Labor Congress to ask the federal justice minister to instruct the RCMP to cease a practice of investigating citizens' political beliefs; and

● Changes to federal and provincial election acts to provide loggers with four hours of voting time free from his marshalling point on election days.

ISLAND ROUNDUP

Trailer Court Plan Dropped

NORTH COWICHAN — The trailer court proposed for the shores of Quamichan Lake will definitely not go ahead.

Victoria developer Ed Court has withdrawn his application, and the municipal council is processing amendments to the zoning bylaws which would make a renewal of the project impossible.

One amendment will mean that applications for new trailer courts will have to be considered by council and no approval can be given until a public zoning hearing has been held.

The council moved to make these amendments after the Quamichan Lake proposal raised a storm of protest from lakeside residents.

The residents claimed the trailer court would cause pollution of the domestic water supply from the lake and adversely affect property values.

Mr. Court's original application was for a 15-acre site to house 30 trailers.

A second amendment will allow existing trailer courts at Crofton, Gibbins Road and Silver Park to continue as non-conforming uses.

COOMBS — A 34-event horse show will be featured at the fall fair this weekend.

Local riding clubs will cooperate in putting on the two-day show which includes both English and Western events.

Other fair attractions include a children's pet parade, horseshoe tournament, women's nail-driving contest, tug-of-war, handicraft displays and an exhibition of produce and livestock.

PORT ALBERNI — Trevor Cole, aquatic director at the Echo 67 pool, has accepted a position with the Vancouver Amateur Swim Club.

In accepting Mr. Cole's resignation from the Alberni club, recreational director Duncan Russell said "when someone of Trevor Cole's dedication and understanding decides to leave, it is a real loss to any community."

Mr. Cole formerly coached the Canadian national swim club.

PORT ALBERNI (CP) — Donald Giacomazzi, 25, died in hospital Friday after suffering severe injuries in an accident at the McLean logging operation, five miles north of here. He suffered chest injuries in the accident.

Jurisdictional confusion between the provincial health department and the pollution control board should be cleared up by the proposed new standards for air and water purity, Resources Minister Ray Williston said Friday.

The not-yet published standards, announced by Health Minister Ralph Loffmark, were welcomed by the resources minister, responsible for the PCB.

"If the health department sets standards now, then the people in the pollution control board will know right off the bat that they would have to meet these basic health standards," he said.

The PCB would no longer be "groping around in the dark and having to go back to the health department to find out."

It would "clarify the apparent jurisdictional overlap."

Mr. Williston said reasonable standards could be applied with toughness and vigor to both municipalities and industries.

Approval of a $76,473 loan to build accommodation of 18 elderly persons at Ladysmith was announced Firday by Central Mortgage and Housing Corp.

It was one of three low-interest, long-term federal loans totalling $387,876 for similar projects in B.C.

★ ★ ★

COURTENAY — Federal financial aid may be given to cover the cost of rebuilding cribbing along the banks of the Puntledge River.

Bill Moore, city-clerk administrator and mayor George Hodson met recently in Vancouver with Public Works minister Arthur Laing to discuss the project.

Mr. Moore said the city had asked $100,000 for a complete rebuilding of the cribbing, part of which collapsed recently.

Damage to the 100-foot section was estimated at about $15,000.

Mr. Moore said it was an urgent job which had to be completed within two months, before high water washed away Lewis Park.

Phone Call Aids Police Get Suspect

HOLLYWOOD, Fla. (AP) — A former policeman was charged today as the man who killed a 12-year-old girl and then telephoned police to say "please catch me!"

A second-degree murder warrant charged Robert John Erler Jr., 24, with the killing of Marilyn Clark, whose partially-clothed body was found with five bullets in the head Aug. 12.

Erler resigned from the Hollywood police Sept. 5 for "personal reasons." Police sent out a nationwide bulletin for him after issuing the warrant today, calling Erler armed and dangerous.

After a man called police and said "I just killed three people," the body of the girl and her wounded 42-year-old mother were found four miles apart.

The mother, Mrs. Dorothy Clark, had been shot six times in the head but survived with some facial paralysis. She was in a hospital today, unaware her child was dead.

Erler lived in a nearby trailer park with his wife and one child.

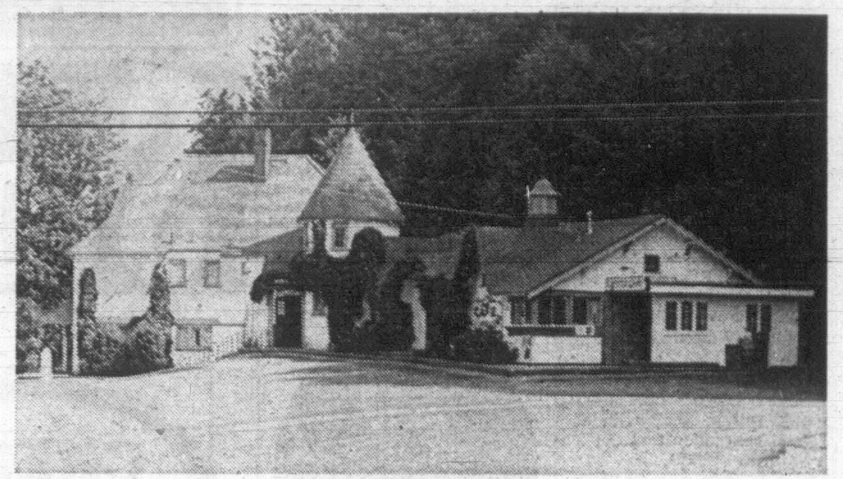
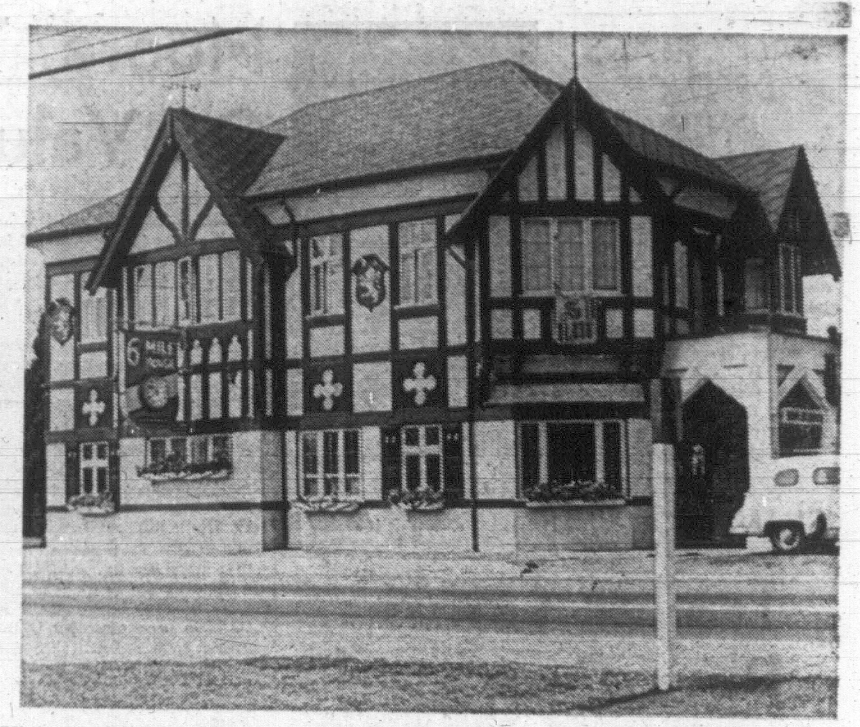
They Went to the Outside Inn In Victoria's Beerless Years

By Ed Gould

During a discussion of the sinking of the Cunard liner Lusitania, on May 7, 1915, an unfortunate remark was made in the beer parlor of the Kaiserhauf Hotel on Blanshard Street.

As a result, the interior of the German-owned hotel was left a shambles as patrons threw furniture into the street. A piano, keys spewing, was hurled through a window.





Two popular outside inns are the Sooke River Hotel (above) and the Six-Mile House at Parson's Bridge on the old Island Highway (right). Sooke pub used to be the stables and grooms' quarters for the old Belvedere Hotel. The Six-Mile House, in true Tudor style, was built in 1855.

The Kaiserhauf never served any more beer. Not even after it re-opened as The Cecil. Today—renamed The Kent Apartment Hotel—it's a very sedate residence for elderly Victorians.

More than any other incident, the Kaiserhauf riot was symbolic of the way Victoria crashed into the dreariest period of its existence. Beer licences were banned from then until 1954.

Although Victoria was not entirely dry (Government liquor stores were open until 8 p.m. each evening), in order to wet his chops with foam and ferment, a resident had to cross the border into Esquimalt.

•

Three pubs quickly prospered from their increased patronage: Halfway House, The Coach and Horses, and The Esquimalt Hotel.

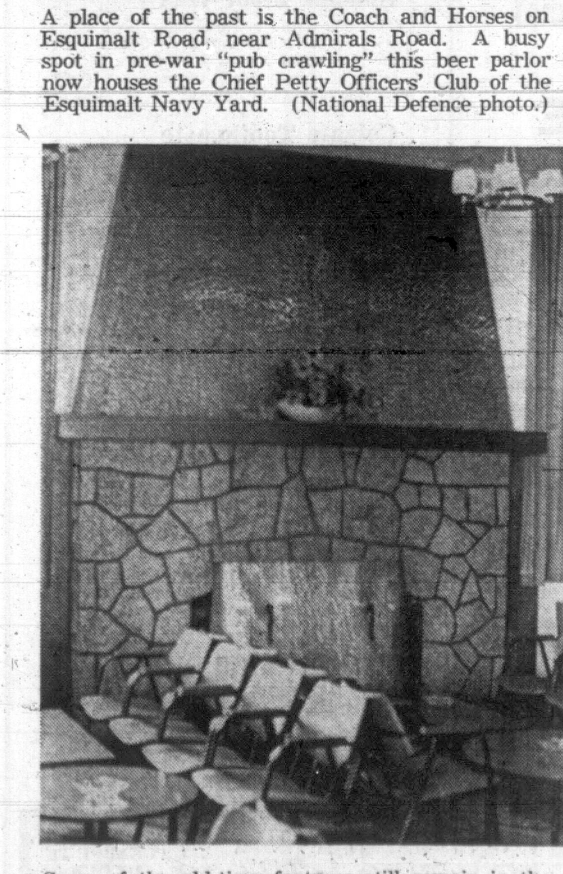
Beer drinkers who were often also straphangers could take the number four streetcar and hit all three and then make a dash back to the Halfway for a final swig on the way home.

The last streetcar left outside The Esquimalt (also called End House) at 11:45 p.m. which worked out fine since the pub closed at 11:30. Anyone waiting until the last dreg was drunk ended up on the last car which only went as far as the B.C. Electric carbarns at Pembroke and the Esquimalt pubs were soon Government.

•

Regular Victoria patrons of the Esquimalt pubs were soon joined by tourists from the CPR steamship tours who dumped their passengers pitilessly on Victoria's arid shores. Many had to stand in line for cabs to make the dash for the perimeter pubs.

A place of the past is the Coach and Horses on Esquimalt Road, near Admirals Road. A busy spot in pre-war "pub crawling" this beer parlor now houses the Chief Petty Officers' Club of the Esquimalt Navy Yard. (National Defence photo.)



Some of the old-time features still remain in the Coach and Horses Inn, including this attractive fireplace. Building was recently refurbished by Bob Benson, whose father built the original.

"A hell of a good time could be had for 60 or 70 cents in those days," recalls Archie McBride, manager of Pacific Brewery Warehousing, through which property the number four used to veer.

Those noisy, swaying, beery-breathed crowds and the streetcars they rode in have now passed from the scene and the pubs have either disappeared or altered radically.

•

Halfway House burned down and has been replaced; The Coach and Horses is now the Chief Petty Officers' Mess; and The Esquimalt Hotel—which was eventually enveloped by the naval yard—has been torn down.

However, there are still Outside Inns of charm and in this article I would like to take the reader for a tour of some of them.

Standing almost to the sidewalk, the former Halfway House was an imposing structure. It did a roaring trade when sailors from the dry San Francisco area docked their ships at the Outer Wharf and ran panting into the beverage room.

George "Joker" Paton held forth here until he left to operate the British Public Schools Club in April, 1936.

•

The new Halfway was built in 1941 and is now operated by George Laak. The spacious Tudor-style pub features a live girl who fashions hot beef sandwiches on French bread inside a glassed-in rotisserie from 11:45 to 10:30 daily.

An unfeatured attraction at the 856 Esquimalt Road location is the ladies' powder room, claimed to be the fanciest in the country.

This is not first-hand information but was conveyed to me by a member of the opposite sex who intimated it "was worth the trip just to see it!"

The second stop along our tour route is The Coach and Horses which the navy took over during the war, using it for emergency housing and later a home for WRENs.

Little remains of the former building except an attractive fireplace recently rebuilt by Bob Benson. It dominates the northwest wall upstairs.

By asking permission of Chief R. E. Utley you can get a look at the old basement storage room which now houses a games room and bar dubbed The Coach N' Forces.

The fireplace in the Tudor House Hotel at the corner of Admirals Road and Esquimalt was filled with broken glasses after they were raised in salute to the allies at the end of World War II.

It only happens once at the end of a World War and owner-host Mickey Pearce is not looking forward to another one.

•

The Tudor House building used to be a sailor's home and, according to Mickey, it's still a sailor's home. With its 350 seats, it's a large navy house. When the fleet is in the circular racks around the pillars are filled to overflowing with gob's headgear.

That's not all that will be full if George Craig, 29 years at the same tap, has anything to say about it.

The mens' side of The Tudor House is a classic example of what can be done with a dirty, old Canadian beer parlor. With its gold and brown wallpaper, dark blue carpet and deep, comfortable leatherette chairs and lounges, it is even more tastefully appointed than the ladies' side.

•

The feature wall on the ladies' side is covered by a giant Viking ship, carved by a Vancouver man. It took him two years to do, says Mickey.

Elsewhere, bronze shields and swords adorn the walls and these look so authentic it's surprising they haven't been taken up in anger. But Mickey runs a tight ship with a fast lip for his shipmates.

One of the first places the navy rings during emergency recall is the Tudor House. "Then all these gobs head for the bush," Mickey says. "Especially if it's a Friday night. Hell, I was here three years before I found out the dockyard was that way!"

The Tudor advertises De luxe navy Burgers for $1. There's a jukebox, very low key, but no games. Mickey supplies much of the entertainment for his guests.

•

An in-coming rating mentions his leg is in a cast. "What did you do? Drop a pencil on it? That should be good for at least a month's leave."

He says to a tableful of laughing seamen: "If they get a pain anywhere they put a cast on it. You see those gravel trucks going by here that look like they're carrying lime for the gardens? It's plaster of Paris going to Naden."

After leaving The Tudor House; drive down Admirals Road out to Craigflower and left turn into View Royal. You will notice on your left as you drive up the hill in the 200-block Old Island Highway a building that looks just like an old British pub.

•

This is Four Mile House, a coach house which never got a beer licence. It's now cut up into apartments.

Farther along the same route is Six Mile House at Parson's Bridge. It was built by a man of that name and was formally opened for business on February 16, 1855 with what was described as a "grand spree" in the diary of Robert Melrose, a Craigflower pioneer.

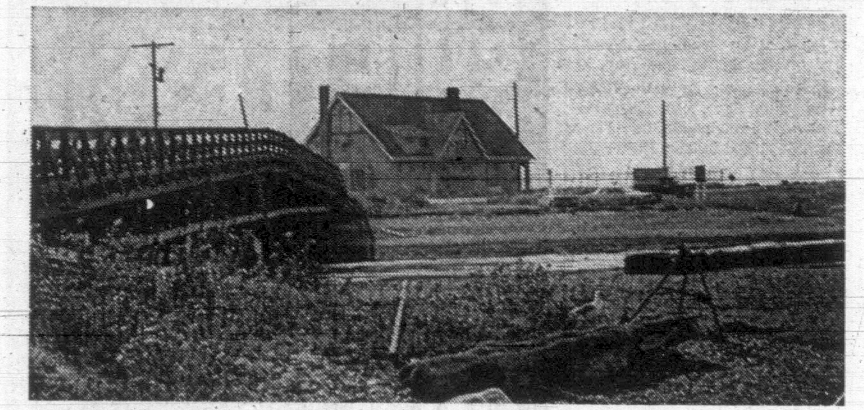
The front part of the building is original. The Six Mile House is now run and owned by Red and Archie McMillan, well-known Victoria-area sports figures.

Both were in the publishing business before they became publicans: Archie was a stereotyper for Victoria Press for 15 years and Red worked for 12 years as a bookbinder for The Queen's Printer.

The B.C. Lions, a sometime football club, have been known to roar in here after working out at nearby Royal Roads and "put back on all the pounds they took off that day," says Red.

THE HALFWAY HOUSE

New Halfway House features hot beef on French bread and the fanciest of ladies' powder rooms.



Popular spot in pre-World War II days was The Dugout at Esquimalt Lagoon on Coburg Peninsula, between Colwood and Metchosin. It was here imbibers were sent on their way each night at closing time with the pleading voice of the bartender echoing in their ears: "Time, gentlemen, please. It is not my wish but an act of Parliament."

•

There's no beer available at the next stop. It's strictly historical and scenic. Turn left at the entrance to Belmont Park until you come to an old wooden bridge. The Dugout Hotel is on the left.

This is not the original — it burned down — and was only run as a pub for a short while during the Second World War. Built of logs, the Dugout (sometimes called The Land's End) had a beautiful sea view and interior lights fashioned like little beer barrels.

If you remember to bring a bucket and shovel there's excellent clamming here along Lagoon Road on the Coburg Peninsula. After a few twists and turns you'll find yourself on Metchosin Road which leads back to Sooke Road.

Turn left and continue along to our next pub stop: The Royal Ensign. Sometimes called 17 Mile House, this charming inn was originally christened The British Ensign.

Now on a busy three-way intersection in the heart of the Colwood shopping district where the old Island Highway gets together with the road to Sooke and Metchosin, the Colwood Inn once was considered to be quite remote.

Inside you'll discover a colorful Dutch tile floor made and installed by Robert Marsh, a Victoria craftsman who did the tile work in Christ Church Cathedral and the Parliament Buildings and Legislative Museum.

•

The pub was built by Mr. L. Cutler from whip-sawn lumber and handcut nails in the mid-1800s. The present owner will oblige with stories of its early days.

A recent American patron confessed to a liking for the winding country road leading to Sooke. "In the States we'd advertise it as a tourist attraction," he said.

It's unlikely such praise was heaped on the first Sooke to Metchosin road built in 1854 by Indian laborers who were paid $8 a month. The first bridge over the Sooke River was completed in 1872. It was 339 feet long and took 55,000 feet of lumber.

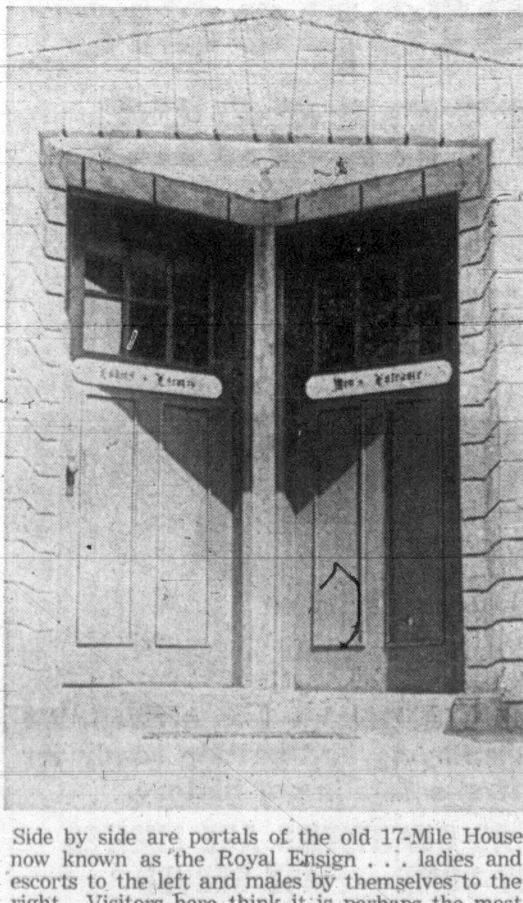
•

That original bridge has long since disappeared but it is across the present bridge that we make our next stop, The Sooke River Hotel.

Owned and operated by Bill Rittaler and son Jim, this again is an original building, although it was not constructed as a public house but stables for the old Belvedere Hotel.

Victorians used to drive out in coaches for the weekend to stay at the Belvedere. The Prince of Wales spent two weeks there while hunting around Sooke. Unfortunately the Belvedere — which used to sit above the present Sooke River Hotel — burned down in the Thirties.

If you enter the hotel through the mens' entrance you are in the former tack-room and grooms' quarters while the ladies' side was where the horses were kept. Incidentally, there's excellent food available through the door into the licensed Castle Cafe.



Side by side are portals of the old 17-Mile House now known as the Royal Ensign . . . ladies and escorts to the left and males by themselves to the right. Visitors here think it is perhaps the most quaint of the old-time inns.

•

But time now to swing back toward Victoria and our next stop: The Colwood Inn.

It was here that Teddy Haven installed a glass tube to carry beer from the barrel in the basement to the upstairs bar tap. This amazing feat of beer on the run was watched with fascination by hundreds of imbibers daily. This, in a day when most beer was drawn straight from the keg in rubber tubing.

The present Colwood Inn was built closer to the highway and was replaced about 40 years ago with the present structure now run by dapper Jimmy Russell.

•

Another Tudor design, it even has authentic leaded panes which, according to Russell, are "the very devil to clean and almost impossible to fix if broken."

Most patrons of the Colwood Inn are satisfied to quaff a few and watch the traffic build up outside at the intersection. But Joe Crossfield once let loose a deodorized skunk to enliven the ladies' side.

The drive to the next public house starts by finding the exit from the parking lot. Proceed with the green light straight along Goldstream Road to the Trans-Canada Highway and left at the sign to the Goldstream Inn.

This pub sits on the same property as one also run by Ma Miller. Customers were encouraged to call for service by ringing little bells set on each table. Ma would then enter from her garden patch at the rear and draw the beer.

•

The present Inn is about 35 years old. It does mostly local trade because of its secluded location but occasionally a camper from the nearby Goldstream Park campsite will take a half dozen back to the tent.

The proprietor, "Buzz" Williams will draw your attention to the attractive fieldstone fireplace and its giant beer steins.

The scenery along the way will clear your head for our final stop, at the Gorge Hotel. Follow the Trans-Canada towards Victoria until you come to Burnside Avenue, then turn right down Tillicum across the Gorge Bridge.

A Mrs. Marshall once ran a saloon out of an old house on this site. The present building and business was established by the three Maggiora brothers: John, Peter and Con. Then along came Joe Politano who worked himself up from gardener in 1937 to managing director in 1951.

His partners are Arthur Mawer and son John.

The Gorgeous Gorge features the only reversible falls in the world outside of the Bay of Funday, claims Mr. Politano.

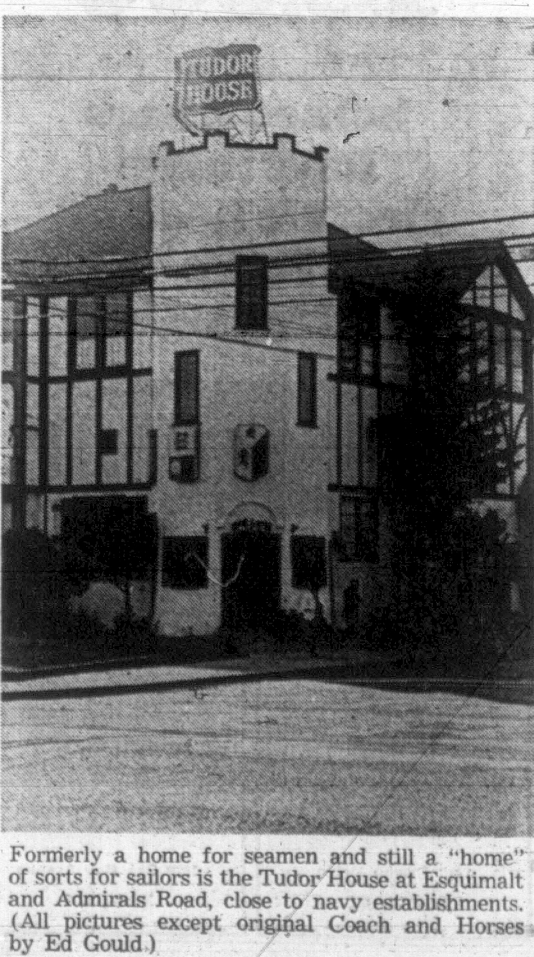
•

This phenomena of water rushing up the higher ground behind the Gorge Bridge can be seen through the windows on the ladies' side.

When the tide goes out the water boils down and throws up a foam like a head on beer. Speedboats cruise under the bridge and on warm spring days OAPs can be seen fishing under the weeping willows.

Mr. Politano will tell the story of the motorman on the Number 5 streetcar who rushed in for a quick one and got stuck up and robbed. Which says something for leaving the switch during working hours.

The Gorge Hotel is a jolly spot to terminate this tour of the Outside Inns. The jolliness here is kept at a manageable level by four of the largest waiters ever collected in one public house. Their combined weight equals one-half ton? And that's a lot of beer.



Formerly a home for seamen and still a "home" of sorts for sailors is the Tudor House at Esquimalt and Admirals Road, close to navy establishments. (All pictures except original Coach and Horses by Ed Gould.)

Big Work List Dismays Tories

By ALEX FARRELL

OTTAWA (CP)—The opposition has been deprived of its customary pleasure of saying that the government is not ready to meet Parliament with legislation.

On the order paper, as the House of Commons looks ahead to the first full week of the new session, is a list of 47 bills enumerated by Prime Minister Trudeau Thursday. A government spokesman said that about 35 of them have been fully written and are ready for introduction at any time.

What the opposition is saying, however, is that the government has not used the time since the June election to forge any new weapons or policies for combatting such pressing problems as inflation, unemployment, unsold wheat and the housing shortage.

Opposition leader Stanfield declared that the throne speech was so empty that he has no choice but to move non-confidence in the government when the Commons meets Monday.

Only the titles of the 47 bills are on the table as yet. However, it is obvious that many of them, including some of the most substantial items, are leftovers from the previous Liberal government and may be introduced much as they were on the order paper of the last Parliament.

MUST CLEAN HOUSE

The throne speech itself insisted on the necessity of cleaning up a large backlog of unfinished legislation before the government could bring in many new measures.

Mr. Trudeau will bring back the comprehensive Criminal Code reform bill that he presented to Parliament last year as justice minister. Other big items in the backlog include changes in the Food and Drug Act and the Narcotic Control Act.

Old, but in a slightly different category, are a bill to increase postal rates and a bill to set up a Canada Development Corporation that would channel private funds into large development projects. There was a postal bill at the last session, when the Liberals formed a minority government, but it was defeated in the Commons. There was no Canada Development Corporation bill at the last session, but the idea has been mentioned in throne speeches for the last several years.

Another revived piece of unfinished business is a controversial labor bill that was designed to allow the establishment of regional bargaining units within nationwide industries. A government spokesman said the original draft is undergoing some revision, but he did not elaborate.

Stable Economy Seen for Canada

OTTAWA (CP) — A stable Canadian dollar, a balanced budget and a thorough revision of the Income Tax Act were cited Friday as likely results of a majority Liberal government by Senator Lazarus Phillips (L—Quebec). required to stabilize the price

The 75-year-old Montreal businessman, named to the Senate last February, dealt primarily with economic matters as he moved the adoption of Thursday's speech from the throne.

He said Canada's future as a trading nation depends on stabilitzing prices and wages and called on labor not to make "inordinate demands."

Government, however, should match labor restraint by "introducing such economic conditions that will be required to stablize the price structure."

"The emphasis should be on productivity rather than on the equities of distribution" although the latter should not be overlooked.

SHORT DEBATE

At the start of the session Senator Paul Martin, government Senate leader, said he would introduce a motion Tuesday calling for an eight-day debate limit on the throne speech. There now is no limit.

Senator Phillips agreed with the recent suggestion of the Economic Council of Canada that the Senate could study the causes of poverty in Canada. But he said it was not the duty of government "to spoon-feed" people.

Senator Raymond Eudes, (L—Quebec) seconding the resolution to adopt the throne speech, said the "just society" is the aim of every individual.

The Senate also gave first reading Friday to four bills.

Two of the bills — an amendment to the Publication of Statues Act and an amendment to the Canada Evidence Act — were partially dealt with in the last Parliament.

LEVESQUE RAPS SCHOOL MARCH

MONTREAL (CP) — Rene Levesque, leader of the separatist Mouvement Souverainete-Association, said Friday the march on Parliament Hill Thursday, by persons demonstrating against a linguistic ruling for the Roman Catholic elementary schools in suburban St. Leonard, displayed total contempt for Quebec governmental institutions.

The march to Ottawa by about 5,000 English-speaking persons was organized to seek Prime Minister Trudeau's support of parents wanting to maintain bilingual classes in the district's schools.

Mr. Levesque told more than 500 persons at a meeting in nearby Laval that many of the participants could well be betraying their own causes by having undertaken the march.

He said some of the placards carried during the demonstration were "frankly insulting" to French-Canadians and carried racist overtones.

ADVOCATES RIGHTS

The leader of the MSA has repeatedly advocated that Quebec minorities will be granted linguistic and school rights in a sovereign Quebec.

Meanwhile, a group of parents in St. Leonard—where 50 per cent of the population is French-origin—announced they will set up their own English-speaking first grade and allow their older children to continue attending the bilingual classes in Grades 2 to 7 in the area's Roman Catholic schools.

"Three members of St. Leonard's five-member elementary school board passed a resolution last June which called for the gradual phasing out of bilingual classes beginning with Grade 1 this year.

A spokesman for the Parents Association of St. Leonard said details for the proposed private school will be discussed at a meeting next Tuesday.

STUDENT BOYCOTT LOOMING

BRANDON (CP) — Some students at Brandon University plan to boycott classes Monday if their demands for representation on the committee for adult admissions are not met.

A resolution, passed by students at a meeting Friday afternoon, demanded the committee's structure be changed to consist of one-third representation from the students, one-third from the faculty and one-third from the university administration They set a deadline of 8:30 a.m. Monday for action on their demand by the administration.

Lake Levels Higher

DETROIT (AP) — Lake Erie and Ontario have risen to levels well above September averages for the last 10 years.

The U.S. Corps of Army Engineers reported Friday Lake Erie is about a foot above average for the last 10 years and about five inches above a year ago. The lake is expected to continue above the average level for the next six months, the engineers said.

Lake Ontario is about nine inches above its 10-year average and five inches above the mean level of a year ago. The level of the lake is expected to drop to its 10-year average this fall but rise again in December and continue above average into March.

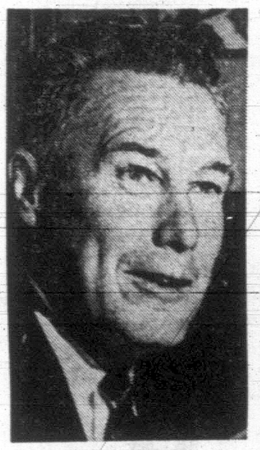
Mount Kobau Seen As Tourist Lookout

VANCOUVER (CP)—The Mount Kobau site of the cancelled Queen Elizabeth observatory project in the Okanagan Valley could become a tourist lookout if Ottawa abandons the area, Lands and Forests Minister Williston said Friday.



WILLISTON
. . . makes suggestion

The land on which the $18 million project was to have been built is owned by the provincial government but was reserved for the federal government for use as an observatory site by cabinet order-in-council a few years ago.

Mr. Williston suggested the tourist potential after Energy Minister Greene told the House of Commons Friday that the federal government will make every effort to find a valid use for the site, now that the observatory is not to be built.

NO OBJECTION

Mr. Williston said the property would normally revert to the province if Ottawa gave up the observatory project. He said, however, Victoria would not object if the federal government found some other use for the site, such as the taking of some kinds of scientific measurements.

"We wouldn't move in on them," he said.

The land was formerly used for grazing. Since taking it over, the federal government has erected several buildings on it and constructed a 12-mile road to the summit of Mount Kobau.

Mr. Williston said the road to the top opens the possibility of the summit being developed by the provincial recreation and conservation department as a lookout.

S. African Wine Ban Advocated

VANCOUVER (CP) — Barrie Clark, Liberal MLA for North Vancouver-Seymour, called Friday for removal of all South African wines from the shelves of British Columbia liquor control board outlets.

He said it is "high time" British Columbia identified itself with resolutions passed by the United Nations calling for economic sanctions against South Africa because of its policy of apartheid.

"I know this would just be a gesture, but it would clearly identify our province with those United Nations resolutions and with the principle that man is equal to his fellow man regardless of race," he said.

Mr. Clark, who has also written to Attorney-General Leslie Peterson requesting immediate government consideration of his proposals, said B.C. LCB outlets currently handle six South African products.

DENTISTS BAN COLLEAGUE

VANCOUVER (CP) — The council of the College of Dental Surgeons of British Columbia announced Friday it has suspended the licence of a Vancouver dentist accused by the college of unprofessional conduct.

Dr. W. Ross Upton, registrar of the college, said the name of Dr. Jacques Peraya would be stricken from the register and his right to practice suspended for giving treatments which would lead patients to believe he was a medical doctor.

Olympics Boast Sculpture Road

Eighteen sculptors from around the world are building hugh sculptures 20 to 60 feet high along an 11-mile "Route of Friendship" approaching the Olympic Village in Mexico City.

This international meeting of sculptors is hardly the typical symposium, but rather constitutes a permanent urban design program of "monumental proportions" to be completed just before the opening of the Olympic Games on Oct. 12.

The organizing committee for the Olympics in Mexico invited 18 of the most distinguished exponents of contemporary monumental sculpture integrated with architecture from 16 countries to create individual works inspired by Olympic ideals.

Each sent a model of a monumental sculpture in iron, aluminum, silver, plaster, wood, terra-cotta or cardboard. These were studied by a board of Mexican coordinators and professional men headed by the architect Pedro Ramirez Vazquez, chairman of the committee, and sculptor Mathias Goeritz, artistic advisor and director of the Route of Friendship project.

CONCRETE CONDITION

One of the conditions imposed upon the sculptors was that they design their works for execution in concrete. This naturally influenced the organizing committee's choice of artists, so that only those who had experience in working with concrete, or whose general style lent itself to this particular medium, are participating.

Scale (20 to 60 feet in height) was dictated by the original idea of creating a route of about 11 miles along the southern part of the Anillo Periferico, a super highway that encircles Mexico City. The sculptures are being constructed on the open landscape about one mile apart. At the immediate approaches to the Olympic Village they are closer together.

Caribbean Sea-Air Trips

P and O Lines and Air Canada have joined forces for three air-sea Calypso vacations in the sunny Caribbean during November and December.

First opportunity to escape the onset of the Canadian winter will be aboard Oronsay, sailing from Vancouver Nov. 7, bound for San Francisoc, Los Angeles, Acapulco, Balboa, Cristobal, Nassau Port Everglades and Bermuda.

Eastern Canadians jet from Toronto and way points two days before embarkation from Vancouver and the all-inclusive tour includes two days in Bermuda before the flight home to Canada.

Two other vacation opportunities begin with Air Canada flights departing from points across Canada for arrival in Bermuda on Nov. 18 or Dec. 18, sailing aboard the Orsova Nov. 20 or the Arcadia Dec. 20.

Ports of call are identical on all voyages, but the Dec. 20 sailing from Bermuda offers traditional Christmas and New Year's celebrations at sea before docking at Vancouver Jan. 7.

Further information on the airs-sea Club Calypso vacations can be obtained from P and O Lines, travel agents or Air Canada.

Brush Teeth With Beer Advice for Mexican Trip

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Brush your teeth with beer, drink your whisky neat and stay away from pork are some of the well-meaning hints visitors to Mexico get from those who have been here before.

The fitness of Mexican food and water have been causes for concern to coaches and athletes heading for the 1968 Olympic Games.

While a day in bed with intestinal problems means little more to a tourist than a lost day of sightseeing, it can mean a gold medal or two to a top athlete.

Perhaps with this in mind, the Mexican health department has issued assurances that precautions have been taken.

WATER CHECKS

For more than a year, the department said, its specialists have been working to assure that visitors will "avoid the gastro-intestinal illnesses contracted through food and drink," so frequently encountered by tourists.

Water and its distribution systems are being continually checked to prevent and correct any possible sanitary failure, the department said.

As for milk, cows are inspected at least once a month, and the 10,000 workers in the industry also are subject to rigid sanitary controls.

The 124 markets in the Federal District are being closely watched, not only their physical condition but also the cleanliness of their personnel.

The department also said more than 1,000 restaurants of the luxury class are under close observation as are 2,783 short-order restaurants.

Honolulu Opens New Temple

A $2,000,000 likeness of a magnificent Japanese temple and garden was dedicated in Honolulu this month, commemorating the 100th anniversary of the arrival of the first of Hawaii's Japanese immigrants.

The multi-million dollar Buddhist temple is a nearly exact replica of the famed Byodo-in at Uji, Japan, near Kyoto. Authorities consider the 900 year old Uji temple the most beautiful in the entire Kyoto area. It has been designated one of Japan's National Treasures.

The Hawaii temple was dedicated with formal Buddhist rites. The dedication included Ho-Sho-E, a ceremonial release of brilliant-hued carp into the two-acre reflecting lake which complements the temple. Ho-Sho-E denotes the release of life into the entire complex.

Winter Is Best Season To Vacation in Nassau

NASSAU, Bahamas — One of the most glamorous vacation resorts in the world, the Bahama Islands have long been popular with the discerning traveler.

Nassau, the cosmopolitan capital, and the resort Out Islands, scattered over the clear, Bahamas sea, have never been more "in." It is in these serene isles that vacationers in ever-growing numbers are finding a pleasurable refuge.

Some find their way to privately-owned island as house guests of long-established residents who may have been intimates of the Duke and Duchess of Windsor during the former British monarch's wartime term as Bahamas Governor.

Others, more gregarious, may prefer the luxury hotels or smaller but quietly elegant facilities whose names are fast becoming by-words in the travel industry.

Every year, as chill autumn winds herald the approach of winter in sterner climes, the warm Bahamas isles begin to blossom with specially organised sporting, recreational and social events. Although the Bahamas have much to offer all year round, winter is the season when many special activities occur.

Possessing the clearest and most vividly-tinted waters of the world, the Bahamas naturally emphasize marine activities. These can be enjoyed with winter temperatures seldom falling below the mid-seventies and the sun shining in cloudless blue skies.

P&O's back way to Britain.

Sail to Europe this winter, fly home later.

It's a winter escape route that starts your round world vacation by following the sun across the seas for nine weeks.

Take the ship and plan your own holiday. Or pick a round world package that includes everything —ship trip, land arrangements, even escorts. Either way, you board elegant Oriana in Vancouver on January 19.

Then sail south to warm, spicy islands and lush "down under" lands. Up to the Orient—the bustling friendly part! Explore 12 exotic ports. Discover the world's bright, sunny spots. And step ashore in Southampton on the first English Spring day.

As you sail, sleek Oriana is your hotel in port and your home at sea. She has verandahs, cool and quiet. Sunny open decks. Pools with rollicking pubs on the side. Lounges to party and dance the night away with friends you meet from Sydney, Moosejaw, or even South Dakota. An excellent restaurant. And service that's so superbly British it spoils you for anything else.

The cost? Amazingly little when you sail with the world's oldest and largest steamship line. Posh First Class elegance starts at $2253. Lively Tourist thrift, $1224. (Canadian dollars.)

All-inclusive round world package. Same marvelous trip across the seas plus special tours in San Francisco and Los Angeles and shore excursions at all ports on route. Six days in London with plenty of time to do the sights and the shops before you fly home. The price? As little as $3040 with First Class ship arrangements and economy air fares. $2007 with Tourist Class and economy air fares. (Canadian dollars.)

Plan now to escape this winter. See your travel agent for arrangements. Or mail the coupon. And let P&O show you why . . . Life at sea is like nothing on earth.

Visiting Choir to Sing At Metropolitan United

BEVERLEY HUMPREYS
. . . with choir

The visitnig Pendyrus Welsh Choir of 90 voices will sing in Metropolitan United Church Sunday at 8 p.m.

Their concert of sacred music will follow a service of evensong at 7:30 p.m. in which the choir's featured singer, Beverly Humpreys, will be the soloist.

A collection will be taken for the G. R. Pearkes Clinic for Handicapped Children. The choir gave a concert in aid of this charity at the Memorial Arena Friday night, sponsored by the RCAF 800 Wing.

"We hope the choir's concert in our church will help to augment the proceeds from Friday's concert," said Rev. Albert King.

"All are welcome."

In Metropolitan church Sunday morning, Mr. King will speak on the subject Learning from Fear or Love.

The Sanctuary Choir, conducted by Frank Tupman, will present the anthem, Unto Thee O Lord.

* * *

Very Rev. J. Lewis McLean, DD, and Rev. Bruce Molloy will participate in communion services at St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church Sunday morning and evening.

At the 11 a.m. service, Mr. Molloy will speak on the subject, When Christians Celebrate Together.

The choir will present the anthems Author of Love Divine and Wounded For Me.

* * *

The First Church of the Nazarene will observe the week of September 15-22 as a week of prayer with the theme "My Church is My Concern."

Cottage prayer meetings are planned each evening through the week in various areas of the city.

On Wednesday from 12 a.m. to midnight, the congregation will observe a day of prayer and fasting. The young people will also participate in a special service on Friday.

This special week of prayer is being observed across the denomination in North America and also in 48 world areas.

On the occasion of his 100th birthday next Thursday, Rev. Dr. W. G. Wilson will receive friends at his apartment at 2333 Beach Drive from 3 p.m. to 5 p.m.

Dr. Wilson was minister of First United Church here from 1927 to 1938. He then undertook ministries in various parts of Canada before retiring to Victoria.

* * *

A University of Victoria student who spent the summer in South Africa will speak at the 7 p.m. service in First United Church Sunday.

Miss Lynn Hagglund, a member of the Kairos group at First United, took part in Operation Crossroads, a student enterprise at Lesotho, formerly Basutoland.

"I was one of 226 students from Canada and the United States who studied missionary work at Lesotho," Miss Hagglund said.

"I shall describe my experiences and give my impressions of the enterprise."

Miss Hagglund is studying to be a high school teacher.

* * *

At the 11 a.m. worship in First United, Rev. Robert Morris will begin a series of sermons on Great Themes From The Bible, under the title Prologue to History.

Dr. W. D. McDougall will share in the conduct of the service, and the soloist will be Betty Buchan. The choir, directed by W. H. Gregory, will sing the anthem Old Hundredth.

* * *

A family service will be held at Garden City United Church Sunday with members of the Cubs, Scouts and CGIT taking part in the 10 a.m. service.

Cubs Gary Savory and Ricky Beecroft and Scouts Alvin Myhre and Robert Milne will take the offering while senior CGIT member, Mae McLellan will read the sermon lesson. Also assisting in the service will be Sunday school superintendent Robert Mitchell.

Rev. E. W. McQuarrie will speak on Love — Strong as Death.

Next Sunday, all departments of the Sunday school will resume regular sessions.

The sermon at the 11:15 a.m. service at Wilkinson Road United Church will be The Grace of Appreciation.

"Where Every Visitor is an Honoured Guest"

ELECTION A TRIBUTE TO MISSIONARY WORK

By NORMAN CRIBBENS
Church Editor

Dr. Robert Baird McClure — first layman ever to head the United Church of Canada — will visit here Sunday, Sept. 22.

As a highly skilled surgeon, he has worked with the world's needy and suffering for 43 years. In that time he has run mission hospitals in China, ministered to Arab refugees on the Gaza Strip and, for the past 13 years, has operated a United Church of Canada Hospital at Ratlam, India.

At Ratlam he performed more than 1,000 operations a year for a salary lower than that of a garbage collector. He vaccinated 100,000 children and organized birth control programs at 212 mission hospitals throughout India.

At Kingston, Ont., recently, 400 delegates to the United Church's 23rd general council elected him to a two-year term as moderator.

The choice, made over five clergymen candidates, was a tribute to Dr. McClure's witness as the church's best-known medical missionary.

THINKS IN MANDARIN

At 68, Dr. McClure says he spoke Chinese before he learned English and still thinks in Mandarin.

The son of a medical missionary, he was raised in North China, returning to Canada in 1923 to obtain a medical degree. Soon after, he was assigned to take over the Honan Presbyterian Mission Hospital when its former medical director was murdered by bandits.

In the Sino-Japanese war, Dr. McClure supervised 14 hospitals for the International Red Cross. During the Second World War he organized the supply of drugs and medicines to the Burma Road, and often piloted a helicopter to rescue fallen fliers.

'BIG PROBLEM'

Dr. McClure had intended to return to India this year, but the United Church persuaded him to stay in Canada and alert its people to the needs of overseas missions.

"I can't understand why Canadians and Americans don't contribute more to foreign aid programs," he said recently. "We don't know what to do with our affluence.

"The responsibilities of affluence are as big a problem in the world today as the problems of poverty are to other people."

Dr. McClure declares that if he had his life over again he would still be a medical missionary.

GREAT CHALLENGE

"The challenge today is even greater than it was when I entered the profession."

The doctor described himself as neither a pacifist nor a warmonger.

"I'm just not keen on killing people," he said. "It's awfully hard to win friends with machine-guns. I saw the Japanese try it in China. But weapons of war are the common international currency. If America gives Pakistan 100 airplanes, it's called a goodwill gesture.

"Why, it's like giving a hungry man a revolver."

Dr. McClure says it is costing the United States $500,000 to kill one Viet Cong in Vietnam.

"It might be necessary to kill them all. If we spent a few thousand on each man to make him a good farmer, we mightn't have to kill so many."

Dr. McClure has been described as "crusty and compassionate." He has definite opinions and isn't afraid to express them in public.

What he will say in Victoria is an open question.

United Church Moderator To Speak at Evening Rally

In Victoria, Dr. Robert McClure will address a rally in Metropolitan United Church Sunday, Sept. 22, at 7 p.m. sponsored by Victoria Presbytery of the United Church of Canada.

Fellow speaker will be Prof. Charles Burchill, professor of modern history at the Royal Roads Services College, who will talk of his recent experiences in China.

Rev. Robert Morris, chairman of Victoria Presbytery, will preside at the rally, to which members of other church denominations have been invited.

From 2 p.m. to 9:30 p.m. the same day, there will be a workshop in Metropolitan church hall sponsored by Victoria Presbytery.

Discussion groups, films and filmstrips will be devoted to the mission theme adopted by the Canadian Council of Churches: Towards Understanding China and the Chinese People.

During his visit to Vancouver Island, Dr. McClure will also address a meeting in St. Andrew's Church, Nanaimo, at 2:30 p.m.

Flying Enthusiast Takes Army Post

Major John Wood, newly-appointed superintendent of victoria Salvation Army Citadel, is a flying enthusiast.

He obtained a private pilot's licence at Halifax (N.S.) Flying Club in 1947, and has since flown in many parts of Canada.

He is also an active member of the Royal Canadian Flying Club Association, of which Victoria Flying Club is an affiliate.

"I hope to do some flying here when there is an opportunity," Major Wood said.

Major and Mrs. Wood arrived here this week from Oshawa, Ont. They succeed Major and Mrs. Robert McKerracher, who have been appointed to Salvation Army public relations at St. John, N.B.

Major Wood is from Charlottetown, P.E.I., and his wife comes from Grand Falls, Newfoundland. They became Salvation Army officers on completing their training at the army's college in Toronto.

They have since held appointments at Cobalt and Sudbury, Ont.; Cape Breton Island, N.S.; Kingston, Halifax, Ottawa and Oshawa.

Major and Mrs. Wood have four boys — Donald, Stephen, Terry and Paul.

Church Becoming 'Service Club'

VANCOUVER (CP) — A minister who resigned from his Anglican church post in February says the church is becoming like a service club and "I don't enjoy myself particularly in church."

Rev. Jim McGibbon, who left St. Anselm's church in a dispute with parishioners, told a panel discussion on church reform:

"The church doesn't really matter — it's become a sort of Kiwanis or Rotary Club and if you're the sort of person who likes it as a social club it's fine.

"I don't think the church can be reformed — it either will not or cannot be."

Don't Jump to Conclusions: De Roo

Most people are confused over Pope Paul's encyclical on birth control, says Most Rev. Remi De Roo, head of the Roman Catholic Church on Vancouver Island.

"They have found the language of the encyclical excessively theoretical and lacking in simple terms which could be related to the living experience of marriage.

"Consequently it would be unwise for anyone to jump to conclusions at this time."

Bishop De Roo made this statement after a meeting of Vancouver Island Catholics at Shawnigan Inn which lasted most of Tuesday night and continued all Wednesday morning.

The meeting was largely composed of laymen and women chosen by the Diocesan Pastoral Council executive, but members of the clergy also took part.

A large number of recommendations were made to the bishop, which he will take to the semi-annual meeting of the Canadian Catholic Conference at St. Boniface and Winnipeg, Sept. 23-27.

One is that people should avoid taking "extreme attitudes for or against the encyclical because of the difficulties so many have in understanding the text.

"As in many other countries, requests are being made for continued study and consultation with married couples, doctors and counsellors," the bishop said.

Bishop De Roo said the discussions at Shawnigan Inn were comparatively free and open and ranged over every aspect of the encyclical.

The Canadian Catholic Conference in St. Boniface and Winnipeg will be attended by most Canadian bishops.

"They are interpreters of the encyclical for the Catholic population of Canada," Bishop De Roo said.

Rally Climaxes Youth Meetings

DUNCAN — A week-long series of youth meetings at the Glad Tidings Tabernacle Church, Duncan, climaxes tonight with a rally.

Theme speaker Rev. Don Osborne of Vancouver will address the rally and preach at both services Sunday at 11 a.m. and 7 p.m.

Mr. Osborne was in Duncan in January this year when he spoke to the inter-school Christian fellowship group and a student assembly at Mount Prevost Junior Secondary School.

He is a past-director of the Teen Challenge Centre for narcotic and drug addicts in Vancouver and has done similar work in New York and Los Angeles.

Unitarians Will Instal New Minister

Arthur D. Wilmot will be installed as minister of Victoria Unitarian Church Tuesday, Sept. 24 at 8 p.m.

Philip Hewett will give the sermon and many ministers from the district will take part.

The church meets in the Servetus Hall, 106 Superior Street.

Sunday at 9:30 and 11 a.m., Mr. Wilmot will discuss the question Was Job a Unitarian Without Knowing It?

"He was at least the first religious liberal recorded in Western literature," Mr. Wilmot said.

Day of Prayer For Biafran War

Sunday has been named a day of prayer for justice and peace and for an end to the conflict between Biafra and Nigeria, Anglican Archbishop Harold Sexton of Victoria announced Friday.

He said the day of prayer will be observed across Canada at the request of the Anglican primate.

"I hope you will all be reminded to observe the day in accordance with the Primate's request," said Archbishop Sexton.

The Glad Tidings congregation has only two more Sundays left in which they will worship at the church on Jubilee Street.

The building has been sold and work is due to start shortly on a new church and hall complex on Trunk Road.

Meantime the congregation is hoping to rent the Oddfellows' Hall on First Street as temporary quarters.

This will be a reversion to church use for the First Street building which until six years ago was Duncan's Presbyterian church.

Accountant Owen McDonald has been appointed chairman of St. John's Church stewardship campaign committee.

But despite Mr. McDonald's profession the rector, Rev. Allan Kerr, says the campaign will not concentrate on financial giving.

He said the emphasis will be on getting fringe members of the congregation back into the work and worship of the church.

The campaign is slated for the end of October and Mr. McDonald is busy finding team captains.

Mr. Kerr has to find a replacement as rector's warden.

Current holder of the job, bank manager John Wemyss, has been transferred to Smithers.

Author, Lecturer To Speak

James Dillet Freeman — internationally-known poet, author and lecturer — will speak at Victoria Truth Centre, 1201 Fort Street, Wednesday at 8 p.m.

His subject will be Prayer the Master Key.

"His books have sold more than 100,000 copies," says Rev. Emma Smiley, DD, minister at the Truth Centre. "His book, Happiness Can be A Habit, is a best-seller, and his recent book, Prayer the Master Key, is a study of meditation and prayer technique.

"It helps the reader reeducate his mind and emotions, reaching beyond ordinary levels of thought to a higher awareness of reality.

"His poetry has probably had the widest distribution of any modern poet."

Mr. Freeman has lecutured through Canada, the United States and the West Indies, and has appeared many times on television and radio.

Born at Wilmington, Delaware, he grew up in Kansas City, Missouri, and wrote verse as a child. He graduated from the University of Missouri with honors and won many literary prizes.

After graduate study, he entered the Unity School of Christianity, where he has been associated with a worldwide prayer ministry called Silent Unity for 35 years.

He is now director of spiritual research at the Unity School.

INSIDE CITY HALL

Water Meeting Sunk By Missing Mayors

By JIM HUME, Times City Hall Reporter

A little embarrassment at the Greater Victoria Water Board level Friday morning when a head count revealed the gathering two men short of a quorum.

A quick rally round by telephone flushed Ald. Cecil Parrott out of the weeds 20-minutes late but the last lone body to give the group any voting power couldn't be found.

Missing from the water divining group were Mayors Ray Bryant, Esquimalt, and Hugh Curtis, Saanich.

Mayor Bryant had other business to attend to, Mayor Curtis was up to his ears in his own municipal hall. Even so it seemed surprising — and chairman Mayor Hugh Stephen expressed his disenchantment — that alternates could not be produced in time to keep business flowing as smoothly as the aqua through the pipes.

Hume

As it was, all the gentlemen attending could do was trot through the agenda, vote in favor of certain procedures and hope that when enough voting strength can be mustered their recommendations will be approved.

City hall sessions lacking quorums are so rare that the Friday session marked the first in at least the past three years. But even that is one too many.

As forecast close to a year ago city hall got its IBM computer this month.

On line, hooked up and humming a merry tune in its air conditioned primness, the computer will be going through an intensive two month testing period before its human masters permit it to reign supreme.

And if two months seems a long time to iron out the bugs readers should always remember the debacle in oil capital Edmonton.

Edmonton city council went into the computer-age with all the enthusiasm of wild-catters scrambling for a deep well. The results were frantic, ghastly, and, if you have that kind of sense of humor, hilariously funny.

CITY FATHERS

Everybody was laughing except the city fathers and the people — not IBM — who installed the first computer.

The cost of the foul-up was never made known in detail, but the general term used was a million dollars. And that is a sum of money Victoria can't afford.

Frank Grealy, in charge of data processing, will punch the start button on his little monster only when it knows how to behave properly when devouring statistics and disgorging bills.

It didn't take Ald. Robert Baird long to get into the sewage and convention centre act after his return from Scotland and England.

Unfortunately, as he has so often in the past, Ald. Baird tends to cock an eye to the headlines rather than the logic of argument.

For example his stand on outfalls would have been much more acceptable had he just stayed with basic facts.

RATHER SMUG

But, rather smugly in his press release on the subject, Ald. Baird carefully explained how he had selected as areas for study and research on outfalls cities comparable in size and environment to Victoria.

A few paragraphs later he listed those cities: London, Coventry, Perth, Kirkcaldy and Aberdeen.

As the office wit, a booster of treatment plants, said: "With friends like that who needs enemies."

On the convention centre issue Ald. Baird charged in with a popular theme, but little or no knowledge of what had gone before.

PARROTT
... rescue attempt

Even if he didn't have time to talk to the city officials engaged in discussions with the CPR, he should have had time, earlier this week, to read George Wheaton's letter to the editor of the Times, a letter which adequately answered the questions raised by Ald. Baird.

No need to repeat that letter here, but possibly Mr. Wheaton's salient points would stand another airing.

If private capital was prepared to build a convention centre it would have done so long ago, was one of the main arguments and a good one.

The fact that private capital has not chosen, and does not choose, to build a convention centre reduces the question to the academic "does the city need a convention centre?"

City council, including Ald. Baird, has decided that the city does need a centre. So has the Chamber of Commerce and the Victoria Visitor's Bureau, so have the businessmen in the downtown area.

PRIVATE CAPITAL

With that decision made, suggests Mr. Wheaton, and the decision made by private capital not to donate a centre to the city, there is only one way to go. The city builds the centre in conjunction with private capital getting the best possible deal it can for the citizens.

And that, we respectfully submit, is what the city negotiators are trying to do right now.

Whether they achieve their goal or fail will depend largely on people like Ald. Baird who appears to have lost sight of that all important fact that he and his fellow aldermen have already decided a convention centre is essential.

Most Bishops Are Leaving Door Open to Dissenters

By GEORGE W. CORNELL

NEW YORK (AP) — Bishops of the Roman Catholic Church around the world are taking varied positions ranging from firm crackdowns to toleration toward the widespread opposition to Pope Paul's encyclical barring contraception.

Generally the predominant tendency seemed to be to leave the door open to dissent.

In scattered cases, in Australia, Ireland, Britain and the United States, some priests were reported suspended from priestly functions or removed from their posts for challenging the encyclical.

A showdown over the issue appears to be building up in the U.S. between Patrick Cardinal O'Boyle of Washington, D.C., who has indicated he may act against 52 priests unless they repudiate their dissent.

In a letter to archdiocesan priests and aimed at all Roman Catholics in the jurisdiction, Cardinal O'Boyle said Wednesday that dissent from the encyclical is "erroneous, scandalous and offensive to faithful Catholics."

REPRESENTS FREEDOM

He said acceptance of the papal ruling represents true freedom of conscience in that "we are responsible for forming a right conscience."

Mostly, however, U.S. bishops have not moved to cut off the discussion.

In Western Europe, German and Belgium bishops have upheld the rights of individual conscience on the matter.

In England, where a group of laymen was gathering clergy and lay signatures to a petition of opposition, some bishops have called meetings with their clergy to discuss the situation.

Some theologians have said that repressive measures against dissenters could cause schism in the church.

But a Canadian scholar, Rev. Gregory Baum, professor of theology at St. Michael's College in the University of Toronto, predicts:

"After a year, it will be evident there are two positions in the Catholic Church, the one of the Pope, the other that of the theologians. This will demand a reinterpretation of papal authority in the church."

DISAGREE WITH POPE

Aside from several groups in various places, about 650 U.S. Roman Catholic theologians, philosophers and canon lawyers have signed a statement disagreeing with the Pope.

A Gallup poll indicates 52 per cent of U.S. Roman Catholics also oppose the Pope's position, and 65 per cent said they believe it is possible to practice artificial birth control and still be a good Catholic.

In the Netherlands, only 20 per cent of Roman Catholics agree with the encyclical, a poll there found.

Belgium's bishops said they accepted the encyclical "with filial respect" but that a knowledgeable Roman Catholic who honestly differs from its conclusions "has the right to follow his convictions."

West Germany's bishops issued a statement defending the encyclical as "an authentic decision," but added:

"Catholics, for reasons which must be taken seriously, may believe that they should deviate from a decision proclaimed by the church without the claim of infallibility."

The Vatican newspaper, L'Osservatore Romano, has carried a series of articles maintaining that the encyclical is binding on all Roman Catholics.

Pay Law Violated, Commission Told

HALIFAX (CP) — Nova Scotia has an equal-pay-for-equal-work law for women but the province's minimum wage for females is $10 a week less than that for men, Mrs. Wendell Colpitts told the royal commission the status of women Thursday night.

"Why is the provincial government satisfied to violate its own equal pay law?" she was asked by surprised commissioner Elsie MacGill of Toronto.

"They say that they aren't violating the law," replied Mrs. Colpitts, past-president of the Provincial Council of Women of Nova Scotia.

"The government says that the equal pay law applies where the work is equal and women do different jobs than men."

Mrs. Colpitts said "the government says that the minimum wage law is helping to raise wages for women and that eventually the hope is to raise the minimum wage for women up to that of men."

Mrs. Colpitts told the seven-member commission that the basic wage for women is $36 in one zone of the province and $32 in another.

"The law perpetuates the idea that women's work is less valuable than males' and, by association, so are women's occupations."

The lively exchange before an audience of 97 women and three men came after the commissioners gave Mildred Moir, a mother of 10, a grilling on her view that abortion is always intolerable because it means the taking of human life.

Mrs. Moir, 41, who gave what commissioner John Humphrey called the "best reasoned case against abortion that we have heard," argued that "abortion is a very degrading form of violence."

She told the commissioners, who so far have heard an almost unanimous plea for widening of the abortion laws, that "women's freedom would be impaired by the kind of society that would deny human life."

The statement brought an abrupt "how?" from commissioner Jeanne Lapointe of Quebec City.

"Because a woman cannot be free unless everybody is free," Mrs. Moir replied. "And the unborn baby too must have liberty of life."

Commissioner Lola Lange of Claresholm, Alta., told Mrs. Moir that widening the abortion laws would not force women with anti-abortion views to submit to unwanted abortions but would leave each woman free choice.

"That is a surface view," Mrs. Moir said. "Widening the law would create a public opinion that would coerce some women who would like to keep their babies into having abortions."

The commission will hold a short hearing in Charlottetown tonight before moving on to St. John's, Nfld., for hearings Monday.

Exchange Of Organs Under Debate

HALIFAX (CP) — With the exchange of healthy organs for malfunctioning human parts becoming almost commonplace, the 100-year-old medical faculty of Dalhousie University today scheduled an international look at the whole spectrum of organ transplantation.

None of the noted surgeons who have made medical history with successful heart transplants were invited to participate in the final day of Dalhousie's three-day centennial conference.

But the conference program, set up before Dr. Christiaan Barnard performed the first heart transplant, nevertheless saved the best for the last.

Starting things off was Sir Peter Medawar, director of Britain's National Institute for Medical Research and president of the British Association for the Advancement of Science.

Dubbed "Mr. Immunology" by one conference organizer, Sir Peter epitomizes what planners hoped to achieve in the day-long talks on transplantation—a broad study of ethical and legal, immunological and surgical aspects of this revolutionary trend in modern medicine.

Sir Peter pioneered research to find ways of fighting natural rejection by the human body of transplanted organs.

Thursday, discussions on genetics included a Halifax pediatrician who outlined a possible link between chromosomes and crime.

Possession of an extra Y chromosome is more common among male criminals than among males in the general population, Dr. J. Philip Welch of Dalhousie's pediatrics department told a panel on human chromosomal disorders.

Normal males possess an XY chromosomal order. Dr. Welch said the greatest frequency of an XYY condition was found among men in penal institutions and that as a group XYY individuals show a tendency to increased height.

However, these individuals tend to commit crimes against property rather than persons and, contrary to individual theories, they display abnormal impulsiveness rather than aggression.

Anti-Pollution Plan Claimed For New Marina

Developers of a proposed apartment-marina complex on Shoal Harbor at the tip of Saanich Peninsula say the property owners' association protesting the plan is "ignorant of the facts . . . or misinformed."

In a letter today to the eastern district, North Saanich Property Owners Association, the developers call for "more enlightenment before condemnation."

Earlier the association urged the government to reject an application by Victorian Albert Yuen for a foreshore lease to allow another marina in the basin, also known as Tsehum Harbor, because it would add to pollution.

It is obvious "there is a saturation point in the number of marinas that should be permitted in any one body of water," an association spokesman said.

Mr. Yuen has an option to purchase the five-acre property from Northumbria Investments Ltd., a local firm whose members include Mr. and Mrs. Chet Levar, the property owners, and John Elliott.

Mr. Elliott said the owners' association raised their objections without knowing that the marina was planned within new commercial waterfront and yacht club specifications proposed by the capital region planning commission.

Aim of the specifications is to avoid pollution, he said.

Mrs. Levar said of the association's objection: "When you don't want a bay polluted, you don't work against the developer, you work with him.

"And they have never contacted him."

Mrs. Levar said she and her husband will move from the property where they have lived for 27 years when Mr. Yuen picks up the option for his $1.5 million project. She said Northumbria Investments will have no further interests in the development.

NO OBJECTIONS

An application to Sidney council to rezone the property for the development was made April 19, 1968. Mrs. Levar said no objections were raised. Rezoning was approved July 25.

Maj. D. A. Petrie, owners' association secretary, said the association has no quarrel with the construction of three apartment buildings on the site.

"The harbor is polluted," he said, and the association objects only to the planned marina.

Mrs. Levar said the marina would serve apartment tenants and the general public.

FIRE COSTS AT $692,700

Fire hazards throughout British Columbia forests were reported as low today by the provincial forest service.

Suppression costs totalling $692,700 are estimated for the 1,630 fires reported so far this season, the service said.

"For the corresponding period in 1967, the most expensive fire year on record, 2,987 fires were recorded with costs totalling $5,960,900," the service said.

Site of $4 Million Proposal Near Gordon Head High School

The location for a $4 million townhouse apartment project in Saanich is near Gordon Head High School, it was learned today.

The site, covering 16 acres, is between Gordon Head Road and Larchwood Drive north of the school. The project, which would provide 120 units in the initial $2 million phase, was announced last Tuesday.

The rezoning application will be considered by Saanich officials first before going to the Advisory Planning Commission and council. It is expected to be some time before this process is completed.

New Leader Takes Over Royal Roads

A Royal Roads Military College graduate returned this week as commandant of his former school.

Colonel K. E. Lewis, CD, took over command of the armed forces college from his predecessor, Colonel D. B. Wurtele, who retires after more than 30 years of service.

Col. Lewis, 39, graduated from the school in 1949 to join the Royal Canadian Air Force. He has flown more than a dozen different kinds of aircraft in his career, including the Starfighter, Mustand, Vampire and Sabre.

He has had three tours of duty in Europe: as flight commander with 4 Wing Germany in 1944-55; later with 1 Air Division France; and from 1960-64 as Squadron Commnader of 3 Wing Germany.

WITH AIR CADETS

Col. Lewis later served as air cadets liaison officer at Forces Headquarters in Ottawa and from August 1966 to August 1968 with 3 Wing Germany again.

Col. Wurtele, who retires to Ottawa with his wife and three children, was commandant of the school for three years.

He also had RCAF experience with the experimental and proving establishment and took degrees in aeronautical engineering at the University of Toronto and London University. He served in France for more than four years.

Four amateur photographers from Victoria have a chance at more than $200 in prize-money in the Newspaper National Snapshot contest.

They were overall winners in the Times photographic contest during July and August. Their entries will be sent to the national contest for judging along with entries from the rest of Canada.

Winners from the national contest will go still further to the North American judging for a chance at prizes totalling $50,000.

Photographers topping the entries here were Mrs. G. W. Schwab, of 3034 Doncaster Drive; Ivor Alexander, of 1016 Queens Ave.; Henry Szmuniewski, of 3956 Interurban Road, and K. H. Stofer, of 1619 Christmas Ave.

Mrs. Schwab, a clerk at the Veterans' Hospital, had been taking pictures for about 30 years. Her snap of a cat clinging to the branches of a tree-top was considered one of the four best entries by judges Bill Halkett, Times staff photographer, and Mrs. Audrey St. Johnson, theatre critic.

ANOTHER PUSS

Ivor Alexander, a 26-year-old student, caught a kitten peeking out of a briefcase while crouching inside it. He had only been taking pictures for about six months before he entered the contest.

Provincial government employee Henry Szmuniewski, 52, called upon more than 35 years' experience at photography to take his winning shot of wild oats and logs on a beach. He always carried his camera with him and took the picture while on an early-morning fishing trip.

A snap showing a small boy peeking mischeivously through chubby fingers earned a place in the national contest for Post Office public relations officer Ken Stofer. Aged 48, he had been taking pictures for about 15 years.

Each of the four finalists will now have a chance to win a $200 best-of-show prize and one of seven $100 Canadian special merit awards.

Winning snapshots from the Canadian contest then go on to the North American judging, which offers expense-paid trips to South America, Mexico, Hawaii and the West Indies.

Highway Widening Details Announced

By JOHN MIKA

Highways Minister Wesley Black Friday afternoon released details of a $5 million plan to widen Patricia Bay Highway's existing route by the spring of 1970 with vehement assurances it will only "be an interim measure" and not kill intentions to build a new turnpike.

"I want to be 1,000 per cent honest with the people we're dealing with — that is the press and John Q Public," he said.

"The key word in this is that it is purely an interim measure.

"I want to give people the assurance that we will continue to study a new route and this is an interim measure only but we have to move quickly to meet the congestion now."

Mr. Black said the widening program—will which include elevated ramps at Quadra and West Saanich Road junctions but not at Weiler Road as requested by Sidney — should relieve pressure on the present route "for at least five years."

He said a completely new highway would still be worth building even after the new investment in the existing road because traffic volumes, are rising about 10 per cent annually.

Wide Division Eventually

With two roads provided eventually, each route could be made into a one-way artery with the consequent loop divided by a wide stretch of countryside, he suggested.

Mr. Black added that he "had no choice" but to order the widening instead of the new highway now because traffic volumes have reached up to 22,000 vehicles a day on stretches of the present road and a crash-program was needed.

He said a new route would have required at least six months just to buy right-of-way before construction could begin so it was impracticable because of the resulting delay.

Work will begin on some parts of the widening within a few days but all the work likely won't be finished until about the spring of 1970.

The project has been divided into five sections with some of the design work still to be done.

The first section involves the junction of the Trans-Canada Highway and Douglas up to Carey Road.

Mr. Black said the department has several plans it is considering for "siphoning off" some of the Trans-Canada traffic before it reaches Douglas and also aligning the Pat Bay Highway entrance better in relation to urban traffic.

But he said he was not ready — and may not be until next spring — to make any announcements about the first section.

Day Labor for Inner Stretch

The second section, running about 1¾ miles from Carey Road to Broadmede subdivision (south of the golf driving range on the Pat Bay Highway) will be widened to four lanes by the highways department itself using day labor.

The third section, from Broadmede to Viewmont Road opposite Royal Oak Cemetery, will be put to a tender call for bids by contractors "in about six to eight weeks", Mr. Black said.

This 1½-mile section will be widened to four lanes by the contractor with two overhead ramps to be built to eliminate Royal Oak and Quadra cross traffic. The first ramp will span the highway carrying Quadra Street over to the high west side of the main road where a short connecting stretch, parallelling the highway, will be built to West Saanich Road.

The second ramp will carry the highway itself over the natural gully formed by West Saanich-Royal Oak roads.

A departmental engineer said ramps will take advantage of the present contours so that the sudden rise of Quadra before its junction with the highway will be continued into an over pass while highway traffic would continue on a horizontal plane over West Saanich-Royal Oak instead of dipping down into the gully.

Mr. Black said there would be interconnection provided at the ramps so traffic could move from the local roads onto the highway and back but design work has not been completed so no artist sketches are available to illustrate the plan.

The fourth highway section will be the five-mile stretch between Viewmont Road in Saanich and Telegraph Road in Central Saanich. It also will be done by highway department day labor crews.

Two Southbound Lanes

This work will add one complete lane to the existing stretches of alternate two and three lanes resulting in two continuous southbound lanes to handle the city-bound ferry traffic which has caused traffic problems because of its "platooning" pattern.

The present stretches of one lane alternated with two will remain and these will be used for northbound traffic.

The fifth highway section, totalling 6.8 miles, will stretch from Telegraph Road to Ardwell Road, linking up with the Ardwell Road-Swartz Bay stretch which was widened to four lanes two years ago.

This section also will be put to tender in about two months for complete widening to four lanes.

Asked if this stretch would include the over-pass requested by Sidney council to eliminate hazards for school children and cars trying to cross the highway at Weiler Road, Mr. Black said:

"At the moment the answer is no — but remember this proect is an interim measure."

Mr. Black said the two day-labor stretches would be started immediately and likely would be completed before next summer.

The contract stretches probably would be completed about the end of next year or the spring of 1970.

Throughout the construction period, traffic will continue to use the present highway as widening would begin with grading then paving of existing shoulders.

Mr. Black said some temporary slowing down with the use of flag-men could occur occasionally as the work proceeds but detouring of traffic onto side roads is not contemplated.

IT'S GOOD NEWS SAY AREA MAYORS

The mayors of three municipalities today welcomed news of the provincial government's widening of Patricia Bay Highway to four lanes.

"If the road is going to be improved this is good news for Saanich because we are so dependent on it and it has such an effect on our development," said Saanich Mayor Hugh Curtis.

"We would expect the highways department to make it clear that the ultimate freeway route is fixed so planning can continue. I am particularly happy about the Quadra-Royal Oak changes because this is a very serious problem stretch."

While he wished it was the final freeway with a park-way development, "we recognize that the dollars are not as plentiful as the need."

He pointed out that Saanich will soon start work on improvements to Quadra just north of McKenzie Avenue and it was hoped to "take another bite" next year depending on secondary highway grants.

Victoria Mayor Hugh Stephen welcomed the news "very much indeed" because Pat Bay has become dangerous.

He would have liked to see a join-up with the Rose-Blanshard reconstruction which will take this road, as a divided highway, from Tolmie to Pandora.

Central Saanich Mayor Gordon Lee said his municipality "welcomes any improvements."

He said police are constantly on the alert with traffic accidents and the situation is of considerable danger.

"The improvement to Pat Bay will go a long way towards making this a much safer throughway for the future," he said.

Eagle Eye Needed to Keep Heritage at Home As Totem Pole Pirates Seek Wooden Gold

By JOHN SLINGER

For art dealers and private collectors, particuarly in the United States and abroad, authentic, primitive Canadian-Indian totem poles mean big money.

But getting the poles and other carved relics is strictly a hook-or-by-crook proposition.

Without written consent from the Indian affairs minister, no one can legally get hold of so much as a sliver from a reserve.

Nevertheless, totem poles, carved grave posts and other bits of bric-a-brac do skitter mysteriously across our borders to show up in the homes of art collectors.

"You always hear myths of American yachts heading south with totem poles stacked on their decks," said Wilson Duff, a UBC anthropologist.

A magistrate in the Queen Charlotte Islands dismissed charges against three Americans Wednesday after RCMP confiscated a number of ancient Haida carvings from a chartered boat.

Throughout the province, professional and amateur archaeologists and anthropologists, interviewed by telephone, expressed surprise that the charges were dismissed.

They were, however, pleased the baby was not thrown out with the bathwater.

Magistrate Jack Fraser of Sandspit, after dismissing the charges on grounds of intent, ordered the artificats turned over to the chief and council of Skidegate village to be returned to their original site or sent to the National Museum in Ottawa.

●

Don Abott, a provincial museum anthropologist in Victoria, said preservable poles and mortuary markers historically significant to B.C. can be numberd only in the dozens.

"They are definitely limited," he said.

Polly Sargent of Hazelton, president of the Skeena Totem Pole Restoration Society, said valuable pieces have been stolen from villages while preservation work was going on.

In nine years, the society has spent some $20,000 to preserve about 30 poles at two Skeena villages. Another 30 in three other villages remain to be done.

Mrs. Sargent said reports of poles being carried off have come to her twice, but too late.

●

In one instance the culprits waved a bill of sale from an Indian band member under the noses of the authorities then left in a cloud of dust before it could be impressed upon the authorities that an Indian band member can't sell a reserve totem pole, she said.

Section 90 of the Indian Act also prohibits sale or removal from the reserve of grave houses, grave poles, carved house posts and painted or carved rocks.

The prohibition "does not apply to chattels . . . that are manufactured for sale by Indians."

Hence, examples of carved Indian art offered for sale as "authentic relics" can generally be considered suspect.

Uvic's Dr. Donald H. Mitchell, a member of the provincial archaeological sites advisory board, said, "we all want to see stronger measures for protection of these things."

Support was needed to bring better administration and policing of the Act.

Ron Sutherland of Vancouver, B.C. Archaeological Society president, said legislation should be passed to prevent export of any Canadian historic or archaeological object.

Such laws now apply in many European and South American countries, he said, and the society is working to see what might be done in Canada.

●

At the annual meeting of the Native Sons of B.C., the society suggested a resolution be drafted protesting removal of these objects, not just from Canada, but from the province.

Even if they are kept within the borders, there are arguments whether the carvings should be preserved in museums or left in their native settings.

Hillary Stewart, a society member from Vancouver, spent June travelling through the Queen Charlottes, and said most of the "salvageable poles" have already been taken to museums.

Miss Stewart said the remnants are "still very beautiful standing there, even in their decay." They should be left alone for anyone who troubles to go and see them.

"They just lose their beauty in a museum."

●

Prevention of decay is the main reason carvings are placed in the controlled environment of museums.

In fact, Dr. Duff said the problem of illegal removal "has almost been overcome by the ravages of time."

Totems left, mostly in abandoned villages, have fallen over, broken and begun to rot.

The last major collection in the province was a number of years ago, but new techniques and chemicals have made it possible to keep carvings once thought lost.

●

Discussions now are going on between the province, UBC, the Vancouver Centennial Museum and the Indian Affairs Branch that might lead to a new collection effort in 1969, Dr. Duff said.

In any event, consensus is that something must be done to regulate collection and preservation and to keep private marketeers out.

R. A. Cragg, factor of the Kamloops museum, said museums must act as "watchdogs" and border officials should be primed to notify museums whenever objects of archaeological interest cross.

Usually, when outsiders are digging in B.C. "all we get to see are the holes," he said.

"And if they're big holes, we know they got something."

DECAYING TOTEM POLES, almost disappearing into the forest, stand in abandoned Haida village on Anthony Island in the Queen Charlottes. To protect the poles, which were not on reserve lands and so open to plunderers, Anthony Island was made into a provincial park. New preservation methods might enable provincial anthropologists to prevent further deterioration of these and other poles scattered through the area.

Ask The Times

Q. Is there a spectacular meteor shower due within a year? If so, how could one best view it? C.B.

A. According to the Dominion Astrophysical Observatory, there are five spectacular "showers" every year. These occur at the same time each year. Starting from October, the showers are: Orionids, Oct. 20; Leonids, Nov. 16; Geminids, Dec. 13; Quadrantids, Jan. 3; Perseids, Aug. 11. Each of the showers named will produce an hourly meteor rate between 25 and 50, peaking in some cases to as many as 200. Dates given are, in each case, the middle date in a four-day shower period. The naked eye is the best instrument with which to view a shower. Ocular aids—binoculars, telescopes—are of little use since the entire sky must be watched.

Anyone wishing a question answered is invited to send the question along to the Times, addressed to "Ask the Times" Editor. Questions and answers will be published daily.

All questions should deal with matters of fact and be of general interest. The Times does not undertake to solve conundrums or legal problems. Nor will it attempt to put a value on old coins, stamps or antiques. These should be submitted to a dealer.

Stunning late-day dresses at Wilson's . . .

For a while it seemed to us that Wilson's hadn't been stocking too much in the way of really dressy late-day or what are sometimes referred to as "mother-of-the-bride" dresses . . . but they're more than making up for it now . . . with some new arrivals which will positively knock your eye out . . . for beautiful simplicity and sheer, understated elegance! . . . And what's more, several of the loveliest are in larger sizes like 16 and 18 . . . good news for you ladies who complain you can't find a thing suitable to your age and figure . . . We noticed that many of these dresses have jackets . . . which make them doubly versatile . . . providing, as they do, a covered-up look for occasions when less formality is called for . . . There's a stunning black dress of silk worsted with cowl neck and rich jewel trim around the ¾-length sleeves . . . same model in royal blue . . . Another royal blue dress in the same material has short sleeves and flattering atoll neckline edged with flowers made of iridescent paillettes . . . a very chic grey silk worsted jacket dress has diamante trim on cowl collar and front . . . plain jacket . . . There's a wonderfully wearable moss green lurex knit dress . . . some sweet little metallic brocades . . W & J Wilson Limited, 1221 Government St., 383-7177.

Barrila of Rome makes thigh-high leather boots that attach to a black girdle.

Great suits for the college crowd . . .

We can't guarantee they'll all still be there when you read this because of the time . . . (not credibility) . . . gap . . . but anyway we're going to tell you about the cute new suits for the young . . . in years or at heart . . . which we saw at Madam and Eve earlier this week . . . All have the tweedy look which is this season's favorite . . . styled with flair and verve . . . Two of them are English imports . . . small size 9s, intended for the very petite figure . . . One is moss green, the other curry . . . with welt seaming, low slash pockets and back flap to the jacket . . . flat gilt buttons front, back, and trimming the gauntlet cuffs . . . Two herringbone tweed suits have high cowl collar, A-line skirt and big round amber buttons . . . the size 9 is in tones of blue, brown and grey, and the size 11 is a green-orange-grey blend . . . A lighter-weight wool suit has youthful Peter Pan collar, self belt passing through loops fore and aft, and covered buttons . . . Size 10, in rusty tones with pink and green fleck . . . same in green with red and olive fleck, size 12 . . . There's a nice classic suit with wide rounded revers in brown, blue and green tweed mixture . . . this one, too, is a size 12 . . . We noticed a couple of dress and coat ensembles . . . tweed coats with plain dresses . . . which we consider terrific value for only $75 . . . Madame and Eve Shop, Trounce Alley, 383-7177.

Beautiful oak furniture from England . . .

At long last a new shipment of Tudor Oak furniture from England has arrived at Home Furniture, and another is en route . . . much to the relief of Home's Mr. Bartholomew, who was beginning to wonder if it would ever get here! . . . Victorians are really taking this beautiful oak furniture to their hearts, and small wonder! It's the sort of furniture which grows on one, and of which one never gets tired . . . Besides which, despite all the hand-carving and expert craftsmanship, it costs no more . . . sometimes less, in fact . . . than other types of quality furniture . . . In this latest shipment there are Gothic bookcases with leaded glass doors . . . a Dutch dresser . . . court cupboards . . . a carved oak buffet with leaded glass windows . . . corner cupboards . . . small console tables called "Credence" tables . . . little coffers . . . foot stools with solid leather tops . . . plus all sorts of other things . . . Something we think very interesting is the cocktail bar with stools . . . great for a family room . . . And if you've a small apartment with practically no dining space, you'll love the "monk's dining table" . . . which is a high-backed settee folding over into a table . . . Real conversation piece! . . . Home Furniture Company, 825 Fort St., 382-5138.

This will be the biggest velvet year yet . . . Velvet evening dresses, skirts, capes, pants, tunics and culottes.

See these English place mats . . .

Other long-awaited shipments from England have arrived too . . . like the lovely table and place mats now on display at Montague Bridgman's . . . These are really very choice, and look elegant on a polished table . . . also, they are impervious to heat, being backed with cork or felt, so that the hottest plates or dishes may be placed on them with impunity . . . They come in sets of six or eight, ranging in price from $6.95 to $19.75 . . . and for many of them there are matching coasters . . . All sorts of designs like flowers, birds, game birds, Regency London scenes, tinted etchings of old London landmarks, hunting scenes, still life fruits, Dutch florals, old English inns, etc. . . . We love all of them, but could scarcely tear our eyes away from the beautiful bird mats with their delicate colorings and porcelain-like background . . . A table set with these would lift gracious dining to new heights! . . . As well as the new designs, old friends like "Golden Sovereigns" . . . kings and queens of England in gold on round mats . . . are back again too . . . and there are any number of different scenes on coasters . . . some of them fun things like old cars, and international street signs . . . These English place mats and coasters would make wonderful wedding or Christmas gifts! . . . Montague Bridgman Limited, 811 Government St., 383-0821.

The new look in Joyce shoes . . .

Joyce shoes have always been great favorites with active women who demand smart, comfortable footwear . . . at prices which don't put too much of a dint in the clothing budget . . . Munday's have now received their fall shipment from Joyce . . . and after viewing the new models, we're no end impressed! . . . To begin with, they have a very new look . . . and there are more dressy styles than ever before . . . many of them in patent leather, which is so very chic this season . . . A dressy patent pump called "Crescendo" has illusion height heel and a very pretty gold filigree buckle . . . "New Bolero", another elegant black patent pump, has a big peau de soie bow trim and walking heel . . . Also comes in brown and black calf . . . Another black patent, named "New Star", has low heel and old gold filigree buckle set on a patent oval . . . "Ring Around" gets its name from the ring trimming the high vamp . . . black or antiqued grey patent . . . and another patent, called "Beau Dandy" has low heel and faille bow trim . . . Also in black, brown or navy kid . . . A very smart shoe of lizard calf print comes in black or reddish brown, with illusion height heel . . . aptly named "Midas" . . . Besides all these new dressy styles, all the old favorites in casuals are on hand too . . . Priced from $16.95 to $18.95 at . . . Munday's, 1203 Douglas St., 383-2211.

Woollen Bonnet Soon Geneva-Bound

By PENNY SAVER

Wednesday Jayne came rushing over to my house waving a letter from Geneva, Switzerland. It was from her friend Charlotte who wisely married a man who worked for the United Nations. He was posted to Geneva just a few months ago, turning all Charlotte's friends green with envy. Jayne was super excited because Charlotte's letter contained good news. She is expecting her first child in the month of December! Naturally Charlotte knew months ago, but she kept the whole thing a secret for reasons known only to her husband and herself. Jayne came to me because she wanted some help finding the perfect present. We thought and thought, and finally decided that the gift should be (a) warm and practical, and (b) distinctively Canadian.

The gift that fulfilled both these characteristics was a bonnet made by Canadian Eskimos. This bonnet was made of a woollen material, almost felt-like although I am not sure if it is indeed a felt. It is white, a neutral color that doesn't take a chance on whether Charlotte will have a boy or a girl, and is finished with a cross-stitch embroidery. An applique made in a seal design sits over each ear while the tie-strings are made of braided embroidery thread finished in a tassel. This bonnet is $4.95.

We also saw similar bonnets for a slightly older child. These are $8.50 and the ones we saw were red and finished with white fox fur. All these bonnets come with the tag showing them to be genuine Eskimo craft items and most give the area in which they are made.

Eskimo Motifs on Hand-Made Mittens

Canadian craft items that make good gifts for men are fairly rare since men don't collect knick-knacks the way women do. Woollen mittens are ideal for this sort of gift. These mittens, like the bonnets I mentioned above, are made by the Eskimos. Made of red or white felt-like material, they are finished with embroidery, mostly in the cross-stitch and appliques showing the various Eskimo motifs. These mittens come in a variety of sizes, but they aren't marked as to size! It seems that there has been some problem getting the Eskimo women to adopt a standard size so each pair must be tried separately. Since each pair of mittens bears the official tag and the name of the place where they were made, they are good gifts for mailing.

I adore unusual salt and pepper sets, so it is not unusual that I fell in love with the set I saw the other day. This $1.25 set is made like Indian tom-toms. Leather is stretched across the ends of wooden cylinders to form the top and bottom of each set. The leather on one end is punctured to form the shaker. A cork in the side of the wooden cylinder lets you fill them. These "tom-toms" which I understand are made by the Cree Indians, are finished with beading.

If you would like to know where to shop for these items please call 382-3131.

Style Show Arranged At Colwood

"A day in the life of the fashionable woman" was the theme when approximately 200 women gathered at the Royal Colwood Golf and Country Club Wednesday for an evening of fashions.

Helen Beirnes was commentator for the show which featured fashions ranging from the safari look to glamor gowns for "after 5." Eaton's provided the outfits.

The guests were welcomed by Miss Mabel Kendall, captain of the Business Women's Division. Refreshments were served by Miss Mary Horan, Miss Darlene Woodburn and Mrs. W. Erickson, assisted by other members of the Business Women's Division.

The fashion show realized $150 which will be used for the assistance and promotion of junior development in the field of golf.

DEAR ABBY . . .

'Dirty Old Man' Needs a Doctor

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I am interested in your reply to "DIRTY OLD MAN'S WIFE." You said, "He's sick. Get him to a doctor." I've known for years that my husband is "sick." It is so humiliating to sit in a restaurant with him while he flirts with the waitresses, or any woman sitting nearby whose eye he happens to catch. And when he stares at the young girls from their feet up, and then down again, I want to run!

I meet my friends away from my home because they won't come by if they know he's there. I have many worthwhile interests, such as music, gardening, books and church work, but, O, for a companion to grow old with!

Yes, I realize he's sick. But how do you get a man in his 60's to a doctor?

WISHFUL THINKING

DEAR WISHFUL: You can't call the men in the white coats and ask them to come and throw a net over him. But you can call your family doctor and tell him what you have told me. Together you can work out a scheme to get your husband to submit to a physical examination. The mental examination can be subtly worked in without arousing suspicion. There is help for your husband's illness (and it is an illness)—and it's more common than you think.

DEAR ABBY: Please help, quick. My 17-year-old daughter is very pretty and an honor student. Our home life has always been good, and she's had the best examples and upbringing. The trouble? She wants to visit a boyfriend who now lives 100 miles away. He would pay her train fare and put her up in a motel for the night.

She sees nothing wrong with this and calls me "an evil minded old hag" who doesn't trust her.

Abby, I do trust her, but I can't get through to her that there are dangers in a situation like this regardless of her innocent intentions, and 17-year-old girls just don't go off alone like that.

We don't know this boy, and know nothing of his family.

Am I being too strict? She says, "Everybody does things like that."

"EVIL MINDED OLD HAG"

DEAR HAG: Stick with your decision. The road to you-know-where is paved with good intentions.

DEAR ABBY: I've been married for 57 years. At that time, cut glass was the thing, and I received dozens of lovely pieces. I put them in my china closet and used them only on very rare occasions.

I have five daughters and 10 grandchildren. I gave them each their choice from my collection of cut glass, and still had many nice pieces left over, so when an antique dealer offered to buy them from me, I sold them.

One of my daughters critized me terribly for "selling" my wedding gifts. I felt that the money could be used to buy birthday gifts for my family.

Did I do wrong? I am 83 years old. Sincerely,

NO NAME, PLEASE

DEAR NO NAME: Sharper than a serpent's tooth (and a load of cut glass) is a thankless child. After 57 years, wedding gifts can be considered "antiques"—to be disposed of any way the owner wishes.

CONFIDENTIAL TO F AND L: Retaliation is for children. Two such "wrongs" could make a write-up.

Everybody has a problem. What's yours? For a personal reply write to Abby, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Calif., 90069 and enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

For Abby's new booklet "What Teen-Agers Want to Know," send $1.00 to Abby, Box 69700, Los Angeles Calif., 90069.

Plan Events

St. Dunstan's Anglican Church Women met recently to plan their season's program. They decided to hold a fall fashion festival on Monday, Oct. 21 at 8 p.m. It will feature clothes by Jack Burgess' Men's and Ladies' Wear. A welcome coffee party is planned for Oct. 16 at 10:30 a.m. The parish harvest supper will take place on Oct. 6 at 6 p.m., and will be followed by a hymn-sing.

The group decided to hold its annual Sugar Plum Bazaar on Nov. 16. The all-day event will begin at 11 a.m.

Canadian Woman Returns After Vietnam Service Disillusioned With Role in War-Torn Country

By ELIZABETH BENNETT

Mrs. Claire Culhane, a medical records librarian from Montreal, describes her decision to leave Vietnam as "very difficult," but found her presence there "became a cruel farce."

Claire Culhane's first impression of Vietnam was that it was the most beautiful country she had ever seen—greener than Ireland and with beautiful beaches.

As she approached Saigon, however, she saw "a great wide swath—a strip 20 miles long and 400 metres wide along Highway Four which has been cleared by United States bulldozers that can crumble buildings or jungles. Nothing will grow there for 10 years."

Six months later she left Vietnam, disillusioned with the project that had drawn her away from her Montreal home.

"As far as I'm concerned," she said during a visit to Victoria, "for a Canadian to consider going to Vietnam to aid in any way the civilian population today is simply to continue prolonging the agony of these people. To pretend to be caring for a people when my own country is profiting in sums of hundreds of millions of dollars annually from the sales of materials which are destroying those same people became a cruel farce in my eyes."

Mrs. Culhane is a medical records librarian. She went to Quang Ngai, 350 miles north of Saigon, as a hospital administrator with the Canadian Tuberculosis Hospital.

"The idea was that we would build and equip a hospital," she explained. "Then we would train the Vietnamese to operate the hospital themselves. It didn't quite work out that way.

"We had only been in operation two months when the Tet offensive took place. Even though we were not attacked at all, the South Vietnamese army occupied the hospital and used it as a firing base. We had to send the patients home."

Mrs. Culhane spent more time in the provincial hospital. "There I found 400 beds with approximately 700 occupants. The hospital was lacking in supplies of electricity and water. There is not enough water to wash a patient down before operating on him. A population of 15 million expected to be served by 150 Vietnamese doctors."

The first words she learned in Vietnamese were "I'm a Canadian, not an American," but Mrs. Culhane found she "had to recognize that I was part of the American presence."

"I had specified when I applied that I didn't want to be associated with the war effort," she explained. "I was assured by the Canadian external aid department that I wouldn't be."

The Americans seemed to have other ideas on the matter. "The day I decided to leave Quang Ngai the American in charge of the provincial hospital came rushing down to the plane and said, 'I hope you will change your mind when you get to Saigon and come back. We badly need people like you to get going again.' He seemed surprised when I pointed out, 'But I'm not working for you'."

Mrs. Culhane wants to return to Vietnam, preferably to Quang Ngai, but not while the war is on. "No one with white skin belongs there now. The Americans can't unite Vietnam; no outsider can. Only the people can do that and they haven't had a chance. The demarcation line was only meant to be temporary in the first place. It means nothing to the Vietnamese peasant. Neither does communism. All he knows is that he wants to live; that his belly hurts."

In Saigon Mrs. Culhane found the people "utterly degraded" by the American presence. "It is the degradation which happens with any people whose country is being occupied," she said, "but their own dignity shines through. They try to live their lives with great dignity and simplicity."

The silver-haired grandmother found the Vietnamese to be "a most industrious and intelligent people. The peasants work seven days a week, 12 hours a day. Tet is the only holiday in the year. When they are herded into refugee camps against their will because the Americans have decided to declare their hamlet a free fire zone they are most unhappy because they are not accustomed to doing nothing."

To Claire Culhane, Vietnam is more than a name and she is astonished at the lack of interest Canadians show in the war. "People get more excited about hippies dabbling their feet in the fountain," she said, referring to a newscast she heard while visiting her daughter in Vancouver.

"To those who state that it is impossible for Canada to take an independent position in Vietnam because the American economy owns 60 per cent of our industry and natural resources I would ask: Would they be prepared to wait until they own 100 per cent and the Vietnamese have to come to help us?"

Mrs. Culhane smiled at my incredulous look. "I have every confidence that the Vietnamese will win the war," she said.

Singers Celebrate At Party

The City of Gardens Chapter of Sweet Adelines Incorporated recently held a Come-As-a-Hippie party at the West Burnside Road home of Mr. and Mrs. R. M. Cartwright. The party was arranged to celebrate the group's first anniversary.

President Mrs. W. J. Birch welcomed guests. These included Mrs. J. Farmer, Dinosaur Valley Chapter, Drumheller, Alta., and Mr. and Mrs. A. Knight of Chinook Winds Chapter, Calgary. Mr. Knight is the director of the chapter.

During the evening, games, swimming and barbershop harmony, led by director Mrs. P. Raike, was enjoyed.

Prizes for the best costumes and form of entertainment were won by Mrs. D. Jefferson, Mrs. E. Blunt and Mrs. M. Cartwright.

Mrs. J. Galbraith convened the barbecue supper which was served.

A highlight of the evening was the singing of old-time barbershop favorites by the Fourdoras Quartet.

Still Working

SAINT JOHN, N.B. (CP) — Mary Louise Northrup of Kingston and Mrs. Charles Boudreau of Edmundston are celebrating their 100th birthdays this year.

OPEN LETTER TO PRESIDENT DE GAULLE . . . . . . QUERIES DIFFERENCES IN AMALGAMATION METHODS

Do Frenchmen Have the Edge on Successful Federation Finesse?

By MAUREEN DUFFUS

Again, M. le President, you have put your agile mind to the problem of Canada.

There are those who say you have again put your indiscreet foot in your mouth, but it is clear that you are concerned about our future, firmly believing that federations joined together are often put assunder.

Sometimes, though, it is hard, M. le President, to follow your darting mind. One had been led to believe, for example, that France was not always the one great happy nation she is today, standing before the world with such magnificent unity of thought and purpose.

An early historian has mentioned that all Gaul divided into three parts was, but one can dismiss this division. It is unlikely that the three parts were ever known as federations.

But perhap you will point out that this only proves your point, since all three parts were a species of federated state (known as a province) belonging to Rome. And everyone knows the Roman empire came to a sticky end after a few centuries of unpopular federating around Europe.

On the other hand, there is the puzzle of the years when Gaul became France.

It is generally understood that there were a number of small federations known as feudal domains, which had a tendency to attack each other in uncivilized fashion and annex each other for varying lengths of time.

Over the years there were all those chaps called Louis or Henry or Charles of Valois or Navarre or Bourbon, all skirmishing around and amalgamating and distintgerating for such a long time before a shrewd Louis tucked them all under his splendiferous wings at Versailles.

This would appear to indicate that various groups can be persuaded to enjoy being joiners under optimum conditions. By this time Champagne had joined the club, which might have helped.

Also, from the inspiring example of French history, we see another method of amalgamation. A Charles (or was it a Louis?) married a northern heiress, thus bringing Brittany into the fold.

Then, as you may recall, a Louis married the widow of another Charles to keep Brittany united to France, even though he had to divorce his first wife who was a daughter of another Louis.

This system was not a large success however, when numerous Bonapartes married various European royals. Naples, for instance didn't federate very successfully.

But do you think, M. le President, that with skillful handling there is a way in which annexation by marriage could be applied to our case?

I cannot at the moment think of a suitable dynastic marriage for our leader, but you might keep it in mind, remembering that there would be no need for a sordid divorce.

It is not possible to follow the whole course of French history looking for clues as to why a group of feudal states should successfully form themselves into a nation, while a federation of English and French Canadians is deemed by you to be doomed to failure.

In fact it becomes more puzzling if one considers that a section of your homogeneous nation joined the club as late as the mid-nineteenth century, when Louis Napoleon backed a winner in an Italian war and annexed Nice and Savoy as a little reward for himself.

But perhaps you do not regard these people of the Midi who speak such impure French as truly integrated. Merely liberated.

To sum up, M. le President, there are certain aspects which back up your assertion that "the concept of a federation is not always good or practical, involving as it does the compulsory association of peoples who were sometimes very different and not at all in favor of federation":

1. The Province of Gaul broke away from a compulsory but unsatisfactory association with Rome after a trial period lasting less than 600 years.

2. Attempts by Germany to federate with France were not looked upon with favor by Frenchmen, and did not succeed.

3. Events in Indó China and Algeria proved the impracticability of federating with colonials.

Nevertheless there is the indisputable fact that Savoyards, Bretons, Normans, Burgundians and assorted independencies, not to mention Franks and Gauls, Vikings and Visigoths, and earlier (if the Encyclopaedia Britannica is to be believed) Iberians, Ligurians, Celts, Germans and Latins, eventually federated to become France.

The above-mentioned British publication, which you may not consider reliable, attributes this to the "extraordinary power of assimilation of the French race which rapidly dissolves them (foreigners)."

Are you, in your efforts to dissuade modern day federations from peristing in their attempts to unify themselves into nations, trying diplomatically to point out that only the French are endowed with this happy ability to assimilate and dissolve?

Such depth of perception, cher M. le President, combined with your never-ceasing concern with the problems of your friends in Canada, must gain you the unstinted admiration of anyone astute enough to follow your interesting deductions.

In concluding with my most respectful wishes, M. le President, may I add my hope that a clarification of your penetrating analyses will follow soon, so that we may all understand why it is foolish of us to perist in our 200-year-old Anglo-French amalgamation when your own country has continued to amalgamate in a rather bloody way since Caesar's day.

Come, Bring Money, Bennett Tells Spain

Premier Bennett has asked the Spaniards to come back to this coast for a new round of exploration.

This time, he told the Spaniards in meetings at Madrid, they should look into industrial activity and the possibilities of joint-ventures in the resources field.

This was the gist of a telegram received here Friday from Deputy Travel Industry Minister Ronald Worley who is accompanying Mr. Bennett on his current European tour.

Mr. Worley said the premier conferred with officials of Spain's departments of industrial development, economics, foreign trade and tourism and met with the head of the Bank of Spain.

He was presented with old maps and drawings dating from the days when Spanish explorers visited this coast.

"He accepted them in the name of the province and invited Spanish businessmen to rediscover the province in an industrial and economic way," Mr. Worley wired.

"Tourism is Spain's largest industry and arrangements were made for an exchange of travel agents and travel writers," he added.

Board Balks At Hydro Access Bid

Four members of the Greater Victoria Water Board Friday balked at first bid offer from B.C. Hydro for a right of way across the district's watershed.

The right of way is required to get power lines in to the new Jordan River hydro plant under construction.

But Hydro want to go through watershed lands and pay for the privilege after the line is built.

Chief Water Commissioner Ron Upward said the proposal was "most unusual."

Mayor Hugh Stephen, chairman of the board, took a harder line.

"Any decision we make this morning, lacking a quorum, will have to be ratified by the full board," he said. "But I think that we can say right now that they will not get the right of way on this basis. It is an entirely unacceptable principle."

The below-quorum board decided to inform Hydro of its stand and await developments.

Some 51 acres of land and a $250,000 price are involved.

New UBC Head Here Monday For Two Speeches

Dr. F. Kenneth Hare, 49-year-old president of the University of British Columbia, will be in Victoria Monday for two speaking engagements.

The renowned geographer and meteorologist will address the alumni of UBC and the University of Victoria in Holyrood House at 12:30. He will also speak to the University Extension Association at the Uvic campus at 8:30 p.m.

Dr. Hare, formerly master of Birkbeck College of the University of London, England, was installed as UBC president in June.

He is known for his research in meteorology and climatology in the Canadian Arctic and Labrador-Ungava region. He is also the only man to have served simultaneously as honorary president of the Association of American Geographers and as president of the Canadian Association of Geographers.

He was chairman of the department of geography and meteorology of Montreal's McGill University and served as its dean of arts and science from 1962 until 1964.

Seattle Lawyer May Visit Here Near Month End

Jerome Farris, a Seattle lawyer involved in slum clearance and youth problems, didn't make it to Victoria this week. Invited to address a Junior Chamber of Commerce meeting on the Negro struggle for rights, he was fogged in at Vancouver Airport.

Jaycee Brian Small said today Mr. Farris returned to Seattle the next day, but will attempt to visit the club later this month. The date for his visit will probably be the 25th, Mr. Small said.

The club may also allow the public to attend the meeting to hear Mr. Farris' speech. A number of telephone calls were made to the club office prior to the lawyer's planned visit, Mr. Small said.

He was invited to Victoria in response to a recent visit by three militant Black Panthers of Seattle, to Victoria.

Weddings

Atherton—Hartman

A lovely wedding took place on August 17th, 1968, at 7:30 o'clock in Glad Tidings Church, when Reverend E. A. Hornby united in marriage Corrie Hartman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Hartman, to Mr. Robert William Atherton, son of Mr. and Mrs. Herb Cooper.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a floor-length gown of white peau d'elegance with a lace coat. Her chapel bouffant scalloped veil was held by a petalled glittering flower. She carried a bouquet of Talisman roses. The attendants, Mrs. Ann Richmond, Mrs. Martha Wade, Mrs. Joanne Richmond and Miss Cobie Hartman wore identical gowns of tangerine orange. Mr. Robin Harris attended as best man and the ushers were Messrs. Clinton Richmond, Paul Wade and Jerry Atherton. Following a reception at the Red Lion Motor Inn, the happy couple left on their honeymoon to California.

Harris—Davidson

Cordova Bay United Church was the setting for the wedding of Heather Suzanne, elder daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Davidson, 5069 Lochside Drive, and Mr. Russell Brian Harris, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Harris of North Vancouver. The double-ring ceremony took place August 24th, 1968, at 2:30 p.m. with Reverend L. D. Wallwork officiating.

Given in marriage by her father the bride was radiant in a floor-length gown of French Chantilly lace over taffeta, which was accentuated by a scooped neckline and slightly belled sleeves. Stephanotis highlighted her veil of silk illusion and she carried white chrysanthemums and stephanotis.

For "something old" the bride wore a gold bracelet, which had belonged to her great aunt. Maid of honor, Miss Carolyn Tanner, and bridesmaid Miss Lynn Davidson, sister of the bride, wore short dresses of lime green Indian silk in the same style as that of the bride. In their hair they wore tiny sprays of gypsophylla and they carried bouquets of yellow marguerites and gypsophylla. Mr. Rod Harris acted as best man for his brother, and Messrs. Lorne Mackie and Rob. Fiddes ushered the guests.

After the ceremony a reception was held in the garden at the home of the bride's parents. Mr. Huph Aylmer proposed the toast to the bride. For her going-away outfit the bride chose a coat-dress of French cotton jacquard in yellow and white, accessorized with a white straw hat and yellow shoes and handbag. The happy couple left for a honeymoon at Long Beach on Vancouver Island. On their return Mr. and Mrs. Harris will make their new home in Vancouver where the groom will complete his studies in the Faculty of Medicine at U.B.C.

Rates for publication of Wedding or Engagement notices, with or without pictures, available on request from the Advertising Department. (Special forms to assist you in writing copy also available.) Copy for weekend editions should be in the Victoria Press office no later than 5 p.m. the Wednesday prior to publication date.

Boak — Haddock

ST. Mary's Anglican Church, Oak Bay, was the setting for a lovely double-ring ceremony August 24th, 1968. Reverend R. O. Wilkes united in marriage Clarice Elaine Haddock, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Courtney Haddock, Victoria, and Mr. Eric Michael Boak, only son of Mrs. Eric E. G. Boak of Victoria and the late Commander Boak and great-great-grandson of Captain W. H. McNeil of the historic S. S. Beaver. The church was beautifully decorated in all white theme with tall standards of carnations, snapdragon and gladioli. Lily of the Valley, tied with white ribbon, marked the guest pews. The tall, dark bride who was given in marriage by her father was a picture in her traditional white floor-length gown of Sonesta re-embroidered silk ribbon on lace forming the fitted empire bodice and full angel sleeves. The slim skirt was accented with a detachable court train cascading from the shoulders. A floral coronet in French velvet and seed pearls held a hand rolled veil of silk illusion. Her beautiful pendent bouquet was created of white single gladioli with a yellow sweetheart rose in the centre of each gladioli. The bride wore her great-great-grandmother's ring as a talisman. The bride was preceded up the aisle by her five attendants, Miss Shirley Hastings, maid of honor of Vancouver; Miss Dianne Boak, sister of the groom, Miss Beverly Bacon, Mrs. Ray Elford of Vancouver and Mrs. Bruce Mantell. All were gowned alike in floor-length, lime green peau d'elegance styled on princess lines with self covered buttons down the front, rounded neckline and cap sleeves. Their bouffant headpieces of two shades of blending greens and shoes en tone. They carried star burst burst bouquets of yellow centred white shasta mums tied with ribbon en tone. Mr. John Cannon of Vancouver was best man. The ushers were: Mr. Ray Elford, Mr. Douglas King of Vancouver; Mr. Ronald McMicking; Mr. Darcy Haddock, brother of the bride. Dr. L. L. Ptak proposed the toast to the bride while 250 guests enjoyed the beautifully decorated Victoria Golf Club in its yellow and white color scheme.

The bride's table was covered with a delicate lace cloth centred with a three-tier wedding cake, white tapers and silver candelabra. Mr. David L. Lawson was master of ceremonies and Miss Erica Boak, the groom's youngest sister had charge of the bride's book. Mrs. W. E. Haddock of Vancouver, grandmother of the bride and Mrs. E. W. Boak, grandmother of the groom attended the wedding. The bride and groom left on a honeymoon to Harrison Hot Springs and Washington. The bride's going-away outfit was a short fitted jacket over a slim skimmer dress in misty taupe silk. A cream tone ruffle encircled a high jewel neckline and long fitted sleeves. A cream tone, velvet hat picture hat and cinnamon corsage of orchids complemented the costume. They young couple will make their future home in Vancouver.

Out-of-town guests were: Miss Shirley Haddock, Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Haddock, Mr. and Mrs. W. Gutteridge, Mr. and Mrs. W. Lyall, Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Haddock, Miss Marcia Lundy, Mrs. John Boak, Miss Mitzi Heed, Miss Kurley Berar, Mr. Rick Griffiths, Mr. Gordon Annand, Mr. Roy Passmore, all of Vancouver; Mrs. John Sutherland, Guelph, Ontario; Mrs. Leslie Ayers, Seattle; Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Hatch, Santa Monica, California; Miss Leslie Wishart, Campbell River.

Livingstone — Floyer

A quiet wedding took place August 24th, 1968, at 3 p.m. in the Christadelphian Church, when Mr. Arthur Bird united in marriage Lena Violet Clive Floyer, daughter of the late Major and Mrs. Clive Justice, to Mr. John Barron Livingstone, son of the late James Livingstone. The bride who was given in marriage by her brother, Mr. Clive Justice was lovely in a navy and white wool frock with matching toque. She carried an heirloom Bible overlaid with white heather. Mrs. N. Gretchen, daughter of the groom was matron of honor; she wore a forest green gown with soft black feather hat and corsage of pink carnations. Mr. Ernest Bird was groomsman.

A family reception was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Robin Justice. Mr. and Mrs. Livingstone will reside on Kelly Road, Colwood, Victoria.

Constantineau — Pearce

A pretty wedding took place August 24th, 1968, at St. Joseph's Church when Reverend R. Caldwell united in marriage Leona Patricia, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Pearce, 3114 Harriet Road, Victoria, to Mr. Larry Constantineau, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Constantineau, Cranbrook, B.C. Miss Elaine Desjardines acted as bridesmaid. Mr. Ron Deschamps was groomsman. Guests were ushered by Messrs. Bruce and Rick Constantineau, brothers of the groom.

A small family reception was held at the home of the bride's parents. The young couple will reside in Vancouver.

Crosby—Bos

Reverend C. L. Streight officiated at a double-ring ceremony in the Cadboro Bay United Church on September 7th, 1968, at 7:30 p.m., when Thea Albertha, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. F. Bos, exchanged marriage vows with Mr. Harry Richard Crosby, son of Mr. and Mrs. D. Crosby.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was radiant in a floor-length belled gown of white organza with alencon lace en train overskirt. Her cathedral-length veil of silk illusion tulle was caught into a crescent of organza petals and she carried a cascading bouquet of deep pink princess roses. Maid of honor, Miss Betsy Bos, sister of the bride, and bridesmaids Misses Ria Koome and Wilma Bos, were attired in identical gowns of centennial pink peau d'elegance styled in belled skirts and long sleeves complemented with entone crescent headpieces and white carnation bouquets.

Best man was Mr. Neil Crosby, brother of the groom, and Messrs. Bill Verwyk and Frank Bos ushered the guests.

The reception and dance was held at the Royal Oak Women's Institute Hall. Mr. P. Wams proposed the toast to the bride.

For her going-away outfit the bride chose a two-piece bone suit of silk and wool trimmed with a pearl mink collar. A matching fur hat, brown leather accessories, and a corsage of golden roses completed her ensemble.

Bonner — Young

St. Luke's Anglican Church was the scene of a wedding ceremony Saturday, August 3rd, 1968, at 2 p.m. when Jean Margot Young and Mr. Kenneth Ralph Bonner, were united in marriage. Archdeacon C. E. F. Wolff officiated for the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Victor Young of Victoria, and the son of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Bonner of Cobble Hill.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, was radiant in a floor-length gown of white silk organza. Guipure lace encircled the high jewel neckline and lilly point sleeves and cascaded down the slim sheer cage. A tiny juliet cap held a full cathedral veil of silk illusion encircled in matching lace. Her bouquet was of Princess roses, stephanotis and ivy. The bride was attended by Mrs. Barbara Lamb, as matron of honor, and bridesmaids, Miss Sandra Bonner, sister of the groom, and Miss Susan Devine, of Edmonton. They wore identical floor-length gowns of sea green peau d'elegance fashioned in empire style with hairpieces and bouquets of mauve feathered chrysanthemums and ivy.

Best man was Mr. James Fraser. Messrs. Frank Bonner, brother of the groom, and Murray Holmes, cousin of the bride, ushered the guests. Summer flowers decorated the Oak Bay Beach Hotel for the reception that followed. Toast to the bride was proposed by Mr. L. H. Noble, a close family friend. Telegrams of good wishes were received from Yorkton, Saskatchewan, Aberdeen, Scotland; and Islamabad, Pakistan. For their honeymoon trip to California and Mexico, the bride chose an Irish linen suit, in a deep pink shade complemented by white accessories and a corsage of white rosebuds. The newlyweds will make their home in Victoria.

Kerr — Sowler

A pretty wedding took place August 3, 1968, at 6 o'clock in Christ Church, Brampton, Ontario, when Reverend R. J. Payton united in marriage Judith Anne, elder daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Sowler, 546 Latoria Road, Victoria, to Mr. James Morris Kerr, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Kerr, Ormstown, Quebec. The bride, given in marriage by her father, was attended by Mrs. Sandi Jeffries. Mr. Lawrence Carss was groomsman and Mr. Norman Kerr ushered the guests. After the ceremony a reception was held at Ridge Lake Farm.

The bride and groom left on their honeymoon to Ottawa. On their return they will reside on Ridge Lake Farm, Malton, Ontario, where Mr. Kerr is manager.

Sampson — Chatterton

Sharlie, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Chatterton, was married on August 24th, 1968, to Michael, son of Mr. and Mrs. Reginald Sampson, Midland Drive. Reverend R. O. Wilkes, assisted by Canon Jack Rogers, conducted the double ring service in St. Michaels and All Angels Church on West Saanich Road., at 2 p.m. The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a gracefully simple gown created by her bridesmaid, Wendy Burrell. It was fashioned of three layers of silk organza over a silk underskirt, white lace daisies circled the round neck. The long loose sleeves finished likewise at the wrists and the lace flowers trimmed the complete hemline. A full length silk veil fell from a coronet. She carried a bouquet of rosebuds and stephanotis. The bride was attended by her sister, Valerie, as maid of honor; Miss Christine McCleave of Halifax, and Miss Wendy Burrell. They wore floor-length gowns of pale pink cotton with lace inserts. Their bouquets were miniature replicas of the bride's.

The groom's brother, John, was best man. Mr. Peter Terry and Mr. Peter Chatterton were ushers. Mrs. Robert Clelland played the organ. The wedding reception took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. George Burrell, 2760 Burdick Avenue. Mr. Burrell, godfather of the bride, proposed the toast. Sharlie chose a navy blue and white crepe suit for going away. A white picture hat, red and white corsage and red purse completed her smart ensemble to leave with Michael for Hawaii.

Linnell — White

The marriage is announced between Isobel Joyce White, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert R. White, 2663 Orchard Avenue, Victoria, and Spec. 4 Stuart John Linnell, son of Mr. and Mrs. John S. Linnell, 1550 Hampshire Road, Victoria. The ceremony was performed in St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church Vestry at 4 p.m., September 9, 1968, by Dr. J. L. W. McLean.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, was lovely in a gown of white peau de soie, with lace overdress, her headpiece of white silk roses and mink matching the spray on the prayer book she carried.

Bridesmatron Mrs. Sandra Binks, sister of the bride wore matching yellow gown and headpiece. Best man was Mr. Mark Banfield of Victoria.

A wedding supper at Holyrood House followed where Mr. Larry Binks, brother-in-law of the bride, proposed the toast. The newlyweds left for a trip on Vancouver Island.

9 IN MEMORIAM

T. FRANK ROGERS — Who passed away Sept. 15, 1967.

Oh what would I give to clasp his hand,
His dear kind face to see,
To hear his voice, to see his smile,
That meant so much to me,
His spirit has fled his suffering O'er,
At our gatherings he will join us no more.
— Ever remembered by his loving wife, Marjorie, his family, brothers and sisters.

While the Twin Cities nosed out Montreal in the intercity bridge match played as a preliminary to the Summer National Championships of the A.C.B.L., the biggest swing in the match was in favor of Montreal.

Opening lead—♥7

At one table, the Twin City pair reached seven spades. The Montreal West was too smart to double. Had he done so, chances are his opponents would run out to seven notrump, which makes easily because the club finesse will work.

At the other table, Montreal reached seven diamonds on the bidding shown in the box. South's five no-trump bid was the grand slam force. Ely Culbertson invented this bid back in the '30s but it was too sophisticated for those early days. It disappeared into limbo for almost 30 years but has been brought back by today's experts.

In this particular spot it said, "Partner, bid seven if you hold two of the three top honors in trumps." North did and obliged.

East's double of seven diamonds was another old-time gadget. The Lightner slam double called for an unusual lead against an adverse slam.

If either North or South had run to seven no-trump, East would have been sorry for his double. He was sorry anyway when his partner led a heart. South ruffed in his hand, ran off all his trumps, cashed his ace, king and Queen of spades, entered dummy with the king of clubs, discarded his last two spades on the ace and king of hearts and led the five of clubs. East had been forced to unguard his queen of clubs in order to keep a high heart, and Montreal picked up 21 International Match Points on this one hand.

West's decision to lead a heart was unfortunate and we feel that he should have led the spade and given his partner a ruff. He was looking at six spades and might well have visualized his partner with none at all.

$25,900

This spacious, immaculate 3-bedroom home looks as though it were new for its 8 years—attributed to the hard work and tender loving care it has received by its present owners. Manicured weedless lawns and black flower beds, alive with riots of color frame a not too ordinary facade of brick, natural and painted siding and stucco, with board wrought railinged steps to the front door. Living room, with floor-to-ceiling raised hearth fireplace, oak floors and view from front window and glass doors to sundeck, is not large or small but very comfortable. Kitchen is bright and cheery with good size family dining area, and because the home faces southwest you'll get the morning sun over your shoulder. Two bathrooms on the main floor, one off the master bedroom are both vanitied and well closeted. Each of the three bedrooms are good size. The master being 12'6"x12', and one other being panelled in birch, all have large cedar lined closets. Basement all finished in fir panelling has 25'x18' rec room and extra 2-pce. bathroom, plumbed and wired for automatic utilities and 2 back doors to patio and garden. DON'T MISS THIS, 3-7 SATURDAY.

10 MILE POINT UNUSUAL — ATTRACTIVE

This attractive home built with a high regard for Japanese architecture also uses the best functionalism of Western architecture to produce better living because — it is located in the 2nd best area (Uplands is first) — the lot is large 74x220 — it's treed, offering you a natural park of your own. The privacy extends also to the home. The living room is peninsular with a separate entrance (how many times have you crossed through a living room or dining room to get to another room — A living area should not serve as a passageway. Between the living room and the large dining room is a free standing stone fireplace — serving both rooms and it soars to the full height of the open beamed roof. The wall between the dining room and kitchen is translucent and has a Japanese design. The lighting from either room through the panelling adds a most interesting feature to these rooms. The kitchen has black walnut cabinets that only Tech Designed Homes would produce. This is a room that most ladies will not be able to resist. The bedrooms are large, 2 have feature walls and special lighting and there are two full bathrooms. In addition there is a large rumpus room finished in yellow cedar with a floor to ceiling fireplace. There are many more features. The price is $39,500 and there is a 8½ per cent mortgage available. B. Price, 385-2458.

NOTICE TO CONTRACTORS
TREE PLANTING

Sealed tenders will be received by the Deputy Minister of Forests up to 4:00 p.m. October 4, 1968, for a contract to plant trees on 325 acres, more or less, situated on T. L.'s 1909, 1910, 7240 and 7241, Oktwanch River, approximately 12 miles northwest of Gold River.

Particulars may be obtained from the Chief Forester, Parliament Buildings, Victoria, B.C., or from the Forest Ranger at Gold River, B.C.

Prospective bidders are directed to examine the area and acquaint themselves with ground conditions on the site. The Ranger at Gold River will conduct interested parties to the area on Tuesday, September 24, leaving the Ranger Station at 1:00 p.m.

Tenders will not be considered unless made out on the forms supplied, properly signed, and accompanied by a certified cheque payable to the Minister of Finance, in the sum of five percent of the bid price.

Planting stock will be supplied free of charge by the Forest Service, F.O.B. at a place designated by the Forest Service.

The lowest or any tender will not necessarily be accepted.

Tenders must be submitted in the envelope marked "Tender for Tree Planting".

School District Takeover Asked

NEW YORK (AP) — The administrator of an experimental school district in suburban Brooklyn has called for takeover by New York state of the unit to break the deadlock which brought two citywide teachers' strikes in a week.

The 55,000-member United Federation of Teachers struck again Friday, paralysing the United States' largest school system. About 1,100,000 pupils were shut out of their classrooms.

The union walked out over the refusal of the community-controlled Ocean Hill-Brownsville district to reinstate 10 white teachers it had ordered transferred and 200 others that walked out in sympathy for the 10.

Rhody A. McCoy, chief administrator of the unit, called on state Education Commissioner James E. Allen Jr. to "make us a ward of the state."

Allen made no immediate comment.

Only about 22,600 children attended classes Friday along with 2,900 teachers. The board of education said 159 of the 900 schools were open.

There were scattered disorders at some schools as angry parents and sympathetic teachers tried to keep classes going.

OBTAINS AN ORDER

The city obtained a state Supreme Court order calling on union President Albert Shanker and the union to show cause why they should not be prosecuted for criminal contempt. The action was taken under a state law which forbids strikes by public employees.

Shanker, who served a 15-day jail term last year for leading a teachers' strike for higher wages, faces a maximum penalty of 30 days in jail and a $250 fine if found guilty of criminal contempt.

Basically the battle lines on the strike are drawn between predominantly Negro forces seeking community control of schools on one hand and teachers' organizations seeking to protect contractual rights of their members on the other.

The Ocean Hill-Brownsville district was set up as an experiment in school decentralization, preparatory to the planned decentralization of the entire city school complex.

Last May the Ocean Hill-Brownsville board ousted the 10 teachers, accusing them of sabotaging the experiment in decentralization. Another 200 teachers in the district walked out in support of their colleagues.

Prior to the scheduled opening of the fall term Sept. 9, the UFT demanded the reinstatement of the 10 without reprisals. Lacking this guarantee they went on strike Monday and Tuesday.

An agreement was reached to reinstate the teachers Tuesday and city schools opened Wednesday. But demonstrators at the Ocean Hill-Brownsville schools prevented about 100 of the teachers from returning and the second walkout was called.

Knife Gleams, Guns Roar, Man Subdued

CHICAGO (AP) — Police fired two shots at a knife-wielding man Friday night near the Sheraton-Blackstone Hotel and later captured him in a theatre basement next to the hotel where Spiro T. Agnew, Republican vice-presidential candidate, was staying overnight.

Hotel officials said Agnew, governor of Maryland, was in his third-floor suite at the time of the incident and they declined further comment.

The gunplay interrupted a performance of You Know I Can't Hear You When the Water's Running at the Blackstone Theatre for 15 minutes.

The man in custody was identified as Albert Townsend, 30. Policemen John Gleason and James Radetz said they pursued the man after they saw him wandering down the street cursing and threatening pedestrians with the four-inch knife. An attempt to subdue him with chemical Mace in front of the theatre failed and he fled down a gangway at the side of the theatre.

"I gotta kill, I gotta kill," police quoted him as shouting as he fled.

Radetz fired one shot as Townsend ran inside the stage door entrance. He fired again after Townsend threw him to the floor as they wrestled. He was captured in the theatre's sub-basement which adjoins the hotel.

Police said Townsend has been arrested several times for narcotics violations.

Former Official In Construction Buried Here

Funeral services were held earlier this week for Everett L. (Ed) Allan, of 1526 Richmond St., who died in hospital Sept. 5.

Born in River John, N.S., Mr. Everett began working in construction at an early age. He studied industrial accounting and in 1945 was transferred to Victoria as office manager for Commonwealth Construction. He retained that position until 1960 when he moved to Vancouver, returning later to Victoria.

He was a well-known figure in B.C. construction.

He is survived by the widow, Nell, and five children, all at home.

All Parties Pay Tribute To Cameron

OTTAWA (CP) — Leaders of all parties in the Commons paid tribute Thursday to Colin Cameron, veteran socialist who died July 28 after being elected June 25 to his fifth term in the Commons.

Prime Minister Trudeau said the 71-year-old member for Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands "displayed in his person the promise which is Canada."

Mr. Cameron's tenacity of purpose, courtliness and warmth had won him respect on all sides.

His outstanding success at the polls "was exceeded only by the effectiveness of his presence in this chamber."

Conservative Leader Stanfield and Creditiste Leader Caouette also spoke movingly of Mr. Cameron. Mr. Stanfield said he had "applied uncommon wit, intelligence and eloquence to the great issues of his time."

David Lewis, acting NDP leader, thanked the others for their remarks and spoke of Mr. Cameron as a colleague of more than 30 years who was "in all ways a civilized human being."

Residents Seek Full Treatment On Road Work

A local improvement petition has been submitted to Saanich for storm drains, curbs, gutters, sidewalks and boulevards on McKenzie Avenue between Patricia Bay Highway and Quadra Street.

The petition, by local residents, will be considered by Saanich council at a meeting Monday night.

Earlier this year, a local improvement was initiated to bring similar facilities to McKenzie between Quadra and just east of Century Road.

This section of McKenzie is planned to be widened to four lanes next year and engineer Neville Life said the local improvements will mean the new road will have "the full treatment."

Without the local improvements, residents were in line for a four-lane asphalt road with open ditches, no sidewalks and no boulevard improvement.

Air Battle Remembered At Cenotaph

Ceremonies marking the 28th anniversary of the Battle of Britain were held at the cenothaph this morning.

Marching groups from the RCAF Association, the Royal Canadian Legion, the Air Cadet Corps, and the Air Cadette Corps, were led from Bastion Square to the cenotaph by the Esquimalt Legion pipe band.

It was neither a glorious parade nor a large parade. The cold early rain and dismal skies kept all but the faithful and the very curious at home. But the day seemed befitting to the prupose at hand — the mourning of the heroic airmen who lost their lives in the Battle of Britain.

A small crowd gathered near the cenotaph as the marchers approached. Some looked to the sky, expecting the arrival of the jets. Some shuffled restlessly, waiting for something to happen. Others stood still. The marchers arrived.

SERVICE STARTS

The Royal Canadian Legiion color guard deployed around the cenotaph and Rev. Canon Wickens began his prayers. They were simple, asking remembrance for those who lost their lives in the Battle of Britain and blessing those who serve our country today. The crowd joined in the prayers.

When they were over, Group Captain (Ret'd) Alex Jardine placed a wreath at the foot of the cenotaph. An air force bugler played the "Last Post," and as Mr. Jardine saluted, the color guard lowered their flags. The ceremonies were almost over.

At 10:59 p.m. three Voodoo jet fighters streaked by. Two members of the pipe band played "Flowers of the Forest," and the marchers began to regroup.

The parade continued up Government Street, past the reviewing stand in front of the Empress Hotel where Mr. Jardine took the salute. A gap appeared in the clouds and the jets thundered by on their final pass. The sun shone on the marchers as they disappeared up the street.

The Battle of Britain had been remembered.

Students Face Crisis For Housing

Students arriving for the new term at the University of Victoria face a housing crisis.

About 2,000 of an expected 5,000 enrolled students are from outside the Greater Victoria area and looking for rooms and apartments.

Friday Victoria Mayor Hugh Stephen called upon area residents to find accommodation for them.

The enrollment at Uvic is about 1,000 higher than last year, and there has been no increase in residence accommocaton at the university.

Only 300 students — 150 men and 150 women — can be accommodated in residences.

The remainder, many of them married students, must find apartments and house-keeping rooms in the city area, Mayor Stephen said.

He asked anyone who could furnish accommodation to register with the housing office at the university by calling 477-6911. The office is open from 8:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. Monday to Friday.

The present shortage will continue until at least next year. The university has planned residences this year for only another 300 students.

Norway to Compete

OSLO (CP) — Norway will compete after all in the Olympic Games in Mexico City Oct. 12-27. The Norwegians withdrew last month in protest against the Warsaw pact invasion of Czechoslovakia. The Norwegian Athletic Association rescinded the withdrawal today after 16 hours of debate.

GIRL, 12 TO HELP PICK GRIT LEADER

LADNER (CP) — A 12-year-old girl was named Friday as a delegate to next month's British Columbia Liberal Party convention which will choose a new leader.

Georgina Janak, a Grade 8 student at a junior secondary school in this Vancouver suburb, will be one of four Tsawwassen Association delegates to the Penticton convention Oct. 4-5.

"I just think I am the luckiest girl in the world," she said.

Her grandfather, A. M. Whisker, is president of the Tsawwassen Liberal Association. He was selected as an alternate delegate."

"We checked the constitution," said Mr. Whisker, "and found there is no age limitation on delegates."

Charge Reduced

CAMPBELL RIVER — Peter Leonard Harry of the Churchhouse Indian Reserve will stand trail for manslaughter in the fall assizes. The charge was reduced from non-capital murder at a hearing in magistrate's court.

Harry's wife Margaret, 30, died July 28 of injuries following an incident in their home.

An inquest into the Sept. 7 death of Velma Herbert, 53, of North Vancouver was cancelled today after the attorney-general's department said an inquest is not necessary on non-capital murder charges.

The charge was laid against her husband, T. K. Herbert, 50.

Suitcase Era Follows Czech Reform Crisis

By DAN MORGAN
The Washington Post

PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia — Czechoslovaks have become a people with packed suitcases.

Every invasion or war produces its refugees, but the Soviet-Warsaw Pact intervention in this country and its then curiously inconclusive aftermath have produced one of the more curious human ebbs and flows.

Thousands of Czechoslovaks in temporary exile—the euphemism is "vacation"—outside the country, mainly in Vienna, Belgrade and London, are agonizing about whether to return. And in this occupied nation itself, thousands more are wondering if it is worth it to stay, under the Soviet gun.

For the first time there are slight signs of tension between the outs and ins, in the circles of Czech intelligentsia. A little jealousy that somebody else had the travelling papers and the mobility to get out may be involved, but a larger cause is the mild disappointment that so many have deserted the ship.

One journalist said this week, "for eight months they have been writing what they think in the press. Then when the going gets tough they take off rather than face the music."

On the other hand he quickly added that he, too, is considering emigration.

Some have felt hurt by the personal accounts of Czechoslovakians in exile, published in the western press and broadcast by western radio. Some of those who remained feel the articles may have made their own plight here more difficult and played into the hands of Soviet propagandists who are anxiously trying to justify their charges of "counter-revolution."

Several journalists who were starting legitimate vacations in the west the day the invasion started have returned and been confronted with wryly skeptical looks from their colleagues.

Adding to the uncertainty is the fact that first reports of arrests, doubtless inspired by the Soviet KGB, proved unfounded. Nor has there yet been confirmation of rumors of a Soviet "wanted' list including 20,000 names.

Authoritative sources in Prague Monday said that 85 persons have been arrested in the country, none of them significant or well known. All but 20 have been released and the ones being held are thought to be all young persons who distributed anti-Polish leaflets to Polish soldiers.

First appeals by Czechoslovak government leaders for the exiles' return were thought to be pro forma gestures ordered by the Russians. But it is now believed the leadership sincerely wants the intelligentsia, scientists and other key people who have left to return and try to begin putting back together the shattered substructure of reforms begun eight months ago.

In the Monday edition of the newspaper Vecerni Praha, Interior Minister Jan Pelnar all but promised an amnesty by saying that "confidence has been gained because there have been no arrests . . . This confidence will be strengthened."

Meanwhile, Soviet envoy Vasily Kuznetsov is reported to have brought a guarantee from Moscow against arrests of progressives.

But hundreds of Czechoslovaks have been unimpressed and are keeping a packed suitcase at home. They are posed for a mass exodus at the first sign of a new crackdown.

One woman agonized for eight days after the invasion, with her suitcase packed the whole time, and finally left. Some have left, returned and now decided to leave permanently.

To go or not to go is the absorbing and obsessive subject among young people, actors, film producers and writers.

A typical street banter follows this pattern:

"Hey, man, are you still here? I thought you'd made it. Jiri and Marta split long ago."

"Yeah, I know, but I'm waiting for developments. But I put in for my visa today."

The decisions facing the intellectuals who were instrumental in building up the reforms are particularly poignant. Eduard Goldstuecker, head of the Czech Writers Union, is believed to have stayed in retreat an an unknown country place. Martin Vaculik, the playwright and political polemicist, is said to be still in the country, as is Jan Prochazka, vice-president of the writers union and a frequent target of Soviet abuse.

Ivan Switak, the non-Communist progressive Marxist philosopher, is in the United States; and the playwright Pavel Kohout is reportedly in West Germany and said to be thinking over a grant from a U.S. university TV.

About the only slight encouragement to the return of the intellectuals are signs of a moderate approach in applying censorship. It is expected to be indirect only, with no censors in the newspaper offices and warnings being issued before the withdrawal of licenses.

Reporter and Literarny Listy, the two rapier weeklies in the reform period, are to be published again, but in watered-down versions with more emphasis on the culture and literature and much less on polities.

The editors of both, Vladimir Budin and A. J. Liehm respectively, have left the country for the time being and the problem is finding top men to put out the publications. Reporter's last issue, issued after the invasion but printed before it, contained correspondence between Stalin and Tito and was immediately banned and seized by the Russians.

Reporter's regular quarters are on the top floor of the journalists union and are still occupied by Soviet troops.

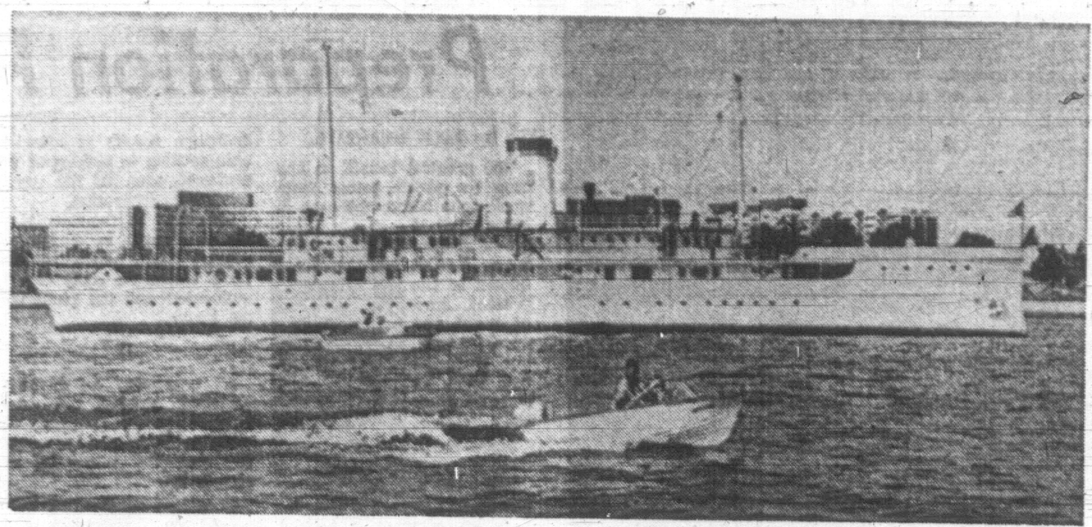
All Prague newspapers are publishing, though sayling less. Journalism is still an honourable profession in Czechoslovakia, but reporters with the packed suitcases are still asking, "for how long."

Reward Hiked For Gang's Chicken Run

TORONTO (CP) — An anonymous donor's contribution has increased a reward to $500 for information leading to the arrest and conviction of motorcycle gang members who last month ripped apart a live chicken.

Thomas Hughes, general manager of the Ontario Humane Society, said Thursday night $200 has been added to the society's $100 reward. Another anonymous donor contributed $200 a few days after the incident.

Mr. Hughes said members of the Satan's Choice gang, attending a field day near Oshawa, chased a live chicken on their motorcycles. The winner was the one with the largest piece of chicken.



TRAINING apprentices for the merchant marine will be the new occupation of the luxury yacht Dauntless, which is now owned by the Seafarers' International Union, the Marine Engineers Benevolent Association and the Associated Maritime Officers' Union. It also will be used for various union activities. The Dauntless is shown lying at anchor in Washington, D.C. She is 260 feet long and was built at a cost of $2.5 million in 1921 for Horace Dodge.

CZECH SUBMISSION URGED

By WILLIAM L. RYAN
AP Special Correspondent

A party leader who once suffered degradation and imprisonment at the hands of Stalinists is gaining prominence in Czechoslovakia as an exponent of making the best of a bad situation.

The Russians have been speaking in guardedly favorable terms of Gustav Husak, current chief of the Communist party in Slovakia, who has been sounding like a voice of authority in the crisis produced by the Soviet occupation.

Husak has lately been warning Czechoslovakia's press to live with the idea that free expression no longer is possible. Press freedom had lasted only a few months before the Russians moved in.

DUBCEK
. . . follows new line

The Slovak party chief cautions broadcasters and newspapers against spreading "fabrications" about the Soviet military presence, and says "there must be temporary restrictions." Alexander Dubcek, the Czechoslovak party's over-all chief, said the same thing Aug. 27, after his confrontation with the Russians in Moscow, but Pravda, reporting it, deleted the word "temporary."

Husak said last week that if journalists showed the proper "degree of understanding," it might not be necessary to use enforcement machinery with the impending censorship law.

"However," Husak added sternly, "if we fail to find such understanding, we will be compelled to take even harsher measures in the interests of . . . the departure of the troops. . . .

WILL TELL NATION

"And we will frankly tell the whole nation what kind of measures we are taking and why, when ever there is no other way."

Western dispatches from Prague said that the Russians seemed to have Husak marked for bigger things, perhaps as over-all Czechoslovak party chief, replacing Dubcek.

Husak seems to have the respect of many Czechoslovaks.

Husak, 55, a lawyer, was deputy premier just before the occupation. He was a partisan fighter in the Second World War and an organizer of the Slovak rising against the Nazis in 1944.

Marshal Ivan Konets, the wartime Soviet commander in that area, praised Husak warmly for his wartime role in a recent article in Izvestia.

After the Communists took over Czechoslovakia in 1948, Husak's fortunes sagged. He was arrested in a widespread purge, a victim of Stalin's hunt for "bourgeois nationalists," a term applied to Communists who put patriotism before the Kremlin's interests.

In 1954 Husak was sentenced to life imprisonment. De-Stalinization proceeded slowly in Czechoslovakia, and he was not released until 1960. He was "rehabilitated" in 1963, but not permitted then to hold any political office.

He became active as a journalist and worked in the Historical Institute of the Slovak Academy of Sciences. He emerged to prominence only after the fall of Stalinist Antonin Novotny early this year.

Chicago Debacle Splits Democrats

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senator Stephen M. Young (Dem.—Ohio) and Senator Russell B. Long (Dem.—La.) clashed in the United States Senate this week with sharply differing versions of disorders at the Democratic national convention at Chicago.

Young said police brutality and misjudgments by Mayor Richard J. Daley were responsible for much of turmoil which he said marred the convention.

Long said "Communist stinkoes, traitors and no-accounts" caused the trouble.

The veteran Ohio senator began the exchange.

"In my view, the police brutality in Chicago was shameful and revolting to all Americans, not only to those who watched what was taking place on the television screen but also to those of us who were delegates at the convention and observed what took place in the public parks and on the sidewalks," Young said.

As soon as Young finished, Long took the floor and shouted:

"I am now going to speak for America and not for the Communist scum of this country.

"If the senator wants to speak for them, he can do so. But I am proud to be an American and speak for my country."

'DESERVED SHOOTING'

Long said he had seen demonstrators at Chicago waving the Viet Cong flag and shouting for Ho Chi Minn. He said that such persons deserved to be clubbed or even shot.

"Whenever I saw a policeman at Chicago," he said, "I thanked him as an honorable and brave man for letting us hold our convention there."

"I admire Mayor Daley for the stand he took."

The Louisiana Senator said that "if the convention had nominated the candidate of that Communist scum, I would have resigned as Democratic Senate whip and as chairman of the Finance Committee."

"I would have wanted no part of a party which would do such a thing."

Long did not name anyone in this connection.

Young said that "no one questions that law and order must be maintained."

"The difference is there can be no real law and order unless it is coupled with justice. Adolf Hitler in a way can be said to have enforced law and order."

THE CORPORATION OF THE DISTRICT OF SAANICH

BY-LAW No. 2900

A BY-LAW TO PROVIDE FOR THE ESTABLISHMENT OF A MUNICIPAL SANITARY SEWERAGE ENTERPRISE INCLUDING THE CONSOLIDATION OF EXISTING SEWERAGE SYSTEMS

WHEREAS the Council has from time to time adopted by-laws for the construction of sanitary sewerage works in various areas of the Municipality of Saanich under which debentures of the Corporation are presently outstanding or authorized,

AND WHEREAS it is deemed desirable and expedient to:

(a) Provide for the establishment of a municipal enterprise consisting of all municipally owned and operated works, equipment and facilities for providing sewerage facilities and for their maintenance, management and operation.

(b) Provide that from the 31st day of December, 1968, no levies shall be imposed, raised, or levied under the terms of the said by-laws.

(c) Define an area of the Municipality of Saanich which, in the opinion of the Council of the Corporation, will be served by sewerage facilities within a period of five years from the 31st day of December, 1968.

AND WHEREAS it is deemed desirable and expedient to provide that the total amount required to be raised annually for the retirement of the debt created by the aforesaid by-laws and the interest thereon and the debt hereafter to be created for capital expenditure on or in connection with the said municipal enterprise and the interest thereon, shall be levied and raised by a uniform parcel tax being an equal levy in dollars on each parcel of real property taxable for general purposes in the area defined in this by-law,

AND WHEREAS it is deemed desirable and expedient to provide that the said uniform parcel tax may be reduced in respect of real property any present or previous owner or present occupier of which has paid all or a portion of the debt and debt charges, excluding interest, in respect of that portion of the sewerage system of the Corporation that serves the real property,

AND WHEREAS it is deemed desirable and expedient to provide that from the thirty-first day of December, 1968, an amount at least sufficient to meet the annual estimated expenses of management, maintenance and operation of the said municipal enterprise (less any amount assumed by the Corporation at large) shall be raised by imposing an annual charge against the owners or occupiers of real property within the Municipality of Saanich connected to the sewerage system in accordance with the provisions of Clause (c) of Subsection (1), Section 532 of the Municipal Act, and the amount so raised shall be applied firstly to meet the annual expenses of management, maintenance and operation and, secondly, in retirement of the said debt,

AND WHEREAS it is deemed desirable to authorize the construction of sewerage works within the area defined in this by-law, or as such area may, from time to time, be extended, and to borrow the requisite sums therefor in accordance with the provisions of Section 253 of the Municipal Act,

THEREFORE the Municipal Council of The Corporation of the District of Saanich enacts as follows:

1. There is hereby established a municipal sewerage enterprise consisting of all municipally owned and operated works, equipment and facilities for providing sewerage facilities and the said enterprise shall hereafter be responsible for the construction, maintenance, management and operation of all such works, equipment and facilities now or hereafter to be constructed.
2. From the 31st day of December, 1968, no levies shall be imposed, raised or levied under the terms of any by-laws of the Corporation in respect of sanitary sewers under which debts are owing by the Corporation or under which debentures of the Corporation are presently outstanding or authorized.
3. The area which, in the opinion of the Council, will be served by sewerage facilities within a period of five years from the 31st day of December, 1968, is that area shown outlined on sheets numbered 1 to 6 inclusive of a plan prepared by Neville W. Life, P. Eng. dated the 3rd day of September, 1968, and marked "Plan to accompany By-Law No. 2900 'Sewerage Consolidation and Enterprise Establishment By-Law, 1968'," hereinafter referred to as the "sewerage area."
4. From the 31st day of December, 1968, the total amount (excluding the Corporation's portion of the cost assumed under Section 7 and any sum for the retirement of the debt available from the amount to be raised as provided in Section 6) required to be raised annually for the retirement of the debt created by the aforesaid by-laws and interest thereon, and for the debt hereafter to be created for capital expenditure on or in connection with the said sewerage enterprise and interest thereon, shall be levied and raised by a uniform parcel tax being an equal levy in dollars on each parcel of real property taxable for purposes within the "sewerage area," or such area extended as hereinafter provided.
5. The said uniform parcel tax shall be reduced by the sum of $8.70 per year in respect of each parcel of real property any present or previous owner or present occupier of which has paid all or a portion of the debt and debt charges, excluding interest, in respect of that portion of the sewerage system of the Corporation that serves the said parcel; and the said reduction shall continue in respect of each such parcel for the same number of years as that for which payments as aforesaid were made in respect thereof, or until the total of the said annual reductions is equal to the total of the payments made as aforesaid, whichever is the shorter period.
6. From the 31st day of December, 1968, an amount at least sufficient to meet the annual estimated expenses of management, maintenance, and operation of the said municipal enterprise (less any amount assumed under Section 7) shall be raised by imposing an annual charge against the owners or occupiers of real property within the Municipality connected to the sewerage system, in accordance with the provisions of clause (c) of subsection (1) of Section 532 of the Municipal Act, and the amount so raised shall be applied, firstly, to meet the annual expenses of management, maintenance, and operation and, secondly, in retirement of the said debt.

7. (1) In the event the Corporation enters into an agreement or otherwise becomes obligated to pay any part of the costs of construction, operation, maintenance or use of joint sewerage facilities, such part, less any amount thereof that the Council of the Corporation determines shall be paid out of general revenues, shall be charged against the said municipal enterprise and shall be raised in the manner provided in Section 4.

7. (2) If, in the opinion of the engineer of the Corporation, the capacity of any part of the sewerage works, equipment, and facilities is in excess of that required to serve the area referred to in Section 3, or such area extended as hereinafter provided, such portion of the annual cost of the said municipal enterprise attributable to such excess capacity as the Council of the Corporation may determine, shall be paid out of the general revenues of the Corporation.

8. If in any year the total of the amounts levied pursuant to Sections 4, 6, and 7(1) are insufficient to meet the actual requirements in that year for the retirement of the debt of the said municipal enterprise and the interest theron and the expenses of management, maintenance, and operation of the said municipal enterprise, and the share of costs for which the said municipal enterprise is responsible under Section 7(1) the deficit shall be a charge on the general revenues of the municipality for that year.
9. From time to time the Council may extend by by-law, the boundaries of the area referred to in Section 3 and the provisions of subsection (1) of Section 618 of the Municipal Act shall apply mutatis mutandis.
10. The Council may, by by-law, with the approval of the Lieutenant-Governor in Council, establish the conditions under which the municipal enterprise will provide sewerage facilities within the area referred to in Section 3, or such area extended as hereinbefore provided.
11. Notwithstanding the provisions of Section 4 and 6, the cost of laying connecting pipes from sewers to land on which buildings or structures are situate shall be defrayed by the imposition of a connection charge under the provisions of Section 532 of the Municipal Act.
12. Section 253 of the Municipal Act applies to the said municipal enterprise as if a certificate of self-liquidation has been granted therefor.
13. This by-law may be cited for all purposes as the "Sewerage Consolidation and Enterprise Establishment By-Law, 1968."

Passed by the Municipal Council on the third day of September, 1968.

TAKE NOTICE that the above is a true copy of the proposed by-law upon which the vote of the owner-electors of the Municipality will be taken at the following polling places on the 28th day of September, 1968, between the hours of eight o'cock in the forenoon and eight o'clock in the afternoon and that the undersigned has been appointed Returning Officer for the purpose of taking and recording the vote of the owner-electors:

WEEK'S WORK

By JACK BEASTALL

Bulbs of hippeastrum (indoor amaryllis) can be started now by top dressing with leafsoil and a little balanced fertilizer. Use water sparingly until growth begins, and do not repot unless necessary.

Small rockery plants should be put into ground as early as possible. Trees and shrubs in October and November.

Tuberous begonias can be potted up if wanted for sunporch or cool greenhouse decoration.

If peonies must be moved, do it now. Choose a mainly sunny site (some afternoon shade is suitable), put in plenty of rotted compost, old manure and some bonemeal.

Give ample watering to grapes as they ripen, and weak feedings of liquid whale or alginure.

Take cuttings of black currants and gooseberries now with heel of old wood. Root outdoors in sandy trench.

Lettuce in coldframe for later use needs care in watering to avoid fungus diseases in cooler weather.

Imagination, Daring Hurdles 'Problem'

By PAULINE GRAVES

Almost everyone produces better results under restraint and restrictions than when he has none. Among the well knows "ifs" of architects is "if the client had a larger budget," yet when problems have to be overcome, of necessity the creative person becomes more imaginative and daring, which results in truly individual solutions.

A case in point is the house shown here, designed by Robert Newberry. As the floor plan developed, the best room arrangement put the laundry equipment in a room near the front entrance, with vents for the dryer.

To conceal the vents, a 17 inch wide strip of 1x2s spaced one inch apart was installed in the wall from the foundation to the roof. The symmetry of the narrow wooden strips provided a nice contrast to the random patterned rock wall.

In order to make the disguise look like part of an overall design, a second area of the narrow wooden strips was installed, and here the function is purely decorative, under a wide window.

For added interest, the striped wooden panel, 71 inches wide and 36 inches high, is recessed 8 inches from the face of the window to give the area depth, aided by the exterior stucco frames which extend eight inches from the wall.

The 5½ inch width of the vertical columns and the 4½ inches of the horizontal piece are important enough to compete for attention with the busy-ness of the rock pattern, and it gives the house a very nice architectural detail, pleasant to see.

275 Enrol In Crafts, Art Classes

Some 275 men and women, aged 65 and up, have enrolled for arts and crafts classes at Victoria Silver Threads Centre, opening Monday at 9:30 a.m.

Classes will include oil painting, copperwork, ceramics, leatherwork, millinery and carpentry.

"We still need instructors in basketry and toy stuffing," said Mrs. Eileen Ash, coordinator.

The centre's weekly variety concerts will be resumed Wednesday at 1:30 p.m. with Don Gray as master of ceremonies. There will be movies every Tuesday at 1:30 p.m. and old-time dances every Thursday at the same time.

The garden club will hold its fall show in the centre Wednesday from 1 p.m. to 4 p.m.

Tickets are still available for two trips to Vancouver on Sept. 26 and 30. Senior citizens may purchase tickets at the centre, 4 Centennial Square.

Saanich Silver Threads, corner of Harriet and Lurline, announces the following program for next week:

Monday, 2 p.m., cards and bridge lessons; Tuesday, 2 p.m., party to celebrate the branch's first birthday; Wednesday, 9:30 a.m., arts and crafts classes; 11:45 a.m., branch orchestra practice; 2 p.m., tea and talk; Thursday, 9:30 a.m., stamp club; 2 p.m., movies loaned by Victoria Public Library; Friday, 2 p.m., Jacko and cards.

Princess to Visit

CALGARY (CP) — Princess Margriet, Ottawa-born daughter of Queen Juliana and Prince Bernhard of The Netherlands, will arrive here with her husband Sept. 18 for a private visit.

An official of the Dutch Embassy in Ottawa said Friday the trip is strictly private and no information will be released.

Preparation Pays Dividends

By JACK BEASTALL

The greatest benefit to any crop (or plant) comes from work done before the crop is sown. That is an old maxim not often quoted in the present era of speed and short cuts, but it is as true today as when originally stated.

Jack

Since September and October are the main planting months in this part of Canada, a review of what is termed "good preparation" should help all of us.

The two main soil types on Southern Vancouver Island are clay and gravel.

●

Clay holds water, packs tightly so that air is excluded, and resembles concrete when it dries out. To loosen a clay soil sufficiently for cultivated plants to thrive requires the thorough mixing of humus (compost) with the basic clay.

Particularly important when planting trees and shrubs is the breaking up of the subsoil to a depth of approximately two feet.

This subsoil is not brought to the surface, but is broken into small lumps and mixed with half rotted, or coarse, compost to keep the lumps apart and increase the drainage.

The last two wet winters have taught us the wisdom of the extra work involved in improving drainage. Losses among the trees, shrubs, and cane fruits have been considerable, and the only answer is improved drainage.

●

Gravelly soils are opposite to clay soils. Gravel drains freely and provides drought conditions in summer. It is practically impossible to provide sufficient water during the dry season to maintain adequate growth on cultivated plants.

Strange as it seems, humus is again needed, this time to make a binder for the gravel so that moisture is retained in the root area of plants.

Unless gravel in underlaid with an impervious clay, there is no need to do more than add humus to a reasonable depth for the type of plants being grown.

Gardening involves making of holes in soil. There are two main types of holes used, namely post holes and planting holes.

●

A post hole is just large enough to admit the post. The main idea is not to disturb or loosen any more soil than necessary so that the post will remain firm and upright.

A planting hole involves disturbing an area at least three times as wide and twice as deep as the roots it is to receive.

Disturbing soil to this depth, plus the addition of humus for all plants, peat moss or seaforest with kelp for acid-loving plants, and sand where necessary to facilitate faster drainage, results in considerable settling or sinking of the prepared area in the weeks following preparation.

This can be detrimental to many plants. If a surface rooting plant sinks two or three inches its roots can be suffocated and the plant will not thrive.

●

A tree on a dwarfing rootstock sinking the same amount would permit the scion to root and overcome the dwarding effect of the rootstock.

Therefore all planting holes should be prepared two to three weeks before actual planting is done. This is work to do now in early September.

Bonemeal is the only fertilizer to incorporate with soil when planting in fall and since bones are mainly calcium (lime) very little, if any, should be used for plants which require an acid soil.

In fact, acid-type plants are best fed in early spring, that is with acid-type artificial fertilizers. At planting time, the peatmoss or seaforest with kelp is sufficient.

●

Trees, both fruiting and ornamental, that have been budded to a dwarfing rootstock to limit their height, must have the budding point (near base of trunk) kept from two to three inches above soil level.

All trees should be attached to a stout stake driven into the soil before tree is placed into planting hole.

Standard trees (those on their own roots or on non-dwarfing roots) and those on semi-dwarf rootstocks may have stakes removed after two years of growth in the garden, but those on true dwarf rootstocks must always be securely staked, because they are easily blown over in a strong wind.

●

Water is used when planting any tree or shrub. While, as most gardeners believe, the plants need water to prevent wilting after planting, the main purpose of adding water to a planting hole is to drive out air and wash particles of soil into close contact with invisible root hairs through which the plant obtains its food and moisture.

When these fine feeding hairs extend into a small air pocket in the soil they quickly shrivel and die, and that is the reason so many plants fail to get properly established.

●

The best tool for working soil closely around heavy roots is the gardener's fingers. Push the soil (which must be reasonably dry) closely around all roots, then when covered, pour in a pail full of water.

After this has drained away add more soil, press it firm with the feet, then a little more water. Finish the level with dry loose soil.

QUIZZING THE GARDENER

Q. Dahlias planted near cedar hedge facing west have leaves turning yellow this year and last. Is this due to lack of fertilizer, lack of water or of morning sun? Others six feet away are not affected. R. W., Vancouver 13, B.C.

A. As cedar hedge grows, it will affect a wider area of soil. Dahlias are now beginning to lack fertilizer (or rather soil fertility) and water; those six feet away are apparently not yet affected.

If you give more fertilizer and water to area close to hedge in order to grow plants there, hedge will grow more rapidly and still continue to rob the soil. This can easily affect a distance of 10 feet each side of a cedar hedge.

Q. Will my petunias bloom again next year? Mrs. P.T., Cobble Hill, B.C.

A. These are grown as annuals here. Discard this year, plant new ones next spring.

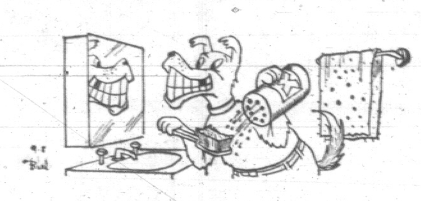
The Wonderful World of Animals



By DR. FRANK MILLER

DEAR DR. MILLER: What do you think of a neighbor who uses Brand X scouring powder, with bleach, to clean her dog's teeth! I thought she was making a poor joke when she told me she used it. But I actually saw her do it today! Her dog doesn't act sick. And I've got to admit I never saw a dog with whiter teeth . . . but?—J. McK.

DEAR J. McK.: This form of tooth powder is highly effective in removing tartar. But it is also quite effective in grinding away the enamel; though "soft" teeth wouldn't be the first problem to arise from using this dentifrice. It will cause severe gum irritation and with its continued use, the gums can be expected to recede rapidly. Tooth loss would occur as the roots are exposed and become infected.

★ ★ ★

DEAR DR. MILLER: Just a tip to our friends with feathered friends. We know many must have the same problem we did with our parakeet, Fizzle. He was the hippie type who wouldn't go near water except to drink some on rare occasions. We had despaired of EVER getting him to bathe when one day he accidentally dunked himself in a bowl with some milk in it. He loved it! Since then he takes a milk bath frequently and his feathers have taken on a beautiful sheen. So friends, if water doesn't work—try milk!

COMMENT: The major advantage to milk, from a bathing standpoint is its high moisture content. But there are additional advantages, including the protein and other nutrients, Fizzle is undoubtedly slurping up as he preens himself after each dip.

DEAR DR. MILLER: You may not believe this but I have actually witnessed my son hypnotizing Sparky, his pet rabbit! He stares into Sparky's eyes and speaks softly to him while stroking his belly. Shortly Sparky relaxes and goes into this trance even while his eyes remain open. He will remain this way for several minutes if left alone, wake up, blink a bit and hop about as though nothing had happened. Can you explain this?—M.V.

DEAR M.V.: I don't need to explain much. You've already done a good job. Sparky's stupor is indeed a state resembling hypnosis. Rabbits seem particularly susceptible to suggestion and may be placed in such a state for up to half-an-hour. As in the human field, such a trance may be used for medical purposes, since the patient becomes insensitive to pain during that period.

★ ★ ★

DEAR DR. MILLER: Awhile back my husband used some bug spray in the house. It was one big mistake. It killed the bugs, whatever they were, all three of them. But it also made the paint peel and stained the wallpaper. And it killed our goldfish. And it made the dog throw up on the rug. And now our bird is acting stupider than he usually does, and we wonder if this is from the spray, too?—L.N.B.

DEAR L.N.B.: It's true nonlethal doses of some insecticides may drastically affect learning ability. But it would take a local veterinarian to determine if your bird's brain is so affected.

FLASHBACK ON CANADA

Quebec's Capture Changed History

By BOB BOWMAN

This is the anniversary of Wolfe's capture of Quebec in 1759. He had been trying to break through since the beginning of July and this was a last-chance effort. The huge British force could not have stayed much longer and risked being frozen in for the winter.

The capture of Quebec was one of the most important battles in the history of the world and it is interesting to speculate what might have happened if Wolfe had been defeated. He probably would have failed if Montcalm's plans had not been thwarted by Governor Vaudreuil, and the crooked Intendant, Francois Bigot.

One possibility is that Canada would have been sold to the U.S. eventually. Napoleon did sell the remainder of French territory in North America to the U.S. in 1803 for $27,000,000. Of course the U.S. might still have been British territory if Canada had not been captured.

There are a number of theories about how Wolfe discovered the path up the cliff to the Plains of Abraham. The information may have come from a spy or traitor. However, it seems likely that the French gave away the secret by carelessness. Women were often seen doing laundry in the river a little above Quebec, so it was deduced that there must be a path up the cliff. This was confirmed, and Wolfe used the path to get his troops to the Plains of Abraham during the night in a commando-like operation.

Wolfe took a position at the head of the Louisburg Grenadiers at the right flank of the British line. He was hit twice during the charge, but kept on going until the fatal bullet entered his chest. He remained conscious until he learned that the French were retreating, and then he died.

Montcalm, also fatally wounded, was able to send a message to the British before his death. It is believed that he said of his troops and the Canadian people "Be their protector as I have been their father."

Other Events on September 13:

1710 Cadillac was appointed Governor of Louisianna
1756 Montcalm held council with Indians at Ticonderoga
1775 Benedict Arnold left Boston to capture Quebec
1842 Lafontaine refused to accept seat in Legislative Council
1864 Confederation delegates agreed to meet at Quebec in October
1886 C.P.R. telegraph began service
1893 Montreal Presbytery found Professor Campbell guilty of heresy
1915 Second Canadian Division arrived in France

Missing Word

Phrases now in common speech testify how widely persons have listened to, and perhaps been influenced by, certain men and women. Can you supply what's omitted here in a quotation from the past?

"——is tough. It will not break, like a bubble, at a touch; nay, you may kick it about all day, like a football, and it will be round and full at evening."—Holmes, Professor at the Breakfast Table.

In all honesty, we're sure you'll agree the author had a point. What five-letter word is missing?

Answer: The missing word is "Truth."

U.S. Trio to Orbit Moon By Yule if Test Successful

By EDWARD K. DELONG
UPI Space Writer

SPACE CENTRE, Houston (UPI) — Three Apollo spacemen may spend Christmas Day circling the moon, it was learned today.

Sources said within the past six weeks the space agency planners have created new blueprints to orbit the three-man crew around the moon at an altitude of some 70 miles. The astronauts would spend a full day in lunar orbit, possibly Christmas Day itself.

Plans call for astronauts Frank Borman, James Lovell and William Anders — the second Apollo crew — to circle the moon 10 times, reliable sources said. A landing attempt on this flight would be impossible because the Apollo moon landing craft will not fly with the crew.

●

A prime objective of the mission, sources said, is to photograph in black-and-white and in color the five sites for Apollo landings on the moon.

The earliest opportunity for US. spacemen actually to land at one of these sites is believed to be the fall of 1969.

Sources pointed out adoption of the December lunar orbit plan depends on the success of America's first manned Apollo, scheduled to fly next month..

If major problems develop on this maiden flight with men, called Apollo 7, it would force a switch to less ambitious plans for the second flight, sources said. Apollo 7 is scheduled to circle the earth up to 11 days, starting around Oct. 11.

Moonbound Lovell and Borman
. . . and William Anders makes three

●

The space agency's official position on the second manned Apollo, called Apollo 8, is that it will be a low earth orbit mission. Officially, the only difference between the first and second flights is that the second will be launched by a Saturn 5 moon rocket instead of the smaller Saturn 1.

It will be the first manned flight on Saturn 5.

The space agency announced its official version of Apollo 8, inserting it into the moonflight timetable as an extra flight, on Aug. 19. It said time-consuming problems with the moon lander had forced the change, placing the moon lander aboard the third flight instead of the second.

At the time he made this announcement, Apollo chief Lt.-Gen. Samuel Phillips said the Apollo 8 mission might be expanded if all goes well with Apollo 7.

He opened the door to a lunar orbit mission, calling it "a technically and operationally feasible possibility." But he said he was "in no position to speculate on the possibility itself or the probability."

●

Sources close to the space agency said flight planners have worked in high gear to create the lunar orbit plan, the prime flight plan unless something bad happens on Apollo 7.

They said, however, it still must be approved by space agency administrator James E. Webb. The most likely launch dates would run from Dec. 20-25.

The astronauts would ride into space from Cape Kennedy atop the 7.5-million-pound-thrust Saturn 5. Their trip out would last two and one-half days. If all went well, they would drop into orbit around the moon for 20-26 hours.

●

The lowest they might safely come, sources said, would be about eight miles from the moon in an egg-shaped orbit.

Sources said the astronauts' path around the moon would carry them over the five sites across the centre of the moon's face where Apollo spacemen plan to land.

Casualty Reports Curbed by Russia

New Ban Placed On Czech Press

PRAGUE (CP)—New censorship regulations that include a ban on reports of casualties from the Soviet bloc invasion were disclosed today.

But a top Czechoslovak Communist beat the new curbs.

Zdenek Mlynar, a party secretary and member of the ruling Communist presidium, told a nationwide television audience Friday night that "more than 70" Czechoslovaks died "under tragic circumstances" following the Aug. 20 Soviet-led invasion. Not a victim had "raised a weapon," he said.

Circulation of the new rules coincided with the Czechoslovak National Assembly's approval of a new press law Friday. Copies were received at editorial offices before Mlynar's television appearance, but it was understood they were not to take effect until today.

It was believed to have been the first time any party leader has publicly discussed the number of Czechoslovak casualties suffered during the invasion.

CLAIMS MISTAKES MADE

Mlynar also told the nation that Alexander Dubcek's reformist regime was guilty of political mistakes and naivete which probably led to the invasion.

"It should have never happened that somebody should have been given enough room to spit at everything we have done over the years," he declared.

He referred to anti-Soviet and anti-Communist criticism permited after Dubcek, Communist party chief, started Czechoslovakia's liberalization drive last January.

"We didn't win their confidence and they acted according to their evaluation of the situation" in ordering the invasion Aug. 20, Mlynar said, although he added that he disagreed with the decision to invade.

Mlynar is coming to be regarded as critical of Dubcek within the privacy of the party.

But it was not clear whether his speech was aimed at placating the Russians in an effort to get them to withdraw the occupation troops, or amounted to an argument that Dubcek doesn't understand Moscow's thinking and is on another collision course with the Russians.

TIMING SIGNIFICANT

It was considered significant that Mlynar's television speech came 24 hours after cancellation of a hard-hitting pre-taped TV speech by Dubcek. The Dubcek speech, toned down and broadcast several hours later than scheduled, deleted the party leader's statements that the return of press censorship was a backwad step and that anti-Communist forces were at work in other Communist countries besides Czechoslovakia.

Meanwhile, the National Assembly—defiant in the early days of the occupation—formally approved without debate legislation curbing press freedom and banning the establishment of new political parties, both actions demanded by Moscow.

Rhodesia Asks Talks With U.K.

SALISBURY (CP) — Rhodesian Premier Ian Smith said today he is prepared to resume talks with Britain on any "constructive and sincere" basis, but he is not very optimistic about reaching a settlement of the Anglo-Rhodesian constitutional deadlock.

But Britain must make the first moves to get the talks started again, Smith told a press conference the day after his government finally won full legal recognition from the highest court in Rhodesia.

"The ball is in their court," he said.

He was asked whether he would be ready to resume negotiations with Britain on the terms of the abortive talks of December, 1966. He replied: "I would be prepared to go to talks on any basis which I thought was constructive and sincere."

From London, The Associated Press reported the Commonwealth office commented in a statement that Britain also is "prepared for a constructive and sincere dialogue," but that Smith's statement "on the face of it . . . contains nothing new or different from what we have know to be his position . . ."

Smith and British Prime Minister Wilson reached a tentative settlement aboard the British naval cruiser Tiger in 1966, but it was turned down by Smith's government colleagues in Salisbury.

Rhodesia's top Court of Appeal Friday ruled that British courts had no legal authority over Rhodesia and that the constitution under which the colony declared its independence in 1965 was valid.

The white-minority regime of Smith declared independence from Britain rather than give majority rule to four million black Africans.

IMPOSED SANCTIONS

Subsequently first the Commonwealth and then the United Nations declared sanctions against Rhodesia in an attempt to force Smith to change.

Smith told a press conference if there was no settlement he does not doubt Rhodesia's ability to survive.

"The only question is how long the haul would have to be," he said.

"But we will not accept anything which is not in the interests of Rhodesia, and that is why we have no settlement so far."

Smith said he did not think the British government will be willing to negotiate on the basis of the first stage of the two-stage constitution approved at last weekend's ruling Rhodesian Front party congress.

Under the proposed constitution for the next five years blacks would have representation in newly-created provincial parliaments and the National Assembly. But after five years restrictions will make it difficult for most blacks to reach the National Assembly.

WIRE BRIEFS

Troops Advance

LAGOS (Reuters) — The Nigerian army today tightened its grip on breakaway Biafra with troops advancing on the major airfield of Uli - Ihiala and the refugee centre of Owerri.

Bomb Proves Dud

ISTANBUL (AP)—A manhunt was underway for a mysterious foreigner who delivered a package "believed to contain a bomb" to the Soviet consulate in Istanbul Friday, police reported today. The device did not go off.

Generals, Admiral Purged by Chinese

HONG KONG (AP) — The anti-Communist Hong Kong Times today named 45 Chinese army generals, an admiral and four political commissars which it said have been purged in the last year by Communist party Chairman Mao Tse-tung and Defence Minister Lin Piao.

Heading the list were Marshal Ho Lung and Senior Gen. Lo Jui Ching, two top-ranking men in China's military hierarchy before Mao's Cultural Revolution began.

Both had been previously reported purged by other sources.

Ho Lung was deputy chairman of the national military commission, China's highest military leadership body. Lo Jui Ching was secretary-general of the commission and also chief of the army general staff.

Also listed was Lt.-Gen. Hsiao Yu Yung, chief administrative officer of the commission who, according to previous reports reaching Hong Kong, had been accused of being one of the masterminds behind all an alleged plot to overthrow Mao.

Others on The Times list eigher held—or, if the report is not true, still may hold—important national or regional military posts.

The Chinese language Times said it had compiled the list from information gathered by its own sources inside China.

There was no way to confirm the report in Hong Kong, but if true it would mean that a sizeable segment of China's old-line military leadership had been wiped out.

U.S. SPYING, SAYS SOVIET

MOSCOW (UPI) — Russia said today U.S. planes have penetrated Czechoslovak air space to spy out positions of Soviet troops.

A Sunday supplement to the official Soviet foreign office publication Izvestia linked the U.S. and West Germany in espionage attempts along the Czechoslovakian frontier.

The illustrated supplement, Nedelya, printed what it called dispatches from correspondents in Czechoslozakia who visited the country's border with West Germany.

Allied Thrust Into DMZ Backed by Naval Guns

SAIGON (AP) —Southern allied forces, supported by tanks and naval gunfire, thrust into the southern half of the so-called demilitarized zone between the Vietnams Friday and reported killing 158 North Vietnamese soldiers in heavily-fortified positions.

Farther south, one of the U.S. Army's most decorated field generals, Maj.-Gen. Keith L. Ware, was killed when his command helicopter crashed in flames near the Cambodian border.

Southern casualties in the DMZ assault were four killed and 46 wounded, spokesmen said. All of the dead and about half the wounded were South Vietnamese. U.S. army and marine units participated in the attack.

Military spokesmen said the assault was a spoiling action designed to blunt an expected drive south by two North Vietnamese divisions. It also was meant to relieve Northern pressure on outposts in the northern provinces of South Vietnam.

The DMZ, which extends about three miles on each side of the border, was created at the Geneva Convention in 1954 to serve as a neutral buffer zone. But North Vietnamese troops have used it as a sanctuary for their troops menacing Southern allied outposts.

MARKS FOURTH DRIVE

Friday's assault was the fourth major drive into the South Vietnamese half of the zone, although there have been a number of reconnaissance patrols into the area.

The first announced Southern allied thrust into the zone came in May 1967, when U.S. marines moved in for five days.

The helicopter crash that killed Ware came as the general, commander of the U.S. 1st Infantry Division, was inspecting his troops. They chased Communist troops toward the Cambodian border following a two-day battle near Loc Ninh, a few miles east of the border.

It was not known whether the 'copter was brought down by Communist fire.

A military spokesman said Ware and seven others on board the craft were killed.

Only 1½ hours before Ware's helicopter crashed, his troops had been engaged in scattered fighting that swirled until darkness around Loc Ninh.

Ware, 52, who won the Medal of Honor, the United States' highest for gallantry, and the Silver Star during the Second World War, was the fifth U.S. general to die in the Vietnam war and the second Southern allied general killed in the last week. South Vietnamese Brig.-Gen. Truong Quang An, 35, was killed Sunday when gunners shot down his helicopter, also near the Cambodian border.

FORGIVEN and asked to come back as special adviser is Big Minh, Gen. Duong Van Minh who was sent into exile following overthrow of South Vietnamese President Diem in 1963.

New York's Market Rally Takes Turn for Worse

By PHILIP GREER

NEW YORK (WP) — The stock market's Indian summer rally ran into some opposition this week, but the profit-taking soon gave out and the list returned to the upside.

The downturn came at roughly the point where analysts expect a major technical test of the market's strength. The selling was considered normal, though, and the jury was still out on how far the rally might carry.

For the week, the Dow Jones industrial average lost 4.04 points to finish at 917.21. Standard and Poor's 500-stock composite was down .34 point to 100.86 and the New York Stock Exchange index gave up .13 point to 56.50.

The exchanges went back to the Wednesday closings — at least two more are yet to come — but trading volume still rose, to 51.01 million shares from the 44.84 million traded in the previous week.

When the market lost a session to the Labor Day holiday. Volume for the year crossed the 2 billion mark, more than a month earlier than in record-setting 1967.

WINNERS PREVAIL

The overall balance of power stayed with the winners, with 803 issues up on the week, while 729 fell. In the previous week, there were 1,062 winners and 462 losers. The number of new 1968 highs rose to 176 from 134 and new lows held even at 29.

The business news background was generally good. Unemployment fell back to the record 3.5 per cent rate reached earlier this year, thanks to the disappearance of summer workers.

The trading accent remained in blue-chip stocks and special situations, while the erstwhile glamor stocks stayed in their back seats. The bigger moves in the investment-grade stocks were on the downside, with Eastman Kodak dropping 4⅛ to 77⅛ and United Aircraft and U.S. Steel each off two points, to 61 and 39⅝. The drop in big steel spotlighted the weakness in the group, which is waiting for its customers to use up their strike-hedge inventories and start ordering again. Jones and Laughlin was off 2⅜ to 64⅝ and Republic was down 1⅝ to 42¼.

Auto companies reported jumping sales in the first ten days of the month, but the group had a spotty response. General Motors was up ⅝ to 82⅛, Chrysler climbed 1¼ to 68⅛, while American Motors lost ⅜ to 12¼ and Ford was down 1½ to 52⅜.

Price increases continued to swing through the chemical industry, but the stocks took little advantage. Union Carbide and Du Pont were both unchanged on the week, while Monsanto was up 1¾ to 52½.

Among the most heavily tradded stocks, the accent was still on the upside. Of the 20 most active issues, 11 were up, eight were down and unchanged Union Carbide was at the bottom of the list.

Martin Marietta led the list, adding 3⅝ to 28. Building stocks were strong — along with the savings and loans — on indications of an easing in the interest rate problem that has plagued the building industry. Along the same lines, Johns-Manville added 1⅝ to 74¼ despite heavy profit-taking on Friday.

In the savings and loans, Imperial Corp. of America led in activity and rose 2⅛ to 17⅞. Great Western Financial was ahead 1⅝ to 30, first charter added 3¼ to 41 to 41⅝ and Lytton Financial was up 1⅝ to 13½.

The biggest drop on the list came in Global Marine, which tumbled 9 points to 41⅞. The company announced it is ending its search for gold in Alaska, touching off a storm of trading on Thursday that had the stock tied up more than it traded.

On the upside — and also connected with Alaska — Atlantic-Richfield led the way with a 9⅞-point jump to 105¼. The company, along with Jeesey Standard, has a rich oil find on Alaska's northern slope.

Firms Make Uranium Deal

TOKYO (Reuters) — A group of nine Japanese electric power companies has approved a provisional contract concluded with Dennison Mines Ltd. of Canada for a joint development of uranium deposits in Colorado and British Columbia, a group spokesman said today.

The six-year contract with the Canadian firm was recently initialled by three major Japanese power firms on the behalf of the Japanese industry, the spokesman said.

The contract, retroactive to last month, provides for investments of $650,000 (U.S.) annually to be equally shared by the two parties.

A formal contract is expected to be signed soon, the spokesman said.

Bond Issue For Sale in U.S.

WINNIPEG (CP) — The Manitoba government says it plans to sell up to $50,000,000 worth of bonds in a public issue for distribution in the U.S.

Provincial treasurer Gurney Evans said the issue is to finance northern hydro-electric projects.

Stock Markets Surge to Peak

By GERALD CLARKSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Prices were up to a 2½-year peak on Canadian stock markets this week after an almost unbroken surge since Labor Day.

Western oils climbed to record levels Friday, while base metals were the only major group to escape the trend. Brokers were continually expecting a break in the rally after New York's poor day Tuesday, but mixed trading Wednesday and Thursday was followed by a sharp revival.

Among leading oils, Canadian Superior jumped 8¾ to 55, Dome Pete 7⅜ to 79½, Home A 3⅜ to 27½, Home B 4¼ to 29¼ and Worldwide Energy 3 to 8.50.

The most spectacular industrials were Ford of Canada, up 11⅛ to 273⅛, American Growth Fund Management, up 6 to 52, Wajax, up 5⅜ to 32, Tamblyn, up 4¾ to 45¾ and Security Capital B, up $2.50 to $5.50.

The strongest industrial groups were beverages, banks, food processors, steels, communications, pipelines, utilities and construction stocks.

Trading volume was exceptionally heavy, and perhaps the major indicator of the 1968 trend on Canadian markets is the record turnover in industrial shares at Toronto.

RECORD VOLUME

Industrial volume on Canada's largest exchange ran at a daily average of 1.5 million shares, which is almost three times last year's level: The previous week's average was 1.4 million shares.

Brokers say this is mainly due to institutional trading and to the sharply increased popularity of Canadian industrials with fund managers both at home and abroad.

Specualtion in junior industrials has been an equally prominent feature, but analysts say the old emphasis on penny mining and oil stocks, trading under $2 has almost certainly vanished forever.

The market nevertheless remains a dangerous place. Bongard, Leslie and Co., brokers with membership at all Canadian exchanges, point out the pitfalls of the junior industrial sector in their September investment letter.

"For several months now the average investor has demonstrated an unusual propensity to speculate. He has abandoned, or at least become more aloof to, many of the traditional blue chip investments."

Commenting on Seaway Hotels, a typical example which has risen to around $20 from $4.80, the letter says this is "an embryo hotel chain which is losing money. The stock is subject to more rumors than any five 'go-go' stocks in the market."

While it has a "broad and loyal market following, there is just too much passion connected with this one for us to cope with it for the time being."

Trading in Great West Saddlery, the year's fastest climbing stock, resumed this week after a lengthy suspension requested by the company to kill speculation.

After opening Tuesday at a record 19½, the price gradually slipped back to 15½, which was up 2⅝ from its level July 8 when it was suspended.

Great West, an apparently dead investment, was trading as low as 46 cents in March when it suddenly shot into the sky after being taken over by Edward and Peter Bronfman of Montreal.

Analysts say the takeover was a stroke of the purest luck for former shareholder, and the company has now become a vehicle in the Bronfmans' complex program of corporate expansion.

The over-all rise among junior industrials is being charted by brokers J. H. Crang and Co., who are producing a "go-go index" of 77 representative stocks.

This index shows that the group has done more than four times as well as the 152 stocks which make up the Toronto industrial index since the end of March. It includes many recent listings and the surging real estate leaders.

PUZZLING FUTURE

Commenting on the current situation, another broker says there is "too much speculation in Canada and care should be exercised."

"Real estate stocks, in particular, should be carefully judged; in many cases expectations cannot be independently assessed and there is a great deal of latitude exercised in the accounting of the earnings of this group."

Laurentide Plans Structure Change

VANCOUVER (CP) — M. L. Goeglein, president of Laurentide Financial Corporation Ltd., announced Friday the company plans to ask shareholders' approval for changes in the company's capital structure that he believes will help in marketing future debt issues.

Mr. Goeglein said in a statement that approval of the proposals would simplify Laurentide's capital structure and permit resumption of dividend payments at an earlier date than would otherwise be possible.

He said the proposals will be presented to shareholders at the company's annual meeting here Oct. 4.

Mr. Goeglein said the Vancouver-based finance company has made considerable progress in getting out of the financial woods

NO DIVIDENDS

Because major losses wiped out the company's surplus and left it in a deficit position, Laurentide has been unable to pay dividends on any of its various classes of shares, said Mr. Goeglein.

"The preferred share dividends are cumulative in each case and dividend arrears accruing on these shares will total $4,011,000 at Sept. 30."

There are also arrearages in payment of sinking and purchase funds, of about $1,000,000.

"The company's total dividend, sinking fund and purchase fund requirements to service preferred shares outstanding amount to approximately $2,900,000 annually, which is substantial in relation to current earnings for the fiscal year just completed of $2,100,000, he said.

In consequence, a prime objective of the proposed capital changes is to reduce preferred share servicing required to a level more readily covered from the existing sources of business.

The essentials of the proposal are to eliminate the present $500,000 annual dividend requirement on subordinated preferred shares while paying out dividends on five other series of preferred.

Sinking and purchase fund requirements would be delayed until July 1, 1970, on three series and until July 1, 1975, on secondary preferred.

U.S. Firm Expects Lead In Oil Sands

CALGARY (CP) — President William Mitchell of Coronado Oil Co. predicts his Denver-based firm will be the leader in northeastern Alberta's Cold Lake oil sands production race by an increasing margin after Dec. 1, when two new experimental steam-injection projects are scheduled to start.

On that date, Mr. Mitchell said, five custom-built steam generators, now being installed at Grand Centre and Rat Lake, about 140 miles northeast of Edmonton, will begin pumping.

The projects are the first ever to be designed with the aid of a computer program, which produced figures indicating optimum size, well space and steam-injection rates.

Mr. Mitchell said the larger of the projects will put Coronado's Cold Lake heavy-oil program on a virtually commercial footing.

When further experiment has established the exact economic margins to be worked up with up to the well head, Coronado will be ready to design a full-scale commercial project.

Coronado has a technological lead over other companies because it began steam injection work in California in 1962.

Mr. Mitchell said the key to Coronado's plans for Cold Lake is the development of two methods of treating heavy oil so that it will flow and can thus be moved to market by conventional means.

He said his company's program is based entirely on being able to market Cold Lake oil in its natural state, without complications such as those created by the prorationing system or new market sections of Alberta's oil sands development policy.

B.C. Forest Products

A $2.5 million expansion at the British Columbia Forest Products Ltd. Mackenzie sawmill was announced Friday by the firm's president Ian A. Barclay.

He said expansion of the mill, located about 125 miles north of Prince George, will increase lumber production by 40 million board feet to 120 million annually.

Anti-Pollution Plan Claimed For New Marina

Developers of a proposed apartment-marina complex on Shoal Harbor at the tip of Saanich Peninsula say the property owners' association proteting the plan is "ignorant of the facts . . . or misinformed."

In a letter today to the eastern district, North Saanich Property Owners Association, the developers call for "more enlightenment before condemnation."

Earlier the association urged the government to reject an application by Victorian Albert Yuen for a foreshore lease to allow another marina, in the basin, also known as Tsehum Harbor, because it would add to pollution.

It is obvious "there is a saturation point in the number of marinas that should be permitted in any one body of water," an association spokesman said.

Mr. Yuen has an option to purchase the five-acre property from Northumbria Investments Ltd., a local firm whose members include Mr. and Mrs. Chet Levar, the property owners, and John Elliott.

Mr. Elliott said the owners' association raised their objections without knowing that the marina was planned within new commercial waterfront and yacht club specifications proposed by the capital region planning commission.

Aim of the specifications is to avoid pollution, he said.

Mrs. Levar said of the association's objection: "When you don't want a bay polluted, you don't work against the developer, you work with him.

"And they have never contacted him."

Mrs. Levar said she and her husband will move from the property where they have lived for 27 years when Mr. Yuen picks up the option for his $1.5 million project. She said Northumbria Investments will have no further interests in the development.

NO OBJECTIONS

An application to Sidney council to rezone the property for the development was made April 19, 1968. Mrs. Levar said no objections were raised. Rezoning was approved July 25.

Maj. D. A. Petrie, owners' association secretary, said the association has no quarrel with the construction of three apartment buildings on the site.

"The harbor is polluted," he said, and the association objects only to the planned marina.

Mrs. Levar said the marina would serve apartment tenants and the general public.

FIRE COSTS AT $692,700

Fire hazards throughout British Columbia forests were reported as low today by the provincial forest service.

Suppression costs totalling $692,700 are estimated for the 1,630 fires reported so far this season, the service said.

"For the corresponding period in 1967, the most expensive fire year on record, 2,987 fires were recorded with costs totalling $5,960,900," the service said.

Site of $4 Million Proposal Near Gordon Head High School

The location for a $4 million townhouse apartment project in Saanich is near Gordon Head High School, it was learned today.

The site, covering 16 acres, is between Gordon Head Road and Larchwood Drive north of the school. The project, which would provide 120 units in the initial $2 million phase, was announced last Tuesday.

The rezoning application will be considered by Saanich officials first before going to the Advisory Planning Commission and council. It is expected to be some time before this process is completed.

New Leader Takes Over Royal Roads

A Royal Roads Military College graduate returned this week as commandant of his former school.

Colonel K. E. Lewis, CD, took over command of the armed forces college from his predecessor, Colonel D. B. Wurtele, who retires after more than 30 years of service.

Col. Lewis, 39, graduated from the school in 1949 to join the Royal Canadian Air Force. He has flown more than a dozen different kinds of aircraft in his career, including the Starfighter, Mustand, Vampire and Sabre.

He has had three tours of duty in Europe: as flight commander with 4 Wing Germany in 1954-55; Later with 1 Air Division France; and from 1960-64 as Squadron Commnader of 3 Wing Germany.

WITH AIR CADETS

Col. Lewis later served as air cadets liaison officer at Forces Headquarters in Ottawa and from August 1966 to August 1968 with 3 Wing Germany again.

Col. Wurtele, who retires to Ottawa with his wife and three children, was commandant of the school for three years.

He also had RCAF experience with the experimental and proving establishment and took degrees in aeronautical engineering at the University of Toronto and London University. He served in France for more than four years.

Four amateur photographers from Victoria have a chance at more than $200 in prize-money in the Newspaper National Snapshot contest.

They were overall winners in the Times photographic contest during July and August. Their entries will be sent to the national contest for judging along with entries from the rest of Canada.

Winners from the national contest will go still further to the North American judging for a chance at prizes totalling $50,000.

Photographers topping the entries here were Mrs. G. W. Schwab, of 3034 Doncaster Drive; Ivor Alexander, of 1016 Queens Ave.; Henry Szmuniewski, of 3956 Interurban Road, and K. H. Stofer, of 1619 Christmas Ave.

Mrs. Schwab, a clerk at the Veterans' Hospital, had been taking pictures for about 30 years. Her snap of a cat clinging to the branches of a tree-top was considered one of the four best entries by judges Bill Halkett, Times staff photographer, and Mrs. Audrey St. Johnson, theatre critic.

ANOTHER PUSS

Ivor Alexander, a 26-year-old student, caught a kitten peeking out of a briefcase while crouching inside it. He had only been taking pictures for about six months before he entered the contest.

Provincial government employee Henry Szmuniewski, 52, called upon more than 35 years' experience at photography to take his winning shot of wild oats and logs on a beach. He always carried his camera with him and took the picture while on an early-morning fishing trip.

A snap showing a small boy peeking mischeivously through chubby fingers earned a place in the national contest for Post Office public relations officer Ken Stofer. Aged 48, he had been taking pictures for about 15 years.

Each of the four finalists will now have a chance to win a $200 best-of-show prize and one of seven $100 Canadian special merit awards.

Winning snapshots from the Canadian contest then go on to the North American judging, which offers of expence-paid trips to South America, Mexico, Hawaii and the West Indies.

Pat Bay Freeway Out For at Least Five Years

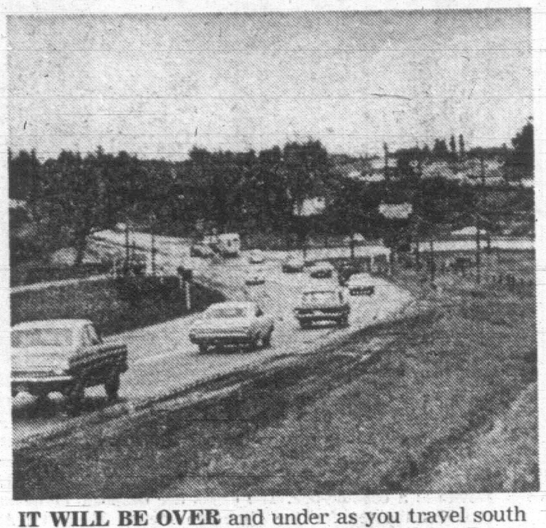
By JOHN MIKA



IT WILL BE OVER and under as you travel south on the Pat Bay Highway at Royal Oak. Ramp will be built over Royal Oak Avenue-West Saanich Road link shown here, and cross traffic will pass underneath. And a short distance further south a second ramp will be built over the highway, taking traffic from Quadra Street to West Saanich Road spur. (Times Photo)

Highways Minister Wesley Black Friday afternoon released details of a $5 million plan to widen Patricia Bay Highway's existing route by the spring of 1970 with vehement assurances it will only "be an interim measure" and not kill intentions to build a new turnpike.

"I want to be 1,000 per cent honest with the people we're dealing with — that is the press and John Q Public," he said.

"The key word in this is that it is purely an interim measure.

"I want to give people the assurance that we will continue to study a new route and this is an interim measure only but we have to move quickly to meet the congestion now."

Mr. Black said the widening program—will which include elevated ramps at Quadra and West Saanich Road junctions but not at Weiler Road as requested by Sidney — should relieve pressure on the present route "for at least five years."

He said a completely new highway would still be worth building even after the new investment in the existing road because traffic volumes, are rising about 10 per cent annually.

Wide Division Eventually

With two roads provided eventually, each route could be made into a one-way artery with the consequent loop divided by a wide stretch of countryside, he suggested.

Mr. Black added that he "had no choice" but to order the widening instead of the new highway now because traffic volumes have reached up to 22,000 vehicles a day on stretches of the present road and a crash-program was needed.

He said a new route would have required at least six months just to buy right-of-way before construction could begin so it was impracticable because of the resulting delay.

Work will begin on some parts of the widening within a few days but all the work likely won't be finished until about the spring of 1970.

The project has been divided into five sections with some of the design work still to be done.

The first section involves the junction of the Trans-Canada Highway and Douglas up to Carey Road.

Mr. Black said the department has several plans it is considering for "siphoning off" some of the Trans-Canada traffic before it reaches Douglas and also aligning the Pat Bay Highway entrance better in relation to urban traffic.

But he said he was not ready — and may not be until next spring — to make any announcements about the first section.

Day Labor for Inner Stretch

The second section, running about 1¾ miles from Carey Road to Broadmede subdivision (south of the golf driving range on the Pat Bay Highway) will be widened to four lanes by the highways department itself using day labor.

The third section, from Broadmede to Viewmont Road opposite Royal Oak Cemetery, will be put to a tender call for bids by contractors "in about six to eight weeks", Mr. Black said.

This 1½-mile section will be widened to four lanes by the contractor with two overhead ramps to be built to eliminate Royal Oak and Quadra cross traffic. The first ramp will span the highway carrying Quadra Street over to the high west side of the main road where a short connecting stretch, parallelling the highway, will be built to West Saanich Road.

The second ramp will carry the highway itself over the natural gully formed by West Saanich-Royal Oak roads.

A departmental engineer said ramps will take advantage of the present contours so that the sudden rise of Quadra before its junction with the highway will be continued into an over pass while highway traffic would continue on a horizontal plane over West Saanich-Royal Oak instead of dipping down into the gully.

Mr. Black said there would be interconnection provided at the ramps so traffic could move from the local roads onto the highway and back but design work has not been completed so no artist sketches are available. To illustrate the plan.

The fourth highway section will be the five-mile stretch between Viewmont Road in Saanich and Telegraph Road in Central Saanich. It also will be done by highway department day labor crews.

Two Southbound Lanes

This work will add one complete lane to the existing stretches of alternate two and three lanes resulting in two continuous southbound lanes to handle the city-bound ferry traffic which has caused traffic problems because of its "platooning" pattern.

The present stretches of one lane alternated with two will remain and these will be used for northbound traffic.

The fifth highway section, totalling 6.8 miles, will stretch from Telegraph Road to Ardwell Road, linking up with the Ardwell Road-Swartz Bay stretch which was widened to four lanes two years ago.

This section also will be put to tender in about two months. For complete widening to four lanes.

Asked if this stretch would include the over-pass requested by Sidney council to eliminate hazards for school children and cars trying to cross the highway at Weiler Road, Mr. Black said:

"At the moment the answer is no — but remember this proect is an interim measure."

Mr. Black said tbe two day-labor stretches would be started immediately and likely would be completed before next summer.

The contract stretches probably would be completed about the end of next year or the spring of 1970.

Throughout the construction period, traffic will continue to use the present highway as widening would begin with grading then paving of existing shoulders.

Mr. Black said some temporary slowing down with the use of flag-men could occur occasionally as the work proceeds but detouring of traffic onto side roads is not contemplated.

IT'S GOOD NEWS SAY AREA MAYORS

The mayors of three municipalities today welcomed news of the provincial government's widening of Patricia Bay Highway to four lanes.

"If the road is going to be improved this is good news for Saanich because we are so dependent on it and it has such an effect on our development," said Saanich Mayor Hugh Curtis.

"We would expect the highways department to make it clear that the ultimate freeway route is fixed so planning can continue. I am particularly happy about the Quadra-Royal Oak changes because this is a very serious problem stretch."

While he wished it was the final freeway with a park-way development," we recognize that the dollars are not as plentiful as the need."

He pointed out that Saanich will soon start work on improvements to Quadra just north of McKenzie Avenue and it was hoped to "take another bite" next year depending on secondary highway grants.

Victoria Mayor Hugh Stephen welcomed the news "very much indeed" because Pat Bay has become dangerous.

He would have liked to see a join-up with the Rose-Blanshard reconstruction which will take this road, as a divided highway, from Tolmie to Pandora.

Central Saanich Mayor Gordon Lee said his municipality, "welcomes any improvements."

He said police are constantly on the alert with traffic accidents and the situation is of considerable danger.

"The improvement to Pat Bay will go a long way towards making this a much safer throughway for the future," he said.

Eagle Eye Needed to Keep Heritage at Home As Totem Pole Pirates Seek Wooden Gold

By JOHN SLINGER

For art dealers and private collectors, particularly in the United States and abroad, authentic, primitive Canadian-Indian totem poles mean big money.

But getting the poles and other carved relics is strictly a hook-or-by-crook proposition.

Without written consent from the Indian affairs minister, no one can legally get hold of so much as a sliver from a reserve.

Nevertheless, totem poles, carved grave posts and other bits of bric-a-brac do skitter mysteriously across our borders to show up in the homes of art collectors.

"You always hear myths of American yachts heading south with totem poles stacked on their decks," said Wilson Duff, a UBC anthropologist.

A magistrate in the Queen Charlotte Islands dismissed charges against three Americans Wednesday after RCMP confiscated a number of ancient Haida carvings from a chartered boat.

Throughout the province, professional and amateur archaeologists and anthropologists, interviewed by telephone, expressed surprise that the charges were dismissed.

They were, however, pleased the baby was not thrown out with the bathwater.

Magistrate Jack Fraser of Sandspit, after dismissing the charges on grounds of intent, ordered the artificats turned over to the chief and council of Skidegate village to be returned to their original site or sent to the National Museum in Ottawa.

●

Don Abott, a provincial museum anthropologist in Victoria, said preservable poles and mortuary markers historically significant to B.C. can be numberd only in the dozens.

"They are definitely limited," he said.

Polly Sargent of Hazelton, president of the Skeena Totem Pole Restoration Society, said valuable pieces have been stolen from villages while preservation work was going on.

In nine years, the society has spent some $20,000 to preserve about 30 poles at two Skeena villages. Another 30 in three other villages remain to be done.

Mrs. Sargent said reports of poles being carried off have come to her twice, but too late.

●

In one instance the culprits waved a bill of sale from an Indian band member under the noses of the authorities then left in a cloud of dust before it could be impressed upon the authorities that an Indian band member can't sell a reserve totem pole, she said.

Section 90 of the Indian Act also prohibits sale or removal from the reserve of grave houses, grave poles, carved house posts and painted or carved rocks.

The prohibition "does not apply to chattels . . . that are manufactured for sale by Indians."

Hence, examples of carved Indian art offered for sale as "authentic relics" can generally be considered suspect.

Uvic's Dr. Donald H. Mitchell, a member of the provincial archaeological sites advisory board, said, "we all want to see stronger measures for protection of these things."

Support was needed to bring better administration and policing of the Act.

Ron Sutherland of Vancouver, B.C. Archaeological Soceity president, said legislation should be passed to prevent export of any Canadian historic or archaeological object.

Such laws now apply in many European and South American countries, he said, and the society is working to see what might be done in Canada.

●

At the annual meeting of the Native Sons of B.C., the society suggested a resolution be drafted protesting removal of these objects, not just from Canada, but from the province.

Even if they are kept within the borders, there are arguments whether the carvings should be preserved in museums or left in their native settings.

Hillary Stewart, a society member from Vancouver, spent June travelling through the Queen Charlottes, and said most of the "salvageable poles" have already been taken to museums.

Miss Stewart said the remnants are "still very beautiful standing there, even in their decay." They should be left alone for anyone who troubles to go and see them.

"They just lose their beauty in a museum."

●

Prevention of decay is the main reason carvings are placed in the controlled environment of museums.

In fact, Dr. Duff said the problem of illegal removal "has almost been overcome by the ravages of time."

Totems left, mostly in abandoned villages, have fallen over, broken and begun to rot.

The last major collection in the province was a number of years ago, but new techniques and chemicals have made it possible to keep carvings once thought lost.

●

Discussions now are going on between the province, UBC, the Vancouver Centennial Museum and the Indian Affairs Branch that might lead to a new collection effort in 1969, Dr. Duff said.

In any event, consensus is that something must be done to regulate collection and preservation and to keep private marketeers out.

R. A. Cragg, factor of the Kamloops museum, said museums must act as "watchdogs" and border officials should be primed to notify museums whenever objects of archaeological interest cross.

Usually, when outsiders are digging in B.C. "all we get to see are the holes," he said.

"And if they're big holes, we know they got something."

DECAYING TOTEM POLES, almost disappearing into the forest, stand in abandoned Haida village on Anthony Island in the Queen Charlottes. To protect the poles, which were not on reserve lands and so open to plunderers, Anthony Island was made into a provincial park. New preservation methods might enable provincial anthropologists to prevent further deterioration of these and other poles scattered through the area.

Ask The Times

Q. Is there a spectacular meteor shower due within a year? If so, how could one best view it? C.B.

A. According to the Dominion Astrophysical Observatory, there are five spectacular "showers" every year. These occur at the same time each year. Starting from October, the showers are: Orionids, Oct. 20; Leonids, Nov. 16; Geminids, Dec. 13; Quadrantids, Jan. 3; Perseids, Aug. 11. Each of the showers named will produce an hourly meteor rate between 25 and 50, peaking in some cases to as many as 200. Dates given are, in each case, the middle date in a four-day shower period. The naked eye is the best instrument with which to view a shower. Ocular aids—binoculars, telescopes—are of little use since the entire sky must be watched.

8 CARD OF THANKS

We wish to extend our heartfelt thanks for the many acts of kindness, messages and cards of sympathy, and floral offerings received in the sad loss of our daughter and son, Janice and Pat Graydon. Special thanks to the pallbearers, Rev. Foster and Sands Funeral Chapel of Heather.—Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Schmidt and family, Mr. and Mrs. P. J. Graydon and Terry.

9 IN MEMORIAM

T. FRANK ROGERS — Who passed away Sept. 15, 1967.

Oh what would I give to clasp his hand,
His dear kind face to see,
To hear his voice, to see his smile,
That meant so much to me,
His spirit has fled his suffering O'er,
At our gatherings he will join us no more.
Ever remembered by his loving wife, Marjorie, his family, brothers and sisters.

At one table, the Twin City pair reached seven spades. The Montreal West was too smart to double. Had he done so, chances are his opponents would run out to seven notrump, which makes easily because the club finesse will work.

At the other table, Montreal reached seven diamonds on the bidding shown in the box. South's five no-trump bid was the grand slam force. Ely Culbertson invented this bid back in the '30s but it was too sophisticated for those early days. It disappeared into limbo for almost 30 years but has been brought back by today's experts.

In this particular spot it said, "Partner, bid seven if you hold two of the three top honors in trumps." North did and obliged.

East's double of seven diamonds was another old-time gadget. The Lightner slam double called for an unusual lead against an adverse slam.

If either North or South had run to seven no-trump, East would have been sorry for his double. He was sorry anyway when his partner led a heart. South ruffed in his hand, ran off all his trumps, cashed his ace, king and Queen of spades, entered dummy with the king of clubs, discarded his last two spades on the ace and king of hearts and led the five of clubs. East had been forced to unguard his queen of clubs in order to keep a high heart, and Montreal picked up 21 International Match Points on this one hand.

West's decision to lead a heart was unfortunate and we feel that he should have led the spade and given his partner a ruff. He was looking at six spades and might well have visualized his partner with none at all.

U.S. Trio to Orbit Moon By Yule if Test Successful

By EDWARD K. DELONG
UPI Space Writer

SPACE CENTRE, Houston (UPI) — Three Apollo spacemen may spend Christmas Day circling the moon, it was learned today.

Sources said within the past six weeks the space agency planners have created new blueprints to orbit the three-man crew around the moon at an altitude of some 70 miles. The astronauts would spend a full day in lunar orbit, possibly Christmas Day itself.

Plans call for astronauts Frank Borman, James Lovell and William Anders — the second Apollo crew — to circle the moon 10 times, reliable sources said. A landing attempt on this flight would be impossible because the Apollo moon landing craft will not fly with the crew.

●

A prime objective of the mission, sources said, is to photograph in black-and-white and in color the five sites for Apollo landings on the moon.

The earliest opportunity for U.S. spacemen actually to land at one of these sites is believed to be the fall of 1969.

Sources pointed out adoption of the December lunar orbit plan depends on the success of America's first manned Apollo, scheduled to fly next month..

Moonbound Lovell and Borman
. . . and William Anders makes three

If major problems develop on this maiden flight with men, called Apollo 7, it would force a switch to less ambitious plans for the second flight, sources said. Apollo 7 is scheduled to circle the earth up to 11 days, starting around Oct. 11.

●

The space agency's official position on the second manned Apollo, called Apollo 8, is that it will be a low earth orbit mission. Officially, the only difference between the first and second flights is that the second will be launched by a Saturn 5 moon rocket instead of the smaller Saturn 1.

It will be the first manned flight on Saturn 5.

The space agency announced its official version of Apollo 8, inserting it into the moonflight timetable as an extra flight. It said time-consuming problems with the moon lander had forced the change, placing the moon lander aboard the third flight instead of the second.

At the time he made this announcement, Apollo chief Lt.-Gen. Samuel Phillips said the Apollo 8 mission might be expanded if all goes well with Apollo 7.

He opened the door to a lunar orbit mission, calling it "a technically and operationally feasible possibility." But he said he was "in no position to speculate on the possibility itself or the probability."

●

Sources close to the space agency said flight planners have worked in high gear to create the lunar orbit plan, the prime flight plan unless something bad happens on Apollo 7.

They said, however, it still must be approved by space agency administrator James E. Webb. The most likely launch dates would run from Dec. 20-25.

The astronauts would ride into space from Cape Kennedy atop the 7.5-million-pound-thrust Saturn 5. Their trip out would last two and one-half days. If all went well, they would drop into orbit around the moon for 20-26 hours.

●

The lowest they might safely come, sources said, would be about eight miles from the moon in an egg-shaped orbit.

Sources said the astronauts' path around the moon would carry them over the five sites across the centre of the moon's face where Apollo spacemen plan to land.

Allied Thrust Into DMZ Backed by Naval Guns

SAIGON (AP) —Southern allied forces, supported by tanks and naval gunfire, thrust into the southern half of the so-called demilitarized zone between the Vietnams Friday and reported killing 158 North Vietnamese soldiers in heavily-fortified positions.

Farther south, one of the U.S. Army's most decorated field generals, Maj.-Gen. Keith L. Ware, was killed when his command helicopter crashed in flames near the Cambodian border.

Southern casualties in the DMZ assault were four killed and 46 wounded, spokesmen said. All of the dead and about half the wounded were South Vietnamese. U.S. army and marine units participated in the attack.

Military spokesmen said the assault was a spoiling action designed to blunt an expected drive south by two North Vietnamese divisions. It also was meant to relieve Northern pressure on outposts in the northern provinces of South Vietnam.

The DMZ, which extends about three miles on each side of the border, was created at the Geneva Convention in 1954 to serve as a neutral buffer zone. But North Vietnamese troops have used it as a sanctuary for their troops menacing Southern allied outposts.

MARKS FOURTH DRIVE

Friday's assault was the fourth major drive into the South Vietnamese half of the zone, although there have been a number of reconnaissance patrols into the area.

The first announced Southern allied thrust into the zone came in May 1967, when U.S. marines moved in for five days.

The helicopter crash that killed Ware came as the general, commander of the U.S. 1st Infantry Division, was inspecting his troops. They chased Communist troops toward the Cambodian border following a two-day battle near Loc Ninh, a few miles east of the border.

It was not known whether the 'copter was brought down by Communist fire.

A military spokesman said Ware and seven others on board the craft were killed.

Only 1½ hours before Ware's helicopter crashed, his troops had been engaged in scattered fighting that swirled until darkness around Loc Ninh.

Ware, 52, who won the Medal of Honor, the United States' highest for gallantry, and the Silver Star during the Second World War, was the fifth U.S. general to die in the Vietnam war and the second Southern allied general killed in the last week. South Vietnamese Brig.-Gen. Truong Quang An, 35, was killed Sunday when gunners shot down his helicopter, also near the Cambodian border.

FORGIVEN and asked to come back as special adviser is Big Minh, Gen. Duong Van Minh, who was sent into exile following overthrow of South Vietnamese President Diem in 1963.

Casualty Reports Curbed by Russia

Rhodesia Asks Talks With U.K.

SALISBURY (CP) — Rhodesian Premier Ian Smith said today he is prepared to resume talks with Britain on any "constructive and sincere" basis, but he is not very optimistic about reaching a settlement of the Anglo-Rhodesian constitutional deadlock.

But Britain must make the first moves to get the talks started again, Smith told a press conference the day after his government finally won full legal recognition from the highest court in Rhodesia.

"The ball is in their court," he said.

He was asked whether he would be ready to resume negotiations with Britain on the terms of the abortive talks of December, 1966. He replied: "I would be prepared to go to talks on any basis which I thought was constructive and sincere."

From London, The Associated Press reported the Commonwealth office commented in a statement that Britain also is "prepared for a constructive and sincere dialogue," but that Smith's statement "on the face of it . . . contains nothing new or different from what we have know to be his position . . ."

Smith and British Prime Minister Wilson reached a tentative settlement aboard the British naval cruiser Tiger in 1966, but it was turned down by Smith's government colleagues in Salisbury.

Rhodesia's top Court of Appeal Friday ruled that British courts had no legal authority over Rhodesia and that the constitution under which the colony declared its independence in 1965 was valid.

The white-minority regime of Smith declared independence from Britain rather than give majority rule to four million black Africans.

IMPOSED SANCTIONS

Subsequently first the Commonwealth and then the United Nations declared sanctions against Rhodesia in an attempt to force Smith to change.

Smith told a press conference if there was no settlement he does not doubt Rhodesia's ability to survive.

"The only question is how long the haul would have to be," he said.

"But we will not accept anything which is not in the interests of Rhodesia, and that is why we have no settlement so far."

Smith said he did not think the British government will be willing to negotiate on the basis of the first stage of the two-stage constitution approved at last weekend's ruling Rhodesian Front party congress.

Under the proposed constitution for the next five years blacks would have representation in newly-created provincial parliaments and the National Assembly. But after five years restrictions will make it difficult for most blacks to reach the National Assembly.

New Ban Placed On Czech Press

PRAGUE (CP)—New censorship regulations that include a ban on reports of casualties from the Soviet bloc invasion were disclosed today.

But a top Czechoslovak Communist beat the new curbs.

Zdenek Mlynar, a party secretary and member of the ruling Communist presidium, told a nationwide television audience Friday night that "more than 70" Czechoslovaks died "under tragic circumstances" following the Aug. 20 Soviet-led invasion. Not a victim had "raised a weapon," he said.

Circulation of the new rules coincided with the Czechoslovak National Assembly's approval of a new press law Friday. Copies were received at editorial offices before Mlynar's television appearance, but it was understood they were not to take effect until today.

It was believed to have been the first time any party leader has publicly discussed the number of Czechoslovak casualties suffered during the invasion.

CLAIMS MISTAKES MADE

Mlynar also told the nation that Alexander Dubcek's reformist regime was guilty of political mistakes and naivete which probably led to the invasion.

"It should have never happened that somebody should have been given enough room to spit at everything we have done over the years," he declared.

He referred to anti-Soviet and anti-Communist criticism permited after Dubcek, Communist party chief, started Czechoslovakia's liberalization drive last January.

"We didn't win their confidence and they acted according to their evaluation of the situation" in ordering the invasion Aug. 20, Mlynar said, although he added that he disagreed with the decision to invade.

Mlynar is coming to be regarded as critical of Dubcek within the privacy of the party.

But it was not clear whether his speech was aimed at placating the Russians in an effort to get them to withdraw the occupation troops, or amounted to an argument that Dubcek doesn't understand Moscow's thinking and is on another collision course with the Russians.

TIMING SIGNIFICANT

It was considered significant that Mlynar's television speech came 24 hours after cancellation of a hard-hitting pre-taped TV speech by Dubcek. The Dubcek speech, toned down and broadcast several hours later than scheduled, deleted the party leader's statements that the return of press censorship was a backwad step and that anti-Communist forces were at work in other Communist countries besides Czechoslovakia.

Meanwhile, the National Assembly—defiant in the early days of the occupation—formally approved without debate legislation curbing press freedom and banning the establishment of new political parties, both actions demanded by Moscow.

LAGOS (Reuters) — The Nigerian army today tightened its grip on breakaway Biafra with troops advancing on the major airfield of Uli-Ihiala and the refugee centre of Owerri.

Bomb Proves Dud

ISTANBUL (AP)—A manhunt was underway for a mysterious foreigner who delivered a package "believed to contain a bomb" to the Soviet consulate in Istanbul Friday, police reported today. The device did not go off.

Generals, Admiral Purged by Chinese

HONG KONG (AP) — The anti-Communist Hong Kong Times today named 45 Chinese army generals, an admiral and four political commissars which it said have been purged in the last year by Communist party Chairman Mao Tse-tung and Defence Minister Lin Piao.

Heading the list were Marshal Ho Lung and Senior Gen. Lo Jui Ching, two top-ranking men in China's military hierarchy before Mao's Cultural Revolution began.

Both had been previously reported purged by other sources.

Ho Lung was deputy chairman of the national military commission, China's highest military leadership body. Lo Jui Ching was secretary-general of the commission and also chief of the army general staff.

Also listed was Lt.-Gen. Hsiao Yu Yung, chief administrative officer of the commission who, according to previous reports reaching Hong Kong, had been accused of being one of the masterminds behind all an alleged plot to overthrow Mao.

Others on The Times list either held — or, if the report is not true, still may hold important national or regional military posts.

The Chinese language Times said it had compiled the list from information gathered by its own sources inside China.

There was no way to confirm the report in Hong Kong, but if true it would mean that a sizeable segment of China's old-line military leadership had been wiped out.

U.S. SPYING, SAYS SOVIET

MOSCOW (UPI) — Russia said today U.S. planes have penetrated Czechoslovak air space to spy out positions of Soviet troops.

A Sunday supplement to the official Soviet foreign office publication Izvestia linked the U.S. and West Germany in espionage attempts along the Czechoslovakian frontier.

The illustrated supplement, Nedelya, printed what it called dispatches from correspondents in Czechoslozakia who visited the country's border with West Germany.

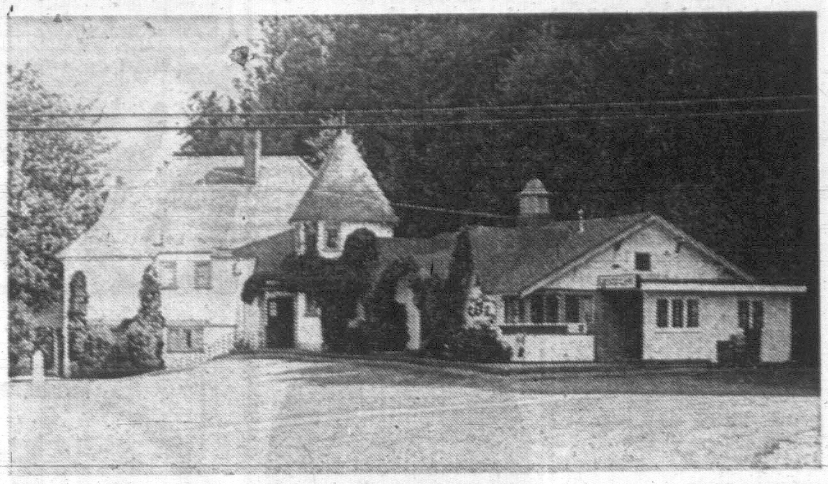
They Went to the Outside Inn In Victoria's Beerless Years

By Ed Gould

During a discussion of the sinking of the Cunard liner Lusitania, on May 7, 1915, an unfortunate remark was made in the beer parlor of the Kaiserhauf Hotel on Blanshard Street.

As a result, the interior of the German-owned hotel was left a shambles as patrons threw furniture into the street. A piano, keys spewing, was hurled through a window.



Two popular outside inns are the Sooke River Hotel (above) and the Six-Mile House at Parson's Bridge on the old Island Highway (right). Sooke pub used to be the stables and grooms' quarters for the old Belvedere Hotel. The Six-Mile House, in true Tudor style, was built in 1855.

The Kaiserhauf never served any more beer. Not even after it re-opened as The Cecil. Today—renamed The Kent Apartment Hotel—it's a very sedate residence for elderly Victorians.

More than any other incident, the Kaiserhauf riot was symbolic of the way Victoria crashed into the dreariest period of its existence. Beer licences were banned from then until 1954.

Although Victoria was not entirely dry (Government liquor stores were open until 8 p.m. each evening), in order to wet nis chops with foam and ferment, a resident had to cross the border into Esquimalt.

●

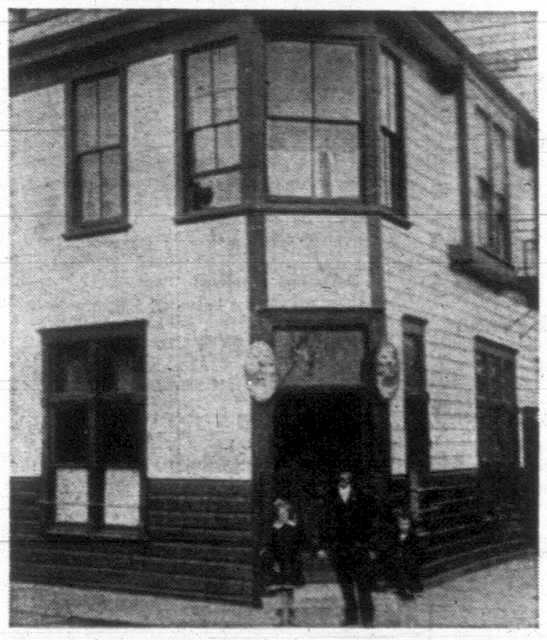
Three pubs quickly prospered from their increased patronage: Halfway House, The Coach and Horses, and The Esquimalt Hotel.

Beer drinkers who were often also straphangers could take the number four streetcar and hit all three and then make a dash back to the Halfway for a final swig on the way home.

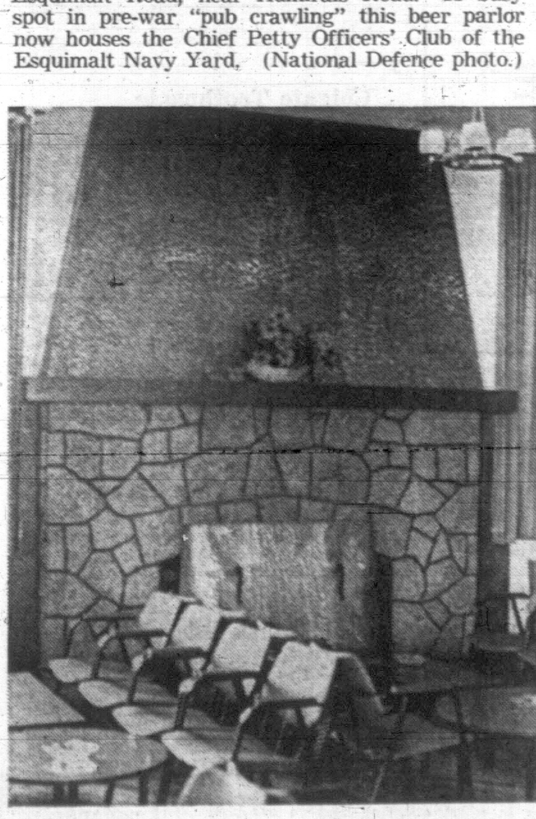
The last streetcar left outside The Esquimalt (also called End House) at 11:45 p.m. which worked out fine since the pub closed at 11:30. Anyone waiting until the last dreg was drunk ended up on the last car which only went as far as the B.C. Electric carbarns at Pembroke and Government.

●

Regular Victoria patrons of the Esquimalt pubs were soon joined by tourists from the CPR steamship tours who dumped their passengers pitilessly on Victoria's arid shores. Many had to stand in line for cabs to make the dash for the perimeter pubs.



A place of the past is the Coach and Horses on Esquimalt Road, near Admirals Road. A busy spot in pre-war "pub crawling" this beer parlor now houses the Chief Petty Officers' Club of the Esquimalt Navy Yard. (National Defence photo.)



Some of the old-time features still remain in the Coach and Horses Inn, including this attractive fireplace. Building was recently refurbished by Bob Benson, whose father built the original.

"A hell of a good time could be had for 60 or 70 cents in those days," recalls Archie McBride, manager of Pacific Brewery Warehousing, through which property the number four used to veer.

Those noisy, swaying, beery-breathed crowds and the streetcars they rode in have now passed from the scene and the pubs have either disappeared or altered radically.

●

Halfway House burned down and has been replaced; The Coach and Horses is now the Chief Petty Officers' Mess; and The Esquimalt Hotel—which was eventually enveloped by the naval yard—has been torn down.

However, there are still Outside Inns of charm and in this article I would like to take the reader for a tour of some of them.

Standing almost to the sidewalk, the former Halfway House was an imposing structure. It did a roaring trade when sailors from the dry San Francisco area docked their ships at the Outer Wharf and ran panting into the beverage room.

George "Joker" Paton held forth here until he left to operate the British Public Schools Club in April, 1936.

●

The new Halfway was built in 1941 and is now operated by George Laak. The spacious Tudor-style pub features a live girl who fashions hot beef sandwiches on French bread inside a glassed-in rotisserie from 11:45 to 10:30 daily.

An unfeatured attraction at the 856 Esquimalt Road location is the ladies' powder room, claimed to be the fanciest in the country.

This is not first-hand information but was conveyed to me by a member of the opposite sex who intimated it "was worth the trip just to see it!"

The second stop along our tour route is The Coach and Horses which the navy took over during the war, using it for emergency housing and later a home for WRENs.

Little remains of the former building except an attractive fireplace recently rebuilt by Bob Benson. It dominates the northwest wall upstairs.

By asking permission of Chief R. E. Utley you can get a look at the old basement storage room which now houses a games room and bar dubbed The Coach N' Forces.

The fireplace in the Tudor House Hotel at the corner of Admirals Road and Esquimalt was filled with broken glasses after they were raised in salute to the allies at the end of World War II.

It only happens once at the end of a World War and owner-host Mickey Pearce is not looking forward to another one.

THE HALFWAY HOUSE

New Halfway House features hot beef on French bread and the fanciest of ladies' powder rooms.

●

The Tudor House building used to be a sailor's home and, according to Mickey, it's still a sailor's home. With its 350 seats, it's a large navy house. When the fleet is in the circular racks around the pillars are filled to overflowing with gob's headgear.

That's not all that will be full if George Craig, 29 years at the same tap, has anything to say about it.

The mens' side of The Tudor House is a classic example of what can be done with a dirty, old Canadian beer parlor. With its gold and brown wallpaper, dark blue carpet and deep, comfortable leatherette chairs and lounges, it is even more tastefully appointed than the ladies' side.

●

The feature wall on the ladies' side is covered by a giant Viking ship, carved by a Vancouver man. It took him two years to do, says Mickey.

Elsewhere, bronze shields and swords adorn the walls and these look so authentic it's surprising they haven't been taken up in anger. But Mickey runs a tight ship with a fast lip for his shipmates.

One of the first places the navy rings during emergency recall is the Tudor House. "Then all these gobs head for the bush," Mickey says. "Especially if it's a Friday night. Hell, I was here three years before I found out the dockyard was that way!"

The Tudor advertises De luxe navy Burgers for $1. There's a jukebox, very low key, but no games. Mickey supplies much of the entertainment for his guests.

●

An in-coming rating mentions his leg is in a cast. "What did you do? Drop a pencil on it? That should be good for at least a month's leave."

He says to a tableful of laughing seamen: "If they get a pain anywhere they put a cast on it. You see those gravel trucks going by here that look like they're carrying lime for the gardens? It's plaster of Paris going to Naden."

After leaving The Tudor House, drive down Admirals Road out to Craigflower and left turn into View Royal. You will notice on your left as you drive up the hill in the 200-block Old Island Highway a building that looks just like an old British pub.

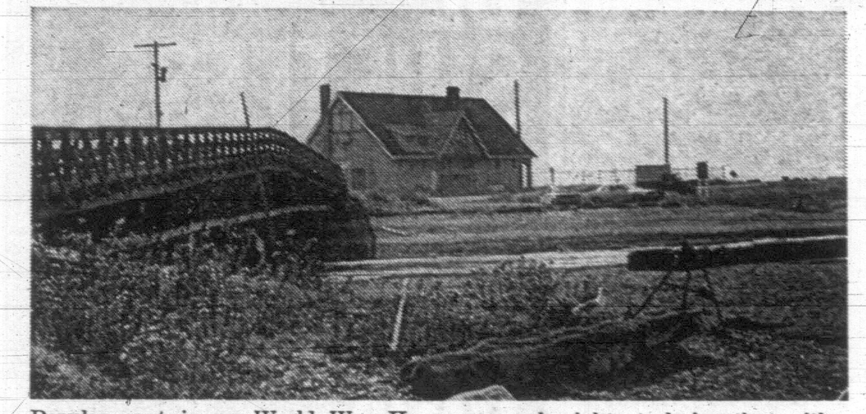
●

This is Four Mile House, a coach house which never got a beer licence. It's now cut up into apartments.

Farther along the same route is Six Mile House at Parson's Bridge. It was built by a man of that name and was formally opened for business on February 16, 1855 with what was described as a "grand spree" in the diary of Robert Melrose, a Craigflower pioneer.

The front part of the building is original. The Six Mile House is now run and owned by Red and Archie McMillan, well-known Victoria-area sports figures.

Both were in the publishing business before they became publicans: Archie was a stereotyper for Victoria Press for 15 years and Red worked for 12 years as a bookbinder for The Queen's Printer.



Popular spot in pre-World War II days was The Dugout at Esquimalt Lagoon on Coburg Peninsula, between Colwood and Metchosin. It was here imbibers were sent on their way each night at closing time with the pleading voice of the bartender echoing in their ears: "Time, gentlemen, please. It is not my wish but an act of Parliament."

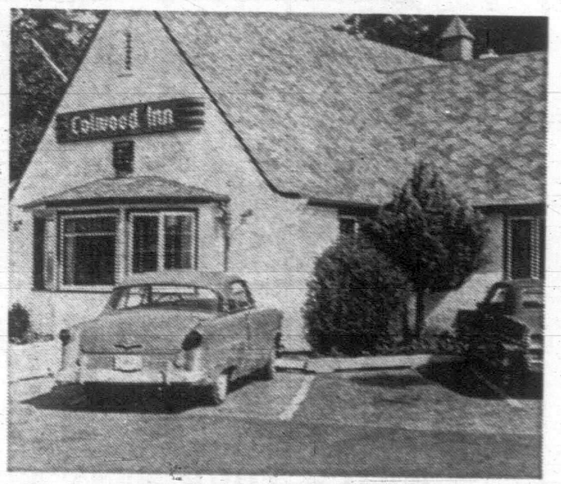
The B.C. Lions, a sometime football club, have been known to roar in here after working out at nearby Royal Roads and "put back on all the pounds they took off that day," says Red.

●

There's no beer available at the next stop. It's strictly historical and scenic. Turn left at the entrance to Belmont Park until you come to an old wooden bridge. The Dugout Hotel is on the left.

This is not the original — it burned down — and was only run as a pub for a short while during the Second World War. Built of logs, the Dugout (sometimes called The Land's End) had a beautiful sea view and interior lights fashioned like little beer barrels.

If you remember to bring a bucket and shovel there's excellent clamming here along Lagoon Road on the Coburg Peninsula. After a few twists and turns you'll find yourself on Metchosin Road which leads back to Sooke Road.



Now on a busy three-way intersection in the heart of the Colwood shopping district where the old Island Highway gets together with the road to Sooke and Metchosin, the Colwood Inn once was considered to be quite remote.

Turn left and continue along to our next pub stop: The Royal Ensign. Sometimes called 17 Mile House, this charming inn was originally christened The British Ensign.

Inside you'll discover a colorful Dutch tile floor made and installed by Robert Marsh, a Victoria craftsman who did the tile work in Christ Church Cathedral and the Parliament Buildings and Legislative Museum.

●

The pub was built by Mr. L. Cutler from whip-sawn lumber and handcut nails in the mid-1800s. The present owner will oblige with stories of its early days.

A recent American patron confessed to a liking for the winding country road leading to Sooke. "In the States we'd advertise it as a tourist attraction," he said.

It's unlikely such praise was heaped on the first Sooke to Metchosin road built in 1854 by Indian laborers who were paid $8 a month. The first bridge over the Sooke River was completed in 1872. It was 339 feet long and took 55,000 feet of lumber.

●

That original bridge has long since disappeared but it is across the present bridge that we make our next stop, The Sooke River Hotel.

Owned and operated by Bill Rittaler and son Jim, this again is an original building, although it was not constructed as a public house but stables for the old Belvedere Hotel.

Side by side are portals of the old 17-Mile House now known as the Royal Ensign . . . ladies and escorts to the left and males by themselves to the right. Visitors here think it is perhaps the most quaint of the old-time inns.

—Victorians used to drive out in coaches for the weekend to stay at the Belvedere. The Prince of Wales spent two weeks there while hunting around Sooke. Unfortunately the Belvedere — which used to sit above the present Sooke River Hotel — burned down in the Thirties.

If you enter the hotel through the mens' entrance you are in the former tack-room and grooms' quarters while the ladies' side was where the horses were kept. Incidentally, there's excellent food available through the door into the licensed Castle Cafe.

●

But time now to swing back toward Victoria and our next stop: The Colwood Inn.

It was here that Teddy Haven installed a glass tube to carry beer from the barrel in the basement to the upstairs bar tap. This amazing feat of beer on the run was watched with fascination by hundreds of imbibers daily. This, in a day when most beer was drawn straight from the keg in rubber tubing.

The present Colwood Inn was built closer to the highway and was replaced about 40 years ago with the present structure now run by dapper Jimmy Russell.

●

Another Tudor design, it even has authentic leaded panes which, according to Russell, are "the very devil to clean and almost impossible to fix if broken."

Most patrons of the Colwood Inn are satisfied to quaff a few and watch the traffic build up outside at the intersection. But Joe Crossfield once let loose a deodorized skunk to enliven the ladies' side.

The drive to the next public house starts by finding the exit from the parking lot. Proceed with the green light straight along Goldstream Road to the Trans-Canada Highway and left at the sign to the Goldstream Inn.

This pub sits on the same property as one also run by Ma Miller. Customers were encouraged to call for service by ringing little bells set on each table. Ma would then enter from her garden patch at the rear and draw the beer.

●

The present Inn is about 35 years old. It does mostly local trade because of its secluded location but occasionally a camper from the nearby Goldstream Park campsite will take a half dozen back to the tent.

The proprietor, "Buzz" Williams will draw your attention to the attractive fieldstone fireplace and its giant beer steins.

The scenery along the way will clear your head for our final stop, at the Gorge Hotel. Follow the Trans-Canada towards Victoria until you come to Burnside Avenue, then turn right down Tillicum across the Gorge Bridge.

A Mrs. Marshall once ran a saloon out of an old house on this site. The present building and business was established by the three Maggiora brothers: John, Peter and Con. Then along came Joe Politano who worked himself up from gardener in 1937 to managing director in 1951.

His partners are Arthur Mawer and son John.

The Gorgeous Gorge features the only reversible falls in the world outside of the Bay of Funday, claims Mr. Politano.

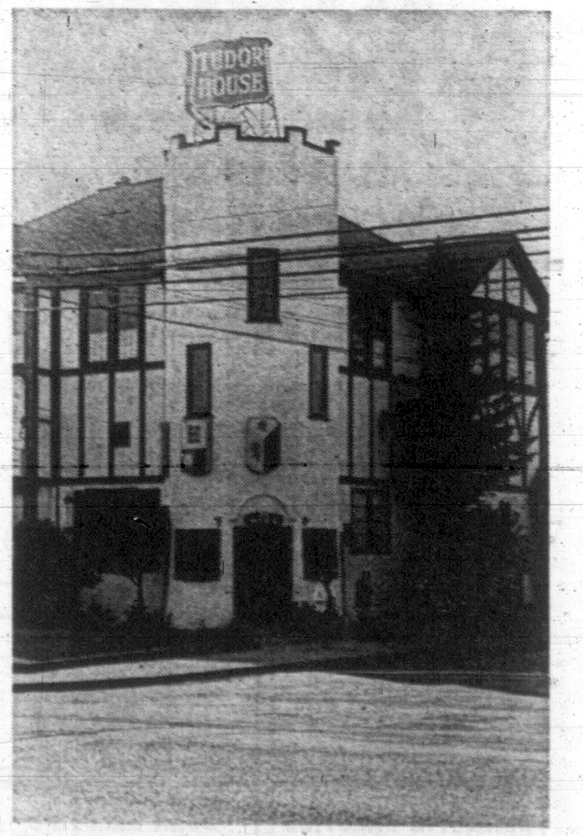
●

This phenomena of water rushing up the higher ground behind the Gorge Bridge can be seen through the windows on the ladies' side.

When the tide goes out the water boils down and throws up a foam like a head on beer. Speedboats cruise under the bridge and on warm spring days OAPs can be seen fishing under the weeping willows.

Mr. Politano will tell the story of the motorman on the Number 5 streetcar who rushed in for a quick one and got stuck up and robbed. Which says something for leaving the switch during working hours.

The Gorge Hotel is a jolly spot to terminate this tour of the Outside Inns. The jolliness here is kept at a manageable level by four of the largest waiters ever collected in one public house. Their combined weight equals one-half ton? And that's a lot of beer.



Formerly a home for seamen and still a "home" of sorts for sailors is the Tudor House at Esquimalt and Admirals Road, close to navy establishments. (All pictures except original Coach and Horses by Ed Gould.)

Anti-Pollution Plan Claimed For New Marina

Developers of a proposed apartment-marina complex on Shoal Harbor at the tip of Saanich Peninsula say the property owners' association protesting the plan is "ignorant of the facts . . . or misinformed."

In a letter today to the eastern district, North Saanich Property Owners Association, the developers call for "more enlightenment before condemnation."

Earlier the association urged the government to reject an application by Victorian Albert Yuen for a foreshore lease to allow another marina in the basin, also known as Tsehum Harbor, because it would add to pollution.

It is obvious "there is a saturation point in the number of marinas that should be permitted in any one body of water," an association spokesman said.

Mr. Yuen has an option to purchase the five-acre property from Northumbria Investments Ltd., a local firm whose members include Mr. and Mrs. Chet Levar, the property owners, and John Elliott.

Mr. Elliott said the owners' association raised their objections without knowing that the marina was planned within new commercial waterfront and yacht club specifications proposed by the capital region planning commission.

Aim of the specifications is to avoid pollution, he said.

Mrs. Levar said of the association's objection: "When you don't want a bay polluted, you don't work against the developer, you work with him.

"And they have never contacted him."

Mrs. Levar said she and her husband will move from the property where they have lived for 27 years when Mr. Yuen picks up the option for his $1.5 million project. She said Northumbria Investments will have no further interests in the development.

NO OBJECTIONS

An application to Sidney council to rezone the property for the development was made April 19, 1968. Mrs. Levar said no objections were raised. Rezoning was approved July 25.

Maj. D. A. Petrie, owners' association secretary, said the association has no quarrel with the construction of three apartment buildings on the site.

"The harbor is polluted," he said, and the association objects only to the planned marina.

Mrs. Levar said the marina would serve apartment tenants and the general public.

FIRE COSTS AT $692,700

Fire hazards throughout British Columbia forests were reported as low today by the provincial forest service.

Suppression costs totalling $692,700 are estimated for the 1,630 fires reported so far this season, the service said.

"For the corresponding period in 1967, the most expensive fire year on record, 2,987 fires were recorded with costs totalling $5,960,900," the service said.

Site of $4 Million Proposal Near Gordon Head High School

The location for a $4 million townhouse apartment project in Saanich is near Gordon Head High School, it was learned today.

The site, covering 16 acres, is between Gordon Head Road and Larchwood Drive north of the school. The project, which would provide 120 units in the initial $2 million phase, was announced last Tuesday.

The rezoning application will be considered by Saanich officials first before going to the Advisory Planning Commission and council. It is expected to be some time before this process is completed.

New Leader Takes Over Royal Roads

A Royal Roads Military College graduate returned this week as commandant of his former school.

Colonel K. E. Lewis, CD, took over command of the armed forces college from his predecessor, Colonel D. B. Wurtele, who retires after more than 30 years of service.

Col. Lewis, 39, graduated from the school in 1949 to join the Royal Canadian Air Force. He has flown more than a dozen different kinds of aircraft in his career, including the Starfighter, Mustand, Vampire and Sabre.

He has had three tours of duty in Europe: as flight commander with 4 Wing Germany in 1944-55; later with 1 Air Division France; and from 1960-64 as Squadron Commnader of 3 Wing Germany.

WITH AIR CADETS

Col. Lewis later served as air cadets liaison officer at Forces Headquarters in Ottawa and from August 1966 to August 1968 with 3 Wing Germany again.

Col. Wurtele, who retires to Ottawa with his wife and three children, was commandant of the school for three years.

He also had RCAF experience with the experimental and proving establishment and took degrees in aeronautical engineering at the University of Toronto and London University. He served in France for more than four years.

Four amateur photographers from Victoria have a chance at more than $200 in prize-money in the Newspaper National Snapshot contest.

They were overall winners in the Times photographic contest during July and August. Their entries will be sent to the national contest for judging along with entries from the rest of Canada.

Winners from the national contest will go still further to the North American judging for a chance at prizes totalling $50,000.

Photographers topping the entries here were Mrs. G. W. Schwab, of 3034 Doncaster Drive; Ivor Alexander, of 1016 Queens Ave.; Henry Szmuniewski, of 3956 Interurban Road, and K. H. Stofer, of 1619 Christmas Ave.

Mrs. Schwab, a clerk at the Veterans' Hospital, had been taking pictures for about 30 years. Her snap of a cat clinging to the branches of a tree-top was considered one of the four best entries by judges Bill Halkett, Times staff photographer, and Mrs. Audrey St. Johnson, theatre critic.

ANOTHER PUSS

Ivor Alexander, a 26-year-old student, caught a kitten peeking out of a briefcase while crouching inside it. He had only been taking pictures for about six months before he entered the contest.

Provincial government employee Henry Szmuniewski, 52, called upon more than 35 years' experience at photography to take his winning shot of wild oats and logs on a beach. He always carried his camera with him and took the picture while on an early-morning fishing trip.

A snap showing a small boy peeking mischeivously through chubby fingers earned a place in the national contest for Post Office public relations officer Ken Stofer. Aged 48, he had been taking pictures for about 15 years.

Each of the four finalists will now have a chance to win a $200 best-of-show prize and one of seven $100 Canadian special merit awards.

Winning snapshots from the Canadian contest then go on to the North American judging, which offers expense-paid trips to South America, Mexico, Hawaii and the West Indies.

Pat Bay Freeway Out For at Least Five Years

IT WILL BE OVER and under as you travel south on the Pat Bay Highway at Royal Oak. Ramp will be built over Royal Oak Avenue-West Saanich Road link shown here, and cross traffic will pass underneath. And a short distance further south a second ramp will be built over the highway, taking traffic from Quadra Street to West Saanich Road spur. (Times Photo)

Highway Widening Details Announced

By JOHN MIKA

Highways Minister Wesley Black Friday afternoon released details of a $5 million plan to widen Patricia Bay Highway's existing route by the spring of 1970 with vehement assurances it will only "be an interim measure" and not kill intentions to build a new turnpike.

"I want to be 1,000 per cent honest with the people we're dealing with — that is the press and John Q Public," he said.

"The key word in this is that it is purely an interim measure.

"I want to give people the assurance that we will continue to study a new route and this is an interim measure only but we have to move quickly to meet the congestion now."

Mr. Black said the widening program—will which include elevated ramps at Quadra and West Saanich Road junctions but not at Weiler Road as requested by Sidney — should relieve pressure on the present route "for at least five years."

He said a completely new highway would still be worth building even after the new investment in the existing road because traffic volumes are rising about 10 per cent annually.

Wide Division Eventually

With two roads provided eventually, each route could be made into a one-way artery with the consequent loop divided by a wide stretch of countryside, he suggested.

Mr. Black added that he "had no choice" but to order the widening instead of the new highway now because traffic volumes have reached up to 22,000 vehicles a day on stretches of the present road and a crash-program was needed.

He said a new route would have required at least six months just to buy right-of-way before construction could begin so it was impracticable because of the resulting delay.

Work will begin on some parts of the widening within a few days but all the work likely won't be finished until about the spring of 1970.

The project has been divided into five sections with some of the design work still to be done.

The first section involves the junction of the Trans-Canada Highway and Douglas up to Carey Road.

Mr. Black said the department has several plans it is considering for "siphoning off" some of the Trans-Canada traffic before it reaches Douglas and also aligning the Pat Bay Highway entrance better in relation to urban traffic.

But he said he was not ready — and may not be until next spring — to make any announcements about the first section.

Day Labor for Inner Stretch

The second section, running about 1¾ miles from Carey Road to Chesterlea subdivision (south of the golf driving range on the Pat Bay Highway) will be widened to four lanes by the highways department itself using day labor.

The third section, from Chesterlea to Viewmont Road opposite Royal Oak Cemetery, will be put to a tender call for bids by contractors "in about six to eight weeks", Mr. Black said.

This 1½-mile section will be widened to four lanes by the contractor with two overhead ramps to be built to eliminate Royal Oak and Quadra cross traffic. The first ramp will span the highway carrying Quadra Street over to the high west side of the main road where a short connecting stretch, parallelling the highway, will be built to West Saanich Road.

The second ramp will carry the highway itself over the natural gully formed by West Saanich-Royal Oak roads.

A departmental engineer said ramps will take advantage of the present contours so that the sudden rise of Quadra before its junction with the highway will be continued into an over pass while highway traffic would continue on a horizontal plane over West Saanich-Royal Oak instead of dipping down into the gully.

Mr. Black said there would be interconnection provided at the ramps so traffic could move from the local roads onto the highway and back but design work has not been completed so no artist sketches are available to illustrate the plan.

The fourth highway section will be the five-mile stretch between Viewmont Road in Saanich and Telegraph Road in Central Saanich. It also will be done by highway department day labor crews.

Two Southbound Lanes

This work will add one complete lane to the existing stretches of alternate two and three lanes resulting in two continuous southbound lanes to handle the city-bound ferry traffic which has caused traffic problems because of its "platooning" pattern.

The present stretches of one lane alternated with two will remain and these will be used for northbound traffic.

The fifth highway section, totalling 6.8 miles, will stretch from Telegraph Road to Ardwell Road, linking up with the Ardwell Road-Swartz Bay stretch which was widened to four lanes two years ago.

This section also will be put to tender in about two months for complete widening to four lanes.

Asked if this stretch would include the over-pass requested by Sidney council to eliminate hazards for school children and cars trying to cross the highway at Weiler Road, Mr. Black said:

"At the moment the answer is no — but, remember this proect is an interim measure."

Mr. Black said tbe two day-labor stretches would be started immediately and likely would be completed before next summer.

The contract stretches probably would be completed about the end of next year or the spring of 1970.

Throughout the construction period, traffic will continue to use the present highway as widening would begin with grading then paving of existing shoulders.

Mr. Black said some temporary slowing down with the use of flag-men could occur occasionally as the work proceeds but detouring of traffic onto side roads is not contemplated.

IT'S GOOD NEWS SAY AREA MAYORS

The mayors of three municipalities today welcomed news of the provincial government's widening of Patricia Bay Highway to four lanes.

"If the road is going to be improved this is good news for Saanich because we are so dependent on it and it has such an effect on our development," said Saanich Mayor Hugh Curtis.

"We would expect the highways department to make it clear that the ultimate freeway route is fixed so planning can continue. I am particularly happy about the Quadra-Royal Oak changes because this is a very serious problem stretch."

While he wished it was the final freeway with a park-way development, "we recognize that the dollars are not as plentiful as the need."

He pointed out that Saanich will soon start work on improvements to Quadra just north of McKenzie Avenue and it was hoped to "take another bite" next year depending on secondary highway grants.

Victoria Mayor Hugh Stephen welcomed the news "very much indeed" because Pat Bay has become dangerous.

He would have liked to see a join-up with the Rose-Blanshard reconstruction which will take this road, as a divided highway, from Tolmie to Pandora.

Central Saanich Mayor Gordon Lee said his municipality, "welcomes any improvements."

He said police are constantly on the alert with traffic accidents and the situation is of considerable danger.

"The improvement to Pat Bay will go a long way towards making this a much safer throughway for the future," he said.

Ask The Times

Q. Is there a spectacular meteor shower due within a year? If so, how could one best view it? C.B.

A. According to the Dominion Astrophysical Observatory, there are five spectacular "showers" every year. These occur at the same time each year. Starting from October, the showers are: Orionids, Oct. 20; Leonids, Nov. 16; Geminids, Dec. 13; Quadrantids, Jan. 3; Perseids, Aug. 11. Each of the showers named will produce an hourly meteor rate between 25 and 50, peaking in some cases to as many as 200. Dates given are, in each case, the middle date in a four-day shower period. The naked eye is the best instrument with which to view a shower. Ocular aids—binoculars, telescopes—are of little use since the entire sky must be watched.

Eagle Eye Needed to Keep Heritage at Home As Totem Pole Pirates Seek Wooden Gold

By JOHN SLINGER

For art dealers and private collectors, particuarly in the United States and abroad, authentic, primitive Canadian-Indian totem poles mean big money.

But getting the poles and other carved relics is strictly a hook-or-by-crook proposition.

Without written consent from the Indian affairs minister, no one can legally get hold of so much as a sliver from a reserve.

Nevertheless, totem poles, carved grave posts and other bits of bric-a-brac do skitter mysteriously across our borders to show up in the homes of art collectors.

"You always hear myths of American yachts heading south with totem poles stacked on their decks," said Wilson Duff, a UBC anthropologist.

A magistrate in the Queen Charlotte Islands dismissed charges against three Americans Wednesday after RCMP confiscated a number of ancient Haida carvings from a chartered boat.

Throughout the province, professional and amateur archaeologists and anthropologists, interviewed by telephone, expressed surprise that the charges were dismissed.

They were, however, pleased the baby was not thrown out with the bath-water.

Magistrate Jack Fraser of Sandspit, after dismissing the charges on grounds of intent, ordered the artificats turned over to the chief and council of Skidegate village to be returned to their original site or sent to the National Museum in Ottawa.

●

Don Abott, a provincial museum anthropologist in Victoria, said preservable poles and mortuary markers historically significant to B.C. can be numberd only in the dozens.

"They are definitely limited," he said.

Polly Sargent of Hazelton, president of the Skeena Totem Pole Restoration Society, said valuable pieces have been stolen from villages while preservation work was going on.

In nine years, the society has spent some $20,000 to preserve about 30 poles at two Skeena villages. Another 30 in three other villages remain to be done.

Mrs. Sargent said reports of poles being carried off have come to her twice, but too late.

●

In one instance the culprits waved a bill of sale from an Indian band member under the noses of the authorities then left in a cloud of dust before it could be impressed upon the authorities that an Indian band member can't sell a reserve totem pole, she said.

Section 90 of the Indian Act also prohibits sale or removal from the reserve of grave houses, grave poles, carved house posts and painted or carved rocks.

The prohibition "does not apply to chattels . . . that are manufactured for sale by Indians."

Hence, examples of carved Indian art offered for sale as "authentic relics" can generally be considered suspect.

Uvic's Dr. Donald H. Mitchell, a member of the provincial archaeological sites advisory board, said, "we all want to see stronger measures for protection of these things."

Support was needed to bring better administration and policing of the Act.

Ron Sutherland of Vancouver, B.C. Archaeological Society president, said legislation should be passed to prevent export of any Canadian historic or archaeological object.

Such laws now apply in many European and South American countries, he said, and the society is working to see what might be done in Canada.

●

At the annual meeting of the Native Sons of B.C., the society suggested a resolution be drafted protesting removal of these objects, not just from Canada, but from the province.

Even if they are kept within the borders, there are arguments whether the carvings should be preserved in museums or left in their native settings.

Hillary Stewart, a society member from Vancouver, spent June travelling through the Queen Charlottes, and said most of the "salvageable poles" have already been taken to museums.

Miss Stewart said the remnants are "still very beautiful standing there, even in their decay." They should be left alone for anyone who troubles to go and see them.

"They just lose their beauty in a museum."

●

Prevention of decay is the main reason carvings are placed in the controlled environment of museums.

In fact, Dr. Duff said the problem of illegal removal "has almost been overcome by the ravages of time."

Totems left, mostly in abandoned villages, have fallen over, broken and begun to rot.

The last major collection in the province was a number of years ago, but new techniques and chemicals have made it possible to keep carvings once thought lost.

●

Discussions now are going on between the province, UBC, the Vancouver Centennial Museum and the Indian Affairs Branch that might lead to a new collection effort in 1969, Dr. Duff said.

In any event, consensus is that something must be done to regulate collection and preservation and to keep private marketeers out.

R. A. Cragg, factor of the Kamloops museum, said museums must act as "watchdogs" and border officials should be primed to notify museums whenever objects of archaeological interest cross.

Usually, when outsiders are digging in B.C. "all we get to see are the holes," he said.

DECAYING TOTEM POLES, almost disappearing into the forest, stand in abandoned Haida village on Anthony Island in the Queen Charlottes. To protect the poles, which were not on reserve lands and so open to plunderers, Anthony Island was made into a provincial park. New preservation methods might enable provincial anthropologists to prevent further deterioration of these and other poles scattered through the area.
